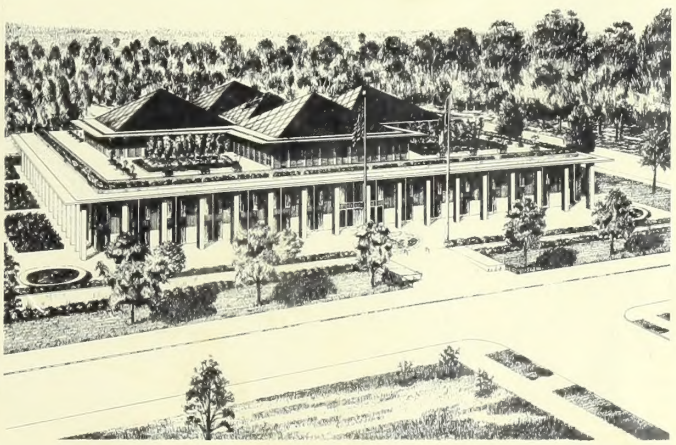
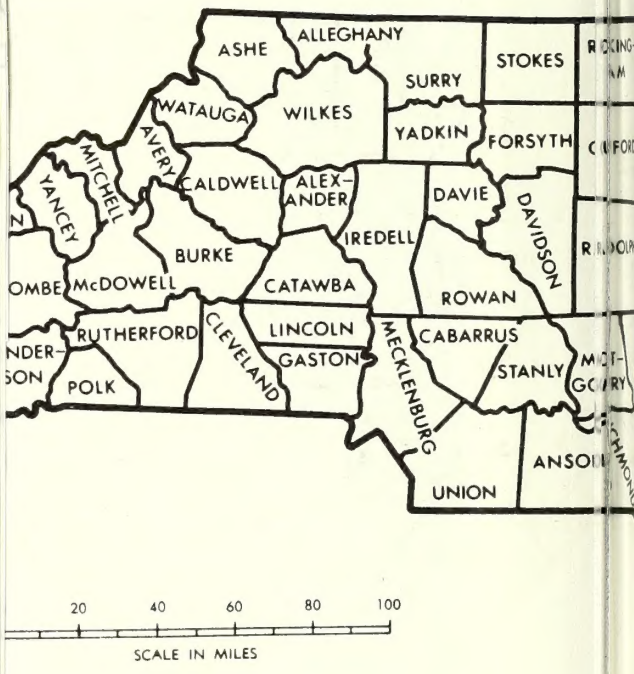
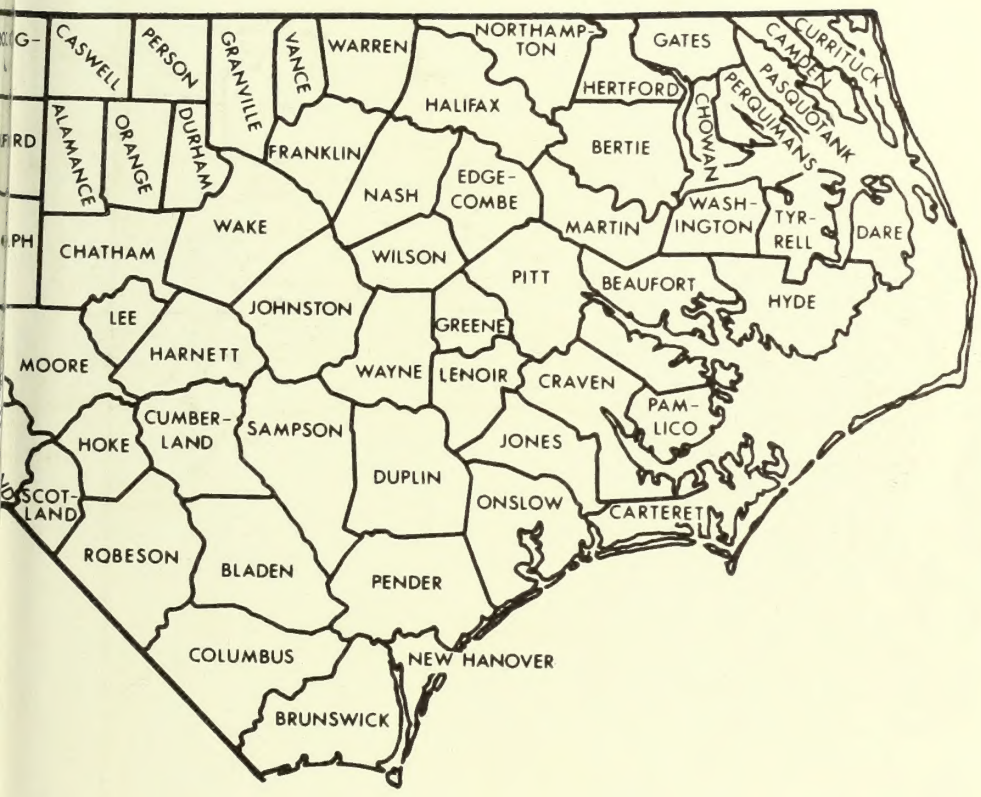
NORTH CAROLINA GOVERNMENT



1585-1979

A NARRATIVE AND STATISTICAL HISTORY





THE COVER

The pen and ink drawings on the cover are the work of Jerry Miller, a residential Home Designer whose artistic talents and interest in North Carolina history have resulted in a large number of pen and ink drawings of North Carolina landmarks. Of the four drawings on the cover, three are easily recognized as Tyron's Palace in New Bern, and The Capitol and Legislative Building in Raleigh. The fourth drawing (upper left) is the Newbold-White House near Hertford. It is the oldest standing house in North Carolina having been built at some time prior to 1685. More importantly, it was used as one of the earliest meeting places of the colonial general assembly, the governors council and many of the colonial courts.

The four pictures together represent not only the buildings from which colonial, and later state, government operated, but the change in government as time passed. The Newbold-White House was typical of the transient pattern of colonial government until the 1770's. Then in 1771, Governor Tryon built his famous "Palace" which served as both a residence and the seat of government. Unfortunately, the structure burned in 1798, and early state government moved from one town to another until 1792 when Raleigh became the State Capitol. Following the burning of the first "State House" in 1831, a new structure was built. The Capital served as the center of governmental operations for all three branches of government until 1963 when the new legislative building was ready for use.

As government has changed, so have the structures from which government operates, but we in North Carolina can be proud of our heritage and our efforts to preserve our past.

FOREWORD

As Secretary of State of North Carolina, I receive frequent requests for information about our State which can be obtained only by reference to many different sources. For this reason we have attempted from time to time to compile the information for which there was the greatest demand. The starting point for such efforts has been A Manual of North Carolina, published in 1913 by the North Carolina Historical Commission. This highly regarded reference, popularly known as the 1913 Manual, was the work of Dr. R. D. W. Connor, Secretary of the Commission. A distinguished historian, Dr. Connor also served his State and Nation as Kenan Professor of History at the University of North Carolina, the first Archivist of the United States, and Craig Professor of Jurisprudence and History at the University.

The closely guarded copy of the 1913 Manual which I keep in my desk is filled with annotations correcting errors or adding information revealed by more recent research. This situation and the periodic attempts by my staff to update limited portions gave birth to a personal dream to revise and update the 1913 Manual. I shared this dream with the Advisory Budget Commission and the 1971 General Assembly. As a result, the appropriation that year for the Department of the Secretary of State included funds to hire a staff and begin the necessary research. On the basis of the progress accomplished during the 1971-73 biennium, the 1973 General Assembly appropriated the funds needed to complete and publish the finished work. The encouragement offered by individual members and the action taken by the General Assembly during this period is greatly appreciated. The demand for the first edition was so great that our supply was exhausted in short order and plans were made to update the volume and to print additional copies.

I am pleased to present this publication to the people of the State of North Carolina with the hope that it will occupy a place of useful service for many years to come.

INTRODUCTION

For over sixty years, the 1913 edition of A Manual of North Carolina provided government officials, historians, the news media and the general public with a valuable one-volume source of historical and statistical material on North Carolina and on North Carolinians who served the governments of their colony, their State and their Nation. Most of the material found in that volume was regularly updated through the biennially published North Carolina Manual; nevertheless, there was a desire on the part of many to see the 1913 Manual updated. This desire became a reality in 1971 as research was begun under funds appropriated by the General Assembly. As the original project progressed, we realized that merely updating the 1913 Manual was not sufficient. New historical findings filled many gaps which previously existed. It was decided to completely revise, as well as update, the 1913 Manual. Although the general format of the new volume roughly followed that of the 1913 book, there were several differences—primarily in the form of alterations and additions which were included to provide a book containing more than just statistical information. Among the new features were special introductory narratives and extensive use of footnotes—not only to cite sources, but also to explain certain events and happenings which needed clarification. Extensive use was made of maps, charts, illustrations, and photographs to supplement the statistical material. Special statistical data such as population trends and election returns were incorporated into the book to enhance its content. Short county development narratives and a completely new section on the constitutional development of North Carolina were added.

During our initial effort, extensive research was done in original records with emphasis placed on records in the State Archives of North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee. Records located in the National Archives in Washington, D.C. and in the Federal Records Center in East Point, Georgia were used to obtain material on North Carolinians who served the Federal government in various capacities. The original journals of the North Carolina State House and Senate located in the Department of the Secretary of State in Raleigh were the most valuable single set of records used, especially for the period 1776 through 1868. It was during this period that the North Carolina General Assembly wielded its greatest power. It exercised almost total control over State government, for not only did this body pass all laws governing the State, but it also elected all statewide officers from judges to the governor. Two special collections of private papers and records—the North Carolina Collection and the Southern Historical Collection in the Wilson Library at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill—were also used.

One particular problem developed while working with the State House and Senate Journals, and with other records as well—the spelling of the names. The practice of "phonic spelling" was extensive during the early periods of North Carolina history, especially with regards to the members of the general assembly. The way an individual's name was spelled might vary from one general assembly to the next. For instance, Caleb Phifer's name might be spelled "Fifer" in one journal and "Phiffer" in another. In the lists found in this volume, the spelling is as it was found in the journal for a given session of the general assembly; however, in the index, entries of all spelling will be found with a reference to the "preferred" spelling.

A second problem was footnoting. Because of the extensive use of footnotes, it became impossible to put them at the bottom of their respective pages; therefore, a separate section was placed at the end of each chapter to group all the footnotes.

I am most thankful to Mrs. Mattie Erma Edwards Parker, former Director of the Colonial Records Project and her successor, Dr. William S. Price, Jr. for their invaluable contribution to the project through their initial groundwork in North Carolina colonial history. During the revision and updating stages of this second volume, Dr. Robert Cain, the current director of the colonial records project, provided extensive help in new material for the colonial period. William S. Powell, a noted authority on North Carolina history was very helpful in correcting genealogical relationships. A very special thanks goes to Mrs. Memory F. Mitchell, Director of Publications for the Division of Archives and History. It was through her supervision the editor learned the importance of historical publications and received the necessary technical training in editorial methods. It was through her initial guidance that the original project got started in the right direction.

The editor and those who have worked to complete the project would like to apologize to the people of North Carolina for any errors which might be found herein. Unfortunately, when dealing with such a magnitude of names and dates, errors will be found and for this we humbly apologize.

It has been a great pleasure and a very rewarding experience to prepare both the original North Carolina Government and this updated edition. It is my deep-felt hope that the information found herein will serve the people of the State of North Carolina for many years to come, and that at some future time, as additional research uncovers new information to fill the gaps that still exist, other efforts will be made to prepare supplemental editions.

Chapter One
COLONIAL GOVERNMENT

THE LORDS PROPRIETORS OF NORTH CAROLINA[1]

Why Carolina was granted to the Proprietors. In June, 1578, when Queen Elizabeth I made a generous grant of New World territory to Sir Humphrey Gilbert, she included the area which has since become North Carolina. In return for the Queen's bountiful gift, Gilbert was to lead an expedition to America to destroy hostile Spanish fishing fleets, take the West Indies from Spain, seize the gold and silver mines in the Spanish colonies, and make Elizabeth "monarch of the seas." On his first trip to America, Gilbert was rebuffed by the Spanish, and he never returned from his second.

His grant was renewed on March 24, 1585, in the name of his half-brother, Walter Raleigh, who was given authority to establish colonies and to govern them. Raleigh financed several expeditions to the New World including those which explored eastern North Carolina late in the sixteenth century. The famous "Lost Colony" at Roanoke Island was Raleigh's attempt to plant a settlement in America.

A charter was granted the Virginia Company of London in 1606 permitting settlements to be made along a rather narrow strip of the Atlantic seaboard. Included was a portion of what is now North Carolina. The first permanent English settlement in America developed at Jamestown, less than fifty miles north of the present-day North Carolina-Virginia state line.

The more adventuresome Virginia colonists lost little time in beginning to explore the countryside around them. In 1609 Captain John Smith sent a soldier and two Indian guides to search for the colonists left at Roanoke Island. Later two other colonists set out on the same mission but without finding any trace of their missing countrymen. William Strachey, secretary of the Virginia colony in 1610 and 1611, recorded he could learn from the Indians about the territory lying to the south. Not until 1622, however, when John Pory, recently secretary, actually visited the region, do we have a Virginian's account of the Albemarle region, as the earliest settled part of North Carolina came to be called.

The Virginia Company's charter was revoked in 1624, and the colony became the property of the crown. On October 30, 1629, King Charles I conveyed to his attorney general, Sir Robert Heath, the region immediately south of Virginia. While Heath held title to Carolina, as it was called the first time, no organized attempts were made to settle it from England. When he finally abandoned any intentions he might have had for colonizing his territory, he assigned his charter to Henry Lord Maltravers who apparently made at least one unsuccessful effort to send over a colony. But where officials in England were failing, private citizens in Virginia were succeeding. About 1648 several Virginians, who had been in Carolina while on an expedition to subdue the Indians, purchased large tracts of land along the Chowan River from the natives.

The first suggestion of a settlement in the Albemarle region is found in a grant made in 1653 to the Rev. Roger Green of Nansemond, Virginia, for ten thousand acres of land for the first hundred persons to settle south of the Chowan River. As a special reward for his own efforts, Greene was to have a thousand acres for himself to be located "next to those persons who have had a former grant."

[1]This section was reprinted, with some editorial modifications, from William S. Powell's The Lords Proprietors of North Carolina, published by the North Carolina Department of Archives and History in Raleigh.

A small, but steady stream of colonists appears to have flowed into this new settlement. A number of persons purchased land from the Indians, and the oldest grant still in existence for land in North Carolina is in the records of Perquimans County bearing the date August 4, 1661.

Such a flourishing and promising settlement did not escape the notice of prominent men in England in spite of their having so recently been in exile or otherwise occupied during the Cromwells' Commonwealth. Now these men were concerned with the reestablishment of the monarchy. Indeed, these events loomed large in the affairs of Carolina, though the new settlers knew little or nothing of them. It was to reward a group of his most faithful followers and supporters that the newly crowned Charles II revoked his father's grant to Sir Robert Heath. After all, Heath had not made good his intentions to settle the country. The King then, in 1663, granted this territory anew to Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England; George Monck, Duke of Albemarle, Master of the King's Horse and Captain-General of all his forces; William, Lord Craven, an old friend of his father's who had zealously and ably supported the royal family; John, Lord Berkeley, who had defended the crown in the rebellion which overthrew Charles I and had joined the royal family in exile; Anthony Ashley Cooper, Chancellor of the Exchequer and afterward the Earl of Shaftesbury; Sir George Carteret, Vice-Chamberlain of the King's household; Sir William Berkeley, governor of Virginia who had induced the colony to adhere to Charles II as their sovereign even while he was in exile; and Sir John Colleton, who had supported the royal cause in Barbados.

This grant of 1663 included the area roughly from the present-day Georgia-Florida boundary northward to the middle of Albemarle Sound and from the Atlantic westward to the "South Seas," some vague place in the east not then fully understood. No Englishman had ever gone very far inland from the Atlantic, and American geography was not clear even to the best European mapmaker.

It did not take long for the eight Lords Proprietors, as they were designated, to discover that the richest jewel of their new domain of Carolina actually was not within their domain at all. The settlements already made in the Albemarle region lay for the most part just a few miles north of the line marking the northern limit of the territory granted to them. In 1665, therefore, the Proprietors used their influence to secure a still larger territory. A second charter was issued with no important differences from the first, save in extending the boundary northward to the modern North Carolina-Virginia line and wouthward into Florida almost to Cape Canaveral.

The charters gave the proprietors the power to plant colonies, to create and fill offices, to erect counties and other administrative subdivisions, and numerous other rights and privileges. While very broad authority was given the Proprietors, the rights of the people were also set forth. They had then and they continued to have—or claimed to have—right on down to the Revolution—the common rights of Englishmen. Among other things, they were guaranteed English personal and property rights, liberty of conscience, and all "liberties, franchises, and privileges" enjoyed by the King's subjects actually resident in England.

With the possible exceptions of Berkeley in Virginia and Colleton who had spent sometime in Barbados, the Proprietors surely had slight understanding of the colonial territory over which they held such power. It may be that by sheer numbers—eight Proprietors—the problems were magnified. At any rate, there was much administrative confusion in Carolina for a long as the Lords Proprietors remained in charge.

An unsuccessful effort was made as early as 1686 to transfer the colony to the crown. Officials and agents in England for the next forty years agitated for royal control of all proprietary colonies in America. The Proprietors were accused of failing to enforce certain English laws designed to keep the colonies subordinated to the mother country and of allowing laws to be passed in the colonies which were in conflict with English laws. Piracy and smuggling flourished, it was said. Manufacturing was flourishing to compete with English industry, and American defenses were neglected. A dark picture indeed was painted of the Proprietors; so in January, 1728, seven of them drew up an offer to surrender their interests in Carolina. An agreement was reached that year by which all save Carteret sold out to the crown. In 1729, North Carolina became a royal colony.

Descent of the title to Carolina. Each of the eight Lords Proprietors was an able and mature statesman whose opinion was often sought in the highest councils of the realm. Six of them were in their mid-fifties, while Anthony Ashley Cooper, the youngest was forty-two. All were men of wealth and property and each had managed to improve his station in life. Within three years after the Carolina charter was granted there were changes in the membership of the proprietary, however, and by 1729, when the Carolina charter was surrendered, only three of the shares were still held by the direct descendants of the original eight Proprietors, During the sixty-six years of proprietary control nearly fifty different persons served as Proprietors or were entitled to do so. For long periods several of the shares were in dispute resulting in great confusion as to which individuals were entitled to seats at the proprietary table. There were even several women who owned or claimed to own shares.

Sir John Colleton, the early promoter of the Carolina grant, died in 1666, the first of the original Proprietors to pass frm the scene. He was succeeded by his son, Sir Peter Colleton. When Sir Peter died in 1679, his minor son and heir, Sir John Colleton, acquired the family interest in Carolina and continued to hold it until it was sold to the crown in 1729.

The fate of the Carteret share was quite similar to that of Colleton's. On Sir George's death in 1680 it was inherited by his grandson, George. The younger George died fifteen years later, leaving as heir to his share of Carolina a five year old son, John, Lord Carteret. John, who subsequently became Earl Granville, did not offer to sell his share to the crown. In 1744 the so-called Granville District was laid off along the North Carolina-Virginia line as his one-eighth share of the whole Carolina colony. At his death in 1763 he was succeeded by Robert Carteret, Earl Granville, who still held the family interests in North Carolina at the time of the American Revolution.

The other share remaining in the family of one of the original Proprietors when it was sold in 1729 was that of William, Earl of Craven. He outlived all of the original Proprietors by more than a decade, dying at the age of ninety-one in 1697. A bachelor, Craven's holdings passed into the hands of William, Lord Craven, the great-grandson of his cousin, Sir Robert Craven. Upon the death of the second William, Lord Craven, in 1711, his interest in Carolina was inherited by his son, also named William, who sold it to the crown in 1729.

The descent of the five remaining shares is much more involved. When George Monck, Duke of Albemarle, died in 1670, he left his interest to his son, Christopher, second Duke of Albemarle, who died childless in 1688. In 1694, after a lengthy legal battle to determine the heir of Monck, the estate was awarded to John Grenville, Earl of Bath and Baron Granville. When the Earl died in 1701, he was succeeded by his second son, John Granville who was created Baron Granville of Potheridge in 1703. Lord Granville died in 1707 and was survived only by his wife, Rebecca, daughter of Sir Josiah Child and the widow of the eldest son of the Duke of Beaufort. Lady Granville had had one son, Henry, by her first marriage. This son had succeeded to the Beaufort dukedom upon the death of his grandfather. After the death of her second husband, Lady Granville transferred the share in Carolina acquired from him to this son, Henry Somerset, Duke of Beaufort. He held it until his death in 1714. It was then left in trust for his two young sons, Henry and Charles Noel Somerset, who became in turn the third and fourth dukes of Beaufort. When the charter was surrendered, the Albemarle share was transferred to the crown in the names of these two brothers who held it jointly.

Although the Albemarle share did not remain in the Monck or even in the related Grenville family, it was never sold. The original shares of Cooper, the two Berkeleys, and Hyde, however, passed by sale through a number of hands.

Cooper's share was held by the original Proprietor until his death in 1683 when it passed to his only son, Anthony. At the latter's death in 1699 it was inherited by his eldest son, Anthony, but a younger son, Maurice Ashley, represented him in Carolina affairs. At Anthony's death in 1713 Maurice acquired the share which he held until 1725 when he sold it to Sir John Tyrrell. In 1727 Tyrrell disposed of the share, and in 1729 the original Cooper interest was sold to the crown by Archibald Hutcheson, who held it in trust for John Cotton.

The original share of John, Lord Berkeley, was boutht at the time of his death by John Archdale for his minor son, Thomas. When young Thomas Archdale came of age in 1696, despite the objections of his father, he sold his share while in Carolina. It was purchased by Joseph Blake, a prominent South Carolina planter. When Blake died in 1700, it was inherited by his son of the same name who continued to hold it until it was sold to the crown in 1729.

The fate of the two remaining shares, those of Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, and Sir William Berkeley, were to become so confused and involved in lawsuits that it was difficult at times to know just who owned them. Clarendon was exiled from England in 1667. The administration of his share thereupon passed to his son, Henry, Viscount Cornbury. Upon the death of the original Proprietor in 1674, his son, now the second Earl of Clarendon, appears to have acquired the title in his own right. About 1667 he sold his interest in Carolina to Seth Sothel who held it until his death in Carolina early in 1694. Sother's heirs in England took over his title to a share in Carolina and eventually sold it to James Bertie early in the eighteenth century.

Since Sothel left no children, the other Proprietors claimed his share and in September, 1697, gave it to Thomas Amy. Amy in turn gave the share to his son-in-law and daughter, Nicholas and Ann Trott, as a wedding gift on March 21, 1700.

The Carolina interest of Lord Proprietor Sir William Berkeley became even more involved. Upon his death in 1766, his share was inherited by his wife, Lady Frances Berkeley. Four of the Proprietors purchased her share in 1683 through a trustee, the same Thomas Amy noted above. When Amy died in 1704 his son and heir, Thomas Amy, claimed the share as his own, and at the death of the younger Amy three years later his sisters, Elizabeth Moore and Ann Trot, claimed it. Elizabeth transferred her interest in this share to her sister and her husband, the Trotts.

In the meantime, the four Proprietors who had purchased the Berkeley share in 1683 and conveyed it in trust to Amy, sold their title to this share to John Archdale. The new owner acted as a Proprietor until he sold his share to his daughter, Mary, and her husband, John Danson, in October, 1708.

To clear up the question of ownership of this share in Carolina, Nicholas and Ann Trott entered a suit in court against John Danson in the late summer of 1720. Evidence presented in court supported the Danson Claim, and the Trotts agreed to give up their claim if the Dansons paid all expenses involved. Before the matter was settled, John Danson died and Mary Danson fled rather than pay the high amount required to clear her claim. The court then ordered the sale of both the Clarendon and Berkeley shares with which Thomas Amy had been connected. The highest bidder was Hugh Watson, acting as agent for two brothers, Henry and James Bertie. Thus, James Bertie, who had already purchased the Clarendon-Sothel share once, purchased it a second time in order to establish his title. In mid-August, 1726, Watson conveyed the Clarendon share to James and the Berkeley share to Henry Bertie. James, in 1728, conveyed his share in trust to Edward Bertie, Samuel Horsey, Henry Smith, and Alexius Clayton.

Mary Danson returned to London to object to the sale of the Berkeley share, and at the same time of the surrender of the charter in 1729 the matter was so much in doubt that Henry Bertie, Mary Danson, and Elizabeth Moore (assister and heir of Ann Trott) were all made parties to the Deed of Surrender. As a means of cutting through the red tape of tracing the ownership of the various disputed shares, an act of Parliament was secured to confirm the sale of the charter.

COUNTY OF CLARENDON, 1665-1667

[1]The County of Clarendon, which was located at the mouth of the Cape Fear River, was first established in 1663 by a small group of New Englanders; however, this initial colony was soon abandoned. Late in 1664 plans were made for another attempt to settle the region — this time by a group of Barbadian planters. The Lords Proprietors were only too anxious for the area to be settled because of the revenues from land sales and quitrents which would be made. A governor, secretary, and surveyor general were commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, and the colony was settled in the fall of 1665. Early shipping accidents created problems for the settlers since much of their equipment was lost. These early mishaps seemed to forecast the failure of the colony. For two years the colonists built houses, cleared lands, and cultivated crops; but dissatisfaction over quitrents and the rumor of more fertile land to the south, soon started a migration of colonists from the colony. By the summer of 1667 the colony had been abondoned.

[2]Yeamans was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and arrived in the colony during the fall of 1665. Commission to John Yeamans, January 11, 1664/65, William L. Saunders, (editor) The Colonial Records of North Carolina, I, (Raleigh: North Carolina State Printer, 1886), 97-98, hereinafter cited as Saunders, Colonial Records; William S. Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, (Raleigh: North Carolina Department of Archives and History, 1958), xxvii, hereinafter cited as Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle.

[3]Sandford was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and probably arrived in the colony about the same time as Yeamans. Commission to Robert Sandford, November 14, 1664, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 71-72.

[4]Vassall was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and probably arrived in the colony about the same time as Yeamans. Commission to John Vassall, November 24, 1664, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 73.

[5]The actual date of this assembly is not known; but from other records of the period it is presumed to be 1666. "Address of the Gentlemen chosen for an Assembly for the County of Clarendon in Carolina to the Lords Proprietors," Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 145-149.

COLONIAL CHIEF EXECUTIVES

Governors of "Virginia"

[1]Lane was appointed by Sir Walter Raleigh and left Plymouth, England, on April 9, 1585. His expedition reached the New World in July; however a colony was not established until August. Francis L. Hawks, History of North Carolina, Vol. I, (Fayetteville, N. C.: E. J. Hale & Son, 1857), 90-141, hereinafter cited as Hawks, History of North Carolina, I.

[2]White was appointed by Sir Walter Raleigh and departed from Portsmouth, England on April 26, 1587; however, the expedition made stops at Isle of Wight and Plymouth before setting sail for "Virginia" on May 5. They reached the area to be settled on July 22, but Governor White wanted to make some preliminary explorations before allowing the remainder of his party to go ashore. Three days later the colonists left the ships. Food shortages and the absence of other needed supplies forced White to leave for England on August 27, 1587. Delayed in England because of war with Spain, White did not return to North Carolina until 1590. Leaving England on March 20, he arrived in August, but found no evidence of life. On a nearby tree he found the letters C.R.O. and an another CROATAN. White never did find his missing colony and the mystery of the "Lost Colony" is still unsolved. Hawks, History of North Carolina, I, 191-212, 216-225.

Proprietary Governors

[3]Stephens was appointed "commander of the southern plantations" by the council in Virginia. The geographical location of the "southern plantations" is that area in northeastern North Carolina where "overflow" settlers from Virginia lived. William S. Powell suggests that his "presence in Carolina removed any urgency for a prompt appointment" of a governor for Carolina when Berkeley was instructed to do so by the Lords Proprietors and explains why Drummond was not appointed until 1664. Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, xxiii.

[4]Drummond was appointed by William Berkeley, governor of Virginia and one of the Lords Proprietors, at the request of the Lords Proprietors in England. He began serving prior to the delivery of his commission by Peter Carteret in Februnary, 1665. Since other commissions issued to Carteret bear the date December 3, 1664, it is possible that Drummond's commission was also issued on that date. Records show that he was still governor in December, 1666, and that a successor was not appointed until October, 1667. He supposedly moved to Virginia sometime during 1667. Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 62; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 93, 152-153, 162-164; J. R. B. Hathaway (editor), North Carolina Genealogical and Historical Register, Vol. I, 1900 (Merry Hill: ————, 1900), 587, hereinafter cited as Hathaway, Historical Register, I.

[5]Stephens was appointed by the Lords Proprietors to replace Drummond and began serving prior to the delivery of his commission in April, 1668. He died while still in office sometime before March 7, 1670. Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 13-16, 30, 31, 37-38; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, xvi.

[6]Carteret had been commissioned Lieutenant Governor by the Lords Proprietors on December 3, 1664 and was chosen President by the North Carolina Council upon the death of Stephens and was later appointed governor by the Lords Proprietors. He left the colony for England sometime after May 10, 1672. Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, xxviii, xxxi, 39-41, 44-48.

[7]See footnote 6.

[8]Jenkins was commissioned by Carteret to act as deputy governor when he left the colony. The authority of Carteret to make this appointment rested in commissions issued by the Lords Proprietors in October, 1670, but which expired "at the end of four years" according to provisions in the Fundamental Constitutions. Carteret had not returned to the colony when his commission to Jenkins officially expired; however, Jenkins continued to serve. When the general assembly met, following elections in September, 1675, opposition had formed against Jenkins and he was imprisoned on charges of "several misdemeanors". Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 53-54; Mattie Erma Edwards Parker (editor), North Carolina Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, The Colonial Records of North Carolina, (Raleigh, N. C.: North Carolina Department of Archives and History, 1968), xli-xliii, hereinafter cited as Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 259.

[9]Eastchurch was elected speaker of the assembly and assumed the role of governor following the imprisonment of Jenkins. He seems to have remained in this position until the spring of 1676 when he departed the colony for England. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, xli-xliv; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 259.

[10]Eastchurch "apparently left someone else as speaker, for the assembly remained in session". However, Jenkins was forceably released from prison by friends "at some date before late March, 1676." He exercised enough control to hold a court and for a period prior to the departure of Eastchurch for England, both he and Jenkins exercised control over the province. In October, 1676, Jenkins, backed by an armed force, dissolved the assembly and resumed the role of governor. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, xlii-xliii; Lindley S. Butler, "The Governors of Albemarle County, 1663-1689," North Carolina Historical Review, LXVI (July, 1969), 291, 292, hereinafter cited as Butler, "The Governors of Albemarle County, 1663-1689."

[11]See footnote 10.

[12]Eastchurch was commissioned governor by the Lords Proprietors. On his return to the colony he stopped at Nevis in the West Indies and sought the attention of a wealthy lady. Deciding to remain in Nevis for a while, he appointed Thomas Miller deptuy governor until his return (Eastchurch never returned to North Carolina—he died in Virginia while on his way back to the colony). Because he had not officially qualified as governor in Albemarle, Eastchurch had no legal authority to appoint Miller; however, when Miller reached Albemarle he was able to secure his position with little initial trouble. The policies used by Miller to quiet opposition and his general handling of the government soon put him in conflict with the populace. This conflict erupted into a political upheaval which became known as "Culpepper's Rebellion." Butler, "The Governors of Albemarle County, 1663-1689," 292-293; Parker, Higher Court Records, 1670-1696, xlvi-xlvii.

[13]See footnote 12.

[14]Tradition is that John Culpepper was elected governor by the Assembly when they rebelled against Miller; however, there is no documentary evidence to substantiate the claim that he held any post other than that of customs collector. Dr. Lindley Butler suggests that it is possible that John Jenkins, the last de jure executive of the colony, acted as de facto government and evidence exists that a "rebel" council meeting was held in early 1678 at his home. Butler, "The Governors of Albemarle County, 1663-1689," 294; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, li; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 282.

[15]Sothel was appointed governor in 1678, but was captured "by the Turkes and carried into Argier . . ." and did not take office. [16]Harvey's commission instructed him to act as "President of the Council and execute the authority of the government until the arrival of Mr. Sothell". Other details are not known. He died while still in office. Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 283-284, 327.

[19]Sothel, following his purchase of the "Earl of Clarendon's share of Carolina", became governor under a provision of the Fundamental Constitution which "provided that the eldest proprietor that shall be in Carolina shall be Governor . . . ." The date of Sothel's assumption of Governorship is not known. Extant records tell nothing about the government of Albemarle in the year following Jenkins' death. It is possible that Sothel reached the colony and took office before Jenkins died or soon afterwards; it is possible that for a time there was an acting governor, chosen by the council; or there may have been a period of chaos. Nothing is known except that Sothel arrived in Albemarle at some time prior to March 10, 1682, when he held court at Edward Smithwick's house in Chowan Precinct. Sothel actions and policies soon became intolerable to the people of Albemarle and at the meeting of the assembly in 1689, thirteen charges of misconduct and irregularities were brought against him. He was banished from the colony for 12 months and was prohibited from ever again holding public office in Albemarle. On December 5, 1689, the Lords Proprietors officially suspended Sothel as governor because he abused the authority granted him as a proprietor. Ludwell was appointed to replace him. Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 339; "Minutes, March, 1683," Colonial Court Records, CCR 189; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, lviii; Butler, "Governors of Albemarle, 1663-1689,," 297.

[20]"Archdale was in the colony by December, 1683, to collect quitrents and remained in Albemarle until 1686. While Governor Sothel was absent from the county, Archdale served on many occasions as acting governor." Butler, The Governors of Albemarle County, 1663-1689," 297.

[21]The Fundamental Constitutions provided that the eldest proprietor living in the colony would be governor and that if there were none, then the eldest cacique was to act. "Gibbs, a relative of the Duke of Albemarle, had been made a cacique of Carolina in October, 1682, and had been granted a manor in the southern Carolina colony a few months later. Gibbs came to Albemarle at some date before November, 1689, by which time he was known as 'governor'. His claim to the governorship seems to have been recognized in the colony for a time; an assembly appears to have been held while he was 'governor'. It is probable that Albemarle inhabitants recognized his claim until word arrived of Ludwell's appointment, which was made in December, 1689." Even after Ludwell arrived in Albemarle Gibbs continued to claim his right to the office. In July, 1690 both were advised by the Virginia governor to carry their dispute to the proprietors in England, which was apparently done. On November 8, 1691 a proclamation was issued by the proprietors to the inhabitants of Albemarle reaffirming Sothel's suspension and repudiating the claim of Gibbs. They also suspended the Fundamental Constitutions which stripped Gibbs of any further legal basis for his actions. (The actions of the Proprietors on November 8, 1691 did in fact suspend the Fundamental Constitutions even though formal announcement of their suspension was not made until May 11, 1693.) Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, lix-lxi; "Proclamation to the Inhibitants of Carolina," November 8, 1691, Entry Number 1891, Calender of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. XIII, 1689-1692, J. W. Fortescue (editor), (London: Her Majesties Stationery Office, 1901), 568, hereinafter cited as Calender of State Papers, XIII, 1689-1692.

[22]Ludwell was originally commissioned governor by the Lords Proprietors on December 5, 1689 following the suspension of Sothel, but his dispute with Gibbs led to the issuance of a second commission on November 8, 1691. He served as governor until his appointment as governor of all Carolina. "Commission to Philip Ludwell," December 5, 1689, Entry Number 621, 188, and "Commission to Philip Ludwell, November 8, 1691, Entry Number 1885, Calendar of State Papers, Vol. XXII, 1689-1692, 566; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, lxi-lxii.

[23]Jarvis acted as deputy governor while Ludwell was in Virginia and England. He was officially appointed deputy governor upon Ludwell's acceptance of the governorship of Carolina and served until his death in 1694. [Jarvis and Council] to Ludwell, July 13, 1690, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 188; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, lxi-lxii, 13, 15.

[24]Ludwell served as acting governor, possibly by appointment of Thomas Smith governor of Carolina; however, the authority under which he acted is not known. In October, 1694 it is apparent that the Proprietors did not know of his position as the proprietors refer to him as "our late Governor of North Carolina." He issued a proclamation on November 28, 1693 and land grant records indicate that he acted as chief executive intermittantly throughout 1694 and as late as May of 1695. Records show that he was residing in Virginia by April and had been elected to represent James City County in the Virginia Assembly. M. Eugene Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina: A Political History, 1663-1763, (Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press, 1966), 53, hereinafter cited as Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina; "Further Instructions to John Archdale," October 17, 1694 and Proprietors to Ludwell, June 28, 1695, English Records, CO 5/289, ER 13-31, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as English Records; "Journal of the Virginia Council," April 17, 1695, CO 5/1307.

[25]Harvey became president of the council upon the death of Jarvis in 1694. He was presiding over the council on July 12, 1694 and signed several survey warrants the same day. [26]Archdale stopped in North Carolina a few weeks and acted as chief executive on his way to Charleston to assume office as Governor of Carolina. He was in Virginia enroute to Charleston on June 11, 12, and 13, 1695 and was in Charleston by August 17, 1695, the date on which he took the oath of office at Charleston. Council Minutes, SS 874.2, 55-59; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, 171-172; "True Copy of Archdale's Oath as Governor," August 17, 1695, Archdale Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[27]Archdale's authority to act as governor rested with his previous commission which was still valid. The problem of gubenatorial succession at this time is due to the death of Lord Craven and the confusion over the tenure of Lord Bath. Since no one other than the Lord Palatine could commission a new governor, there had been no "regular" governor appointed for Carolina. Mattie Erma Edwards Parker (editor), Higher Court Records, 1697-1701 in The Colonial Records of North Carolina. (Raleigh: North Carolina Department of Archives and History 33, 54, 483, 385, hereinafter cited as Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1697-1701; Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina, 71-72; Powell, The Proprietors of Carolina, 51-52

[28]Walker, as president of the council, assumed the role of chief executive shortly after the death of Harvey and relinquished it upon the arrival of Robert Daniel (sometime between June 20, 1703 and July 29, 1703). Henderson Walker to Governor of Virginia, July 28, 1699, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 511-512; Land Grant to George Sutton, June 20, 1703, Fragment of Council Minutes, July 29, 1703, Colonial Court Records, CCR 189, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Fragment of Council Minutes, CCR 189.

[29]Daniel was appointed deputy governor of Carolina by Sir Nathaniel Johnson, Governor of Carolina, and was acting in this capacity by July 29, 1703. Conflicts with minority religious groups, primarily the Quakers, led to his suspension in March 1705. Beth G. Crabtree, North Carolina Governors, 1585-1968, (Raleigh: North Carolina Department of Archives and History, 1968), 23, hereinafter cited as Crabtree, North Carolina Governors; Fragment of Council Minutes, July 29, 1703, CCR 189; Proclamation by Thomas Cary, Deputy Governor, and Council, March 21, 1704/5, Albemarle County Papers, Vol. I, 1678-1714, CR 2.001, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 50, hereinafter cited as Albemarle County Papers, I, 1678-1714.

[30]Cary was appointed by Sir Nathaniel Johnson, Governor of Carolina, to replace Daniel, and arrived in North Carolina on March 21, 1705. [30a]Dissenters were pleased initially with the appointment, because Cary was related by marriage to John Archdale, the Quaker proprietor; however, this initial feeling soon changed. [30b]When he arrived in North Carolina, Cary found Anglicans in most places of power and therefore, cast his lot with them. Although the law requiring oaths of allegiance was still on the statutes books, dissenters had assumed that Cary would not enforce it. However, when the General Court met on March 27, the oath act was read and put into execution. At the General Assembly meeting in November, 1705, Quaker members were again required to take oaths; they refused and were excluded. Then Cary and his allies passed a law which voided the election of anyone found guilty of promoting his own candidacy. This loosely defined bill gave the majority faction in the lower house the power to exclude any undesirable member and was designed to be used against troublesome non-Quakers (who had no convictions against oath swearing).[30c]

The dissenters and some disgruntled Anglicans now decided to send an agent to England to plead for relief. In October, 1706, their chosen representative, John Porter, left Albemarle for London—it is almost certain that Porter was not a Quaker and, in fact, may have been an Anglican.[30d]. Although he did not take the oaths of office with his fellow justices at the October-November 1705 session of the General Court, he had taken them in March, 1705. In England, Porter received the support of John Archdale, who persuaded the Lords Proprietors to issue orders to Porter, suspending Sir Nathaniel Johnson's authority over North Carolina, removing Cary as deputy governor, naming five new councillors, and authorizing the council to elect a chief executive.[30e]

Returning to Albemarle in October, 1707, Porter found William Glover and the council presiding over the government because Cary had left for a visit to South Carolina. This arrangement appeared satisfactory to Porter, who called the new lords deputies together and nominated Glover as president of the council.[30f] Glover was elected, but the vote was illegal since Porter's instructions required that Cary and the former councillors be present for the voting. Porter knew exactly what he was doing, however, and later used the illegality of the election to force Glover out of office.[30g]

On November 3, 1707, Glover convened the general assembly at John Hecklefield's house at Little River. Joining him in the upper house as lords deputies were Porter, Foster, Newby, Hawkins, and Thomas Cary, recently returned from South Carolina. After requesting that the lower house send its list of members to him, the president proposed dissolution of the assembly without further business. Cary objected, but the following day Glover and the rest of the council dissolved the General Assembly.[30h] Although he had been required to convene the assembly in compliance with the biennial act which specified that a legislative session be held every two years, Glover apparently did not want Cary to use the gathering as a forum.

At some point between the close of the assembly in November, 1707, and the summer of 1708, Glover turned on the dissenters. Apparently, he decided to revive the oath of office and force the Quaker councillors to take it. Seeing the turn of events, Cary moved to join Porter and the dissenters in the hope of regaining the chief executive's office. After receiving assurances of toleration from Cary, Porter moved decisively. Late in the summer of 1708, he called together both Cary's old councillors and the new ones, as he was originally supposed to have done in October, 1707, and announced that Glover's election as president had been illegal. Glover, joined by Thomas Pollock, protested vigorously and armed violence broke out between the two factions.[30i] Soon though, both sides agreed to let the General Assembly determine the validity of their rival claims. Cary and Glover each issued separate writs of election to every precinct which then proceeded to elect two sets of burgesses — one pledged to Cary and one to Glover. Cary men predominated in Bath County and Pasquotank and Perquimans precincts; Glover men controlled Currtiuck precinct, and Chowan was almost evenly divided.[30j] In the critical maneuvering for control of the assembly which met October 11, 1708, Cary forces scored an early, ultimately decisive victory. Edward Moseley, an Anglican vestryman, was chosen speaker of the house. Despite his religious affiliation, he was a Cary supporter. Through Moseley's careful management, Cary delegates were seated from every precinct except Currituck. When news of the Cary victory in the lower house reached Glover, he departed for Virginia. (There is evidence that Glover continued to act in the capacity of president of a council during 1709 and 1710 — land grant records indicate several grants throughout each year bear his name and the names of his councillors.[30k] The general assembly nullified the test oaths, and the council officially elected Cary president.[30l]

The Lords proprietors were slow to intervene in the situation in North Carolina. In December, 1708, they appointed Edward Tynte to be governor of Carolina and instructed him to make Edward Hyde deputy governor of North Carolina.[30m] Arriving in the colony early in 1711, Hyde had no legal claim on the deputy governorship because Tynte had died before commissioning him. However, he was warmly received in Albemarle, and his position as a distant kinsman of the queen was so impressive that the council elected Hyde to the presidency. He called a general assembly for March, 1711, where he recommended harsh legislation against dissenters and the arrest of Cary and Porter. From his home in Bath, Cary rallied his supporters to resist, and the armed conflict known as the Cary Rebellion began.[30n]

[36]Edward Jukes was appointed deputy governor of Carolina by Governor Tynte, but his commission was never signed due to the untimely death of Tynte in June, 1710. [37]Edward Hyde served first as president of the council and later as governor by commission from the Lords Proprietors. When Cary challenged his authority, armed conflict erupted between the two. [42]Reed was elected president of the council, to replace Pollock and as such served until the arrival of George Burrington. Saunders, Colonial Records, II, 459-460, 515-516.

[43]Burrington was commissioned governor of North Carolina by the Lords Proprietors and served until he was removed from office. Why he was removed is not officially known. Royal Governors

[46]Burrington was the first governor commissioned by the crown, and the only man to be appointed by both the Lords Proprietors and the crown. He qualified before the council in 1731. His political enemies succeeded in securing his removal from office in 1734. [49]Rice, as president of the council, became Chief executive following the death of Johnston; however, he too was advanced in age and soon died.

[50]Rowan was elected president following the death of Rice and served as chief executive until the arrival of Dobbs. Saunders, Colonial Records, V, iii-iv, 29.

[51]Dobbs was commissioned by the crown and arrived in North Carolina in late October, 1754. He qualified before the chief justice and three members of the council who had met him in Bath. He continued serving until his death in March, 1765. Dobbs to the Board of Trade, November 9, 1754, Saunders, Colonial Records, V, 144g-144h; "Letter from Tryon to the Board of Trade," North Carolina, Wilmington, April 1, 1765, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 1320-1321.

[52]Hasell served as chief executive during the absence of Dobbs from the colony. Dobbs had returned by December 19, 1763. Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 1014.

[53]Tryon, who had been commissioned lieutenant governor under Dobbs, served as chief executive, first under his commission as lieutenant governor, and then under a new commission as governor. He served in this capacity until 1771 when he was appointed governor of New York. Commission to William Tryon as Lieutenant Governor, April 26, 1764 and Commission to William Tryon as Governor, July 19, 1765, Commission and Charter Book, 1761-1772, GO 3, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 18, 21-36, hereinafter cited as Commission Book, 1761-1772; Letter from Tryon to the Board of Trade, North Carolina, Wilmington, April 1, 1765, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 1320-1321; Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 4, 133-134.

[54]See footnote 53.

[55]James Hasell, as president of the council, acted as interim governor until the arrival of Josiah Martin. Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 3-4, 15-16.

[56]Josiah Martin was appointed by the crown and served as the last royal governor of North Carolina. The date of his actual relinquishing of authority has been one of controversy among historians. Some cite the day he left North Carolina soil in July, 1775 as the termination date, others accept July 4, 1776. Martin considered himself to be governor throughout the Revolution since his commission had not been rescinded. Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 15-16.

Governors of the Province of Carolina

[58]For a twenty year period between April, 1692 and March, 1712, the colonies of North and South Carolina were combined into a single province called Carolina. Charleston was the provincial seat of government, and the Lords Proprietors commissioned a single governor for the province. This governor had instructions to appoint a deputy governor for North Carolina.

[59]Ludwell was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors as the first governor of Carolina. He qualified on April 11, 1692, but by May 15, 1693, he was no longer governor and had left Charleston. Commission to Ludwell, November 8, 1691, Commissions and Instructions, 1685-1715, 16-17; Council Minutes, April 11, 1692, "Journal of the Grand Council of South Carolina, April 11, 1692-September 26, 1692", Journals of the Grand Council of South Carolina, 1671-1680, 1692, A. S. Salley, Jr. (editor), (Columbia, South Carolina: The State Company, 1907), 3; Thomas Smith to "Mr. Speaker & you Gentlemen of the Assembly," May 15, 1693, Journals of the Commons House of Assembly of South Carolina, 1693, A. S. Salley, Jr. (editor), (Columbia, South Carolina: The State Company, 1907), 21-22, hereinafter cited as Salley, Journals of the Commons, 1693.

[60]Smith was commissioned governor by the Lords Proprietors and qualified sometime prior to April 7, 1694 when his commission was recorded by the secretary of the province. He continued serving until his death in November, 1694. Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina, 53-54; Commission to Smith, November 29, 1693, Commissions and Instructions, 1685-1715, 100-101.

[61]Archdale was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified in August, 1695. By January 7, 1696/97 Archdale was acting as governor in North Carolina. He had chosen Joseph Blake as his successor in Charleston and had "arranged for the sale of his son's proprietorship to Blake," sometime during the fall, 1696. Commission to Archdale, August 31, 1694. Entry Number 1268, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, XIV, 1639-1696, J.W. Fortescue (editor), (London: Her Majesties Stationery Office, 1903), 563, hereinafter cited as Calendar of State Papers, XIV, 1693-1696; True copy of Archdale's oath as Governor, August 17, 1695, Archdale Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh; Probate record on Will of Robert Wilson, proved January 7, 1696/97, Secretary of State Records, SS 872, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh; Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina, 66, 71-72.

[62]Johnson was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and served until Tynte arrived in November, 1709. Commission to Johnson, June 18, 1702, Commissions and Instructions, 1685-1715, 203-204; Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina, 86-87, 95.

[63]Tynte's commission was issued by the Lords Proprietors and read before the South Carolina Council on November 26, 1709. He continued serving until his death on June 26, 1710. Commission to Tynte, December 8, 1709, Commissions and Instructions, 1685-1715, 274-276; Sirmans, Colonial South Carolina, 95.

COLONIAL COUNCIL

[1]Many of the names and dates of service for council members during the early proprietary period were obtained from Mrs. Mattie Erma Edwards Parker who had compiled a list of councillors based on research done during her many years of service with the North Carolina Department of Archives and History.

[2]Carteret was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors on December 3, 1664 and arrived in the colony on February 23, 1664/65. The termination date for Drummond's council is not known, but he was reported to have left the colony and returned to Virginia sometime during 1667. Woodward who was also surveyor for the colony was probably commissioned by the Lords Proprietors at the same time as Carteret; however, it is also possible that in the instructions issued to Drummond, he was given the authority to appoint council members of his choosing and Woodward was one of those chosen. No other names of councillors are known. Peter Carteret's Appointment as Councillor and Assistant Governor for Albemarle, December 3, 1664, Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 3-4; Parker, Higher Court Records, 1670-1696, xvii; Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 587.

[6]The term of this council is not known since the date of Stephens' assumption of the government and the date of his death is not known. He was already serving as governor when his commission was delivered in April, 1668 and apparently died sometime in early 1670.

[7]Carteret was chosen governor by the council following the death of Stephens. In a meeting of the Lords Proprietors on January 20, 1670, Carteret had been appointed deputy to Sir George Carteret and Stephens had been appointed deputy to Lord Berkley. Since Carteret had already assumed leadership of the colony when these deputizations arrived, it is possible that he took over the deputization intended for Stephens and appointed someone else—either Foster or Harvey probably—to the one bearing his name. A blank deputization was issued by the Lords Proprietors on the same day with instructions for Stephens to appoint someone to act under it. Minutes of Meeting of Lords Proprietors, January 20, 1670, Entry Number 143, Calendar of State Papers, America and West Indies, Volume VII, 1669-1674, W. Noel Sainsbury, editor (London: Her Majesties Stationery Office, 1893), 52, hereinafter cited as Minutes, January 20, 1670, Calendar of State Papers, VII.

[8]See footnote 7.

[9]Jenkins was appointed deputy to Lord Craven on January 20, 1670. Minutes, January 20, 1670. Calendar of State Papers, VII, 52.

[10]Godfrey was appointed deputy to Sir Peter Colleton on January 20, 1670. Minutes, January 20, 1670, Calendar of State Papers, VII, 52.

[11]Willoughby was appointed deputy to Lord Ashley on January 20, 1670. Minutes, January 20, 1670, Calendar of State Papers, VII, 52.

[12]See footnote 7.

[14]The members of the council could not be determined from extant records.

[15]Miller was appointed to act as president of the council until Eastchurch arrived in the colony. He had been appointed deputy to Anthony, Earl of Shaftsbury on November 21, 1676. Entry Number 1146, Calendar of State Papers, IX, 495.

[16]Biggs was appointed deputy to William, Earl of Craven on November 21, 1676. Entry Number 1146, Calendar of State Papers, IX, 495.

[17]Hill was appointed deputy to Christopher, Duke of Albemarle on November 21, 1676. Entry Number 1146, Calendar of State Papers, IX, 495.

[18]There is no evidence that a governor, deputy governor or president of the council exercised any control over the colony during this period. There is evidence that a council—possibly under the leadership of John Jenkins—met during this time and probably served as the governing body.

[19]Harvey became president of the council following the appointment of Jarvis as deputy governor.

[26]Daniel took a seat on the council from October 11-14, 1708 by virtue of his position as a Landgrave of Carolina.

[27]A council composed of the named persons held various meetings and conducted business during 1709 and 1710; however, the authority under which they acted is not known. Land Patent Book, Number 7, 1706-1740, 28, 89, 164.

[28]Prior to this time a power struggle—Cary's Rebellion—between Hyde and Cary had created chaos and confusion in the government.

[29]Boyd was appointed deputy to Lord Craven and qualified before the council. The date of his appointment could not be found. Council Minutes, May 9, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 2.

[30]Pollock was appointed deputy to Lord Carteret and qualified before the council. The date of his appointment could not be found. Council Minutes, May 9, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 2.

[31]The date of Peterson's qualification could not be found. His name first appears in council records on June 2, 1712 and he seems to have qualified at some previous date.

[32]Knight was appointed deputy to John Dawson by the governor and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, July 4, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 32.

[33]Sanderson was supposedly deputy to the heirs of Seth Sothel, but there is no evidence of his ever serving.

[34]Gale was appointed deputy to Joseph Blake (a minor) by Lady Eliza Blake and qualified before the council. Commission to Christopher Gale, July 23, 1712 and Council Minutes, September 12, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 37, 40.

[35]On January 12, 1713 a notice was sent to Sanderson, ordering him to appear before the council before the council or face suspension. There is no evidence that he complied. Council Minutes, January 12, 1712/13, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 59.

[36]Boyd resigned as deputy to Lord Craven and appointed Tobias Knight as his replacement until the Lords Proprietors appointed someone else. Council Minutes, December 17, 1714, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 107.

[37]Gale's name does not appear in council records after August 3, 1716.

[38]Knight's name does not appear in council records after May 27, 1719.

[39]Reed's name first appears in council records on August 10, 1714; however, he appears to have qualified at a previous date.

[40]Foster was appointed deputy to John Dawson and qualified before the council. Commission to Francis Foster, August 4, 1713 and Council Minutes, August 10, 1714, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 101, 97.

[41]Jones was appointed deputy to Joseph Blake (a minor) by Lady Eliza Blake and qualified before the council. The date of his appointment is not known. Council Minutes, November 15, 1716, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 141.

[42]Sanderson's name first appears in council records on November 22, 1717; however, he appears to have qualified at a previous date.

[43]Hecklefield had been appointed deputy to Lord Craven, but declined to serve for reasons of health. Lovick was appointed by Eden to replace him and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, August 3, 1720, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 217.

[44]See footnote 43.

[45]Gale first qualified on March 30, 1722 as deputy to Joseph Blake. He was appointed by Lady Eliza Blake, but the date of the appointment is not known. He qualified again on June 14, 1722, this time under a commission appointing him deputy to James Bertie. Council Minutes, March 30, 1722, Commission to Christopher Gale, August 1, 1721 and Council Minutes, June 14, 1722, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 221-222, 220, 229-230.

[46]Pollock died on August 30, 1722. Council Minutes, September 7, 1722, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 231-232.

[47]Thomas Pollock, Senior, resigned as deputy to the Duke of Beaufort and his son was appointed to fill the vacancy. Council Minutes, April 4, 1722, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 226.

[48]Blount was appointed by Pollock as deputy to Joseph Blake following Gale's qualifications as deputy to James Bertie. He qualified before the council. Council Minutes, June 14, 1722, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 230.

[49]Blount's name does not appear in council records after September 7, 1722.

[50]The date of Foster's qualification could not be found.

[51]Moore was appointed deputy to Joseph Blake and qualified before the council. Commission to Maurice Moore, November 10, 1723 and Council Minutes, March 28, 1723, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 234.

[52]He was appointed to the council by the Lords Proprietors in their instructions to Burrington. Gale apparently left the colony sometime after July 31, 1724. Instructions to George Burrington, June 3, 1723, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 294.

[143]Spaight was appointed to replace Henry McCulloch who had died. He qualified before the council. He apparently died in early 1763. Commission to Richard Spaight as Councillor, February 14, 1757, Commissions, 1754-1767; Council Minutes, November 18, 1757, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 97; Dobbs to Board of Trade, February 23, 1763, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 968.

[144]Berry was appointed by Dobbs to make a quorum of the council and qualified before the council. His name does not appear in council records after October 24, 1761. Council Minutes, January 2, 1760, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 331.

[145]Moore was appointed by Dobbs to replace Matthew Rowan who had died. He qualified before the council. His name does not appear in council records after April, 1761. Council Minutes, April 24, 1760, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 165.

[146]Sampson was appointed by Dobbs because of an insufficient number of council members. He qualified before the council. Council Minutes, November 30, 1761, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 194.

[147]McCulloh was apparently appointed by the crown in a new set of instructions issued to Dobbs in 1761 and qualified before the council. Board of Trade to the King, May 6, 1761, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 559; Council Minutes, April 14, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 200.

[148]Rutherford was apparently reinstated as a councillor on April 30, 1761 by the king. His name does not appear in council records until April 20, 1762, so he must have qualified before Dobbs at an earlier date. Board of Trade to King, May 6, 1761, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 559; Council Minutes, April 20, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 201.

[149]McCulloh was apparently appointed by the crown in a new set of instructions issued to Dobbs in 1761 and qualified before the council. Board of Trade to King, May 6, 1761, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 559; Council Minutes, November 4, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 212.

[150]Murray was reinstated to his former rank by the crown and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, December 31, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 252.

[151]Berry was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. The date of his appointment is not known since no extant mandamus could be found. Council Minutes, April 19, 1764, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 276.

[152]Dry and Palmer were appointed by the crown to replace John Swann and John Dawson who had died. They qualified before the council. Commission to William Dry and Robert Palmer, August 31, 1763, Walter Clark (editor), The State Records of North Carolina, XI, (Winston: M. I. & J. C. Stewart, Printers to the State, 1895), 155-156, hereinafter cited as Clark, State Records; Council Minutes, August 11, 1764 and August 27, 1764, Council Journal, 1764-1775, GO 117, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 1, hereinafter cited as Council Journal, 1764-1775.

[153]Heron was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. The date of his appointment is not known since no extant mandamus could be found. Council Minutes, August 11, 1764, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 1.

[154]See footnote 152.

[155]Murray was granted a leave of absence by Tryon on April 17, 1765. Council Minutes, April 17, 1765, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 16.

[156]Hasell was chosen president of the council following Murray's departure.

[158]Berry was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Tryon and qualified before him. On December 21, 1765 he shot himself and died eight days later on the 29th. Instructions to William Tryon, [July 19, 1765], Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 137; Council Minutes, December 20, 1765, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 23-24; Tryon to Board of Trade, February 1, 1766, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 160.

[159]He was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Tryon and qualified before him. Instructions to William Tryon, [July 19, 1765], Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 137; Council Minutes, December 20, 1765, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 23-24.

[160]See footnote 159.

[161]See footnote 159.

[162]Heron was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Tryon and qualified before him. He was granted a leave of absence on May 6, 1769 for reasons of health and was reported dead on October 18, 1770. Instructions to William Tryon, [July 19, 1765], Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 137; Council Minutes, December 20, 1765, May 6, 1769 and October 18, 1770, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 23-24, 107-108, 130-131.

[165]See footnote 159.

[167]McCulloh was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Tryon and qualified before the council. He resigned from the council on July 18, 1770 although he had not been an active member since April, 1767. Instructions to William Tryon, [July 19, 1765], Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 137; Council Minutes, November 3, 1766, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 39; McCulloh to Earl Hillsborough, July 18, 1770, Saunders, Colonial Records, VIII, 220.

[168]Strudwick was appointed by the crown to replace Richard Spaight who had died prior to qualifying. He qualified before the council. Commission to Samuel Strudwick, February 20, 1767, Commission Book, 1761-1772, 47; Council Minutes, December 14, 1767, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 67.

[169]Cornell was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, October 16, 1770, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 125.

[170]Howard was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, November 19, 1770, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 132.

[171]Dobbs had been appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Tryon, but never served. Instructions to William Tryon, [July 19, 1765], Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 137.

[172]See footnote 168.

[173]Palmer was granted a leave of absence on April 15, 1771, but due to the Regulator Insurrection it was postponed until July 8, 1771. Commission Book, 1761-1772, 51-52.

[174]He was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Martin and qualified before him. Instructions to Josiah Martin, February 6, 1771, Saunders, Colonial Records, VIII, 513; Council Minutes, August 12, 1771 and November 18, 1771, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 164, 169-170.

[175]See footnote 174.

[176]Duckenfield was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. He left the colony for England in late 1772. Proclamation of "The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council," May 1, 1771, Clark, State Records, XI, 233; Council Minutes, November 18, 1771, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 170.

[177]Jones was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. He apparently resigned sometime in 1774 after having departed the colony in 1773. Proclamation of "The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council," May 1, 1771, Clark, State Records, XI, 233; Counceil Minutes, November 18, 1772, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 170; Martin to Board of Trade, March 24, 1775, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 1172.

[180]Sampson was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Martin and qualified before the council. His name does not appear in council records after August 25, 1774. Instructions to Josiah Martin, February 6, 1771, Saunders, Colonial Records, VIII, 513; Council Minutes, November 18, 1771, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 169-170.

[181]Strudwick was appointed by the crown in instructions issued to Martin. The date of his qualification is not known, but his name appears in council journals for the first time on January 25, 1772 and he apparently qualified prior to this date. Instructions to Josiah Martin, February 6, 1771, Saunders, Colonial Records, VIII, 513; Council Minutes, January 25, 1772, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 176.

[182]McGuire was appointed by the crown to replace Marmaduke Jones and qualified before the council. The actual date of his appointment is not known since no mandamus could be found in extant records. Proclamation of "The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council," March 9, 1774, Clark, State Records, XI, 245; Board of Trade Journals, February 21, 1774, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 1105-1106; Council Minutes, April 6, 1775, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 251.

COLONIAL OFFICIALS

Secretary

[1]Cobthrop was apparently chosen by the Lords Proprietors, but never sailed to Albemarle. Letter to William Berkeley, September 8, 1663, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 52-55; Paschal, "Proprietary North Carolina," 260.

[2]Carteret was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and arrived in Albemarle on February 23, 1665. He was presumably qualified shortly after his arrival. Following the death of Governor Stephens in early 1670, Carteret was chosen his successor, but apparently continued serving as secretary. It is possible that he acted in both capacities until his departure for England in 1672. "Peter Carteret's appointment as Secretary and Chief Registrar for Albemarle," December 3, 1664 and "Peter Carteret's account of the years 1666-1673 in Albemarle," December 3, 1674, Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 4-5, 61-64; Court Minutes, September 27, 1670, Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, 4-6.

[3]Little is known concerning Holden's appointment or dates of service. He was serving as secretary on July 26, 1675 when he verified a sworn statement and seems to have continued until the arrival of Miller in July, 1677. It is possible that he was appointed secretary prior to this date since he had been in the colony since 1671. Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 315; Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 3n, 42.

[4]When Eastchurch appointed Miller to act in his stead until he returned to North Carolina, he apparently appointed him secretary as well as deputy governor. On October 9, 1677 he attested to the granting of a power of attorney, however this could have been in the capacity of acting governor rather than as secretary. According to R. D. W. Connor, he continued serving until 1679. "Affidavit of Thomas Miller concerning Rebellion of Carolina," Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 278-283; Parker, Higher Court Records, 1670-1696, 8; R. D. W. Connor (editor) A Manual of North Carolina, 1913, (Raleigh: 1913), 332, hereinafter cited as Connor, 1913 Manual.

[5]Holden was appointed by the Lords Proprietors and apparently arrived in Albemarle in July, 1679. A warrant appointing him Receiver General of North Carolina was issued by the Lords Proprietors in February, 1679, and it is possible that a similar warrant was issued about the same time for secretary. Records indicate that he was acting as secretary on November 6, 1679. Sometime between March, 1681 and July 1682, Holden was imprisoned on charges of "gross irregularities in the collection of Customs" —another office which he held. Extant records do not indicate what became of him. His name does not appear in council records after 1681 and in 1682, John Archdale was issued a blank commission to appoint a new receiver-general. It is possible that he was released from prison or acquited of the charges, and continued serving as secretary. Some sources indicate he served until 1684; however other references indicate that someone else was acting as secretary in 1684 or earlier. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, lv-lvii; Warrant appointing Robert Holden, Receiver General of North Carolina, February 19, 1679, Entry Number 897, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. X, 1677, 1680, 330, hereinafter cited as Calendar of State Papers, X, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 316-317; Powell Ye Countie of Albemarle, footnote 3, 42; Connor, 1913 Manual, 332.

[6]Little is known about Woodrowe. The only mention of him in extant records is in a letter written by the Lords Proprietors in February, 1684 which leaves the impression that he had been serving for some time. It is possible he was appointed as early as 1682. Lords Proprietors to Governor of Albemarle, February 14, 1683/84, Entry Number 1542, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. XI, 1681-1685, J. W. Fortescue (Editor), (London: Her Majesty's Stationery Office, 1898), 588-589, hereinafter cited as Calendar of State Papers, XI, 1681-1685.

[7]Hartley was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, but no date of when he qualified could be found. According to one source he died in January, 1691/92, probably while still secretary. Commission to Francis Hartly, June 3, 1684, Entry Number 1720, Calendar of State Papers, XI, 1681-1685, 645; Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 220.

[8]When Akehurst took office is not known; he was apparently acting by June 26, 1693 when he acknowledged a land grant. It is possible that he was appointed as early as 1692 and presumably served until his death sometime in late 1699 or early 1700. (His will was proved in Virginia in 1700). Land Grant Acknowledgement, June 26, 1693, Albemarle County Papers, I, 1678-1714, 11; Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 133.

[9]Swann may have been appointed to replace Akehurst; however, when he took office is not known. He was serving by September, 1700 and probably served until Knight took over in 1704. J. R. B. Hathaway, Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. II, 1902, (Merry Hill: ————————, 1902), 302, hereinafter cited as Hathaway, Historical Register, II; Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 262-263.

[10]Knight was apparently appointed to replace Swann and according to one source was in office in 1704. The earliest documentary evidence of Knight acting is his certifying to a court proceeding on February 20, 1705. There is no evidence that he served during this span after 1708; however he was again serving in 1712. Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 262-263; Albemarle Papers, I, 1678-1714, 62.

[11]Lumley was appointed by Knight to act as Secretary on two occasions, once in October, 1704 and again in 1708 during Knight's absence due to an illness. It is not known who served between 1708 and 1712 because of the chaotic conditions in government. Colonial Court Records, CCR 187, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[12]Two commissions were issued to Low by the Lords Proprietors, the first on January 31, 1711 and a second on June 13, 1711; however, there is no record of him serving. Commission to Nevill Low, January 31, 1711 and Commission to Nevill Low, June 13, 1711, Entries Number 627 and 874, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. XXV, 1710-1711, Cecil Headlam (editor), (London: His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1924), 351, 545, hereinafter cited as Calendar of State Papers, XXV, 1710-1711; Minutes of Meeting of the Lords Proprietors, January 31, 1710/11, English Records, ER 14-3.

[13]Knight was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, and qualified before the governor and council. In 1719 he was called before the council to answer charges of conspiracy with pirates but was acquitted. He apparently died in late June, 1719 since a successor was appointed on June 30, and his will probated on July 7, 1719. Commission to Tobias Knight, January 24, 1711/12, Council Minutes, May 9, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 2, 7; Minutes of Meeting of the Lords Proprietors, January 24, 1711/12, English Records, ER 14-1, 14-3; Council Minutes, May 27, 1719 and June 30, 1719, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 186, 191-192; Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 56.

[14]Lovick was appointed by the governor and council following Knight's death. Council Minutes, June 30, 1719, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 191-192.

[15]Lovick was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the Governor and Council. He served until 1731. Commission to John Lovick, March 21, 1720/21, Council Minutes, April 4, 1722, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 219; Council Minutes, February 27, 1730/31, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 46.

[16]Anderson was appointed by Governor Burrington as "acting" secretary until Rice arrived. Council Minutes, February 27, 1730/31 and April 3, 1731, Council Journal, 1728-1734, 46, 49.

[17]Rice was commissioned by the crown and qualified before the governor and council. He served until his death on January 28, 1753. Commission to Nathaniel Rice, November 30, 1730, and Council Minutes, April 3, 1731, Council Journal, 1728-1734, 143, 49; Council Minutes, February 1, 1753, Council Journal, 1752-1754, 63.

[18]Murray was appointed by the Council upon the death of Rice and served until the arrival of McCulloch in 1755. Land grant records indicate that he was acting as late as March 31, 1755. Council Minutes, February 1, 1753, Council Journal, 1752-1754, 63; Land Grant Records, XVI, 1755-1760, North Carolina Department of the Secretary of State, Raleigh, 33-35.

[19]A warrant was issued on June 21, 1754 for McCulloch's appointment as secretary and his commission was certified by Dobbs on July 1, while both were still in England. He qualified as a council member on March 25, 1755 but does not appear to have acted as secretary until April. He continued serving until his death in 1755. Warrant appointing Henry McCulloch Secretary, June 21, 1754, English Records, ER 15-3; Saunders, Colonial Records, V, 338-39.

[20]A letter was sent from Governor Dobbs to Spaight on October 2, 1755 appointing him "Secretary of the Crown." (A commission in the Secretary of State's records, however, bears the date, October 27, 1755.) He qualified before Dobbs on October 30. Dobbs to Spaight, October 2, 1755, Saunders, Colonial Records, V. 442; Commission to Dobbs, October 27, 1755, and Certification of Qualification, October 30, 1755, Commissions, 1754-1767, 36, 37.

[21]Faulkner's name was proposed to King on March 17 by the Board of Trade and on April 1 a commission was ordered prepared. He rented his commission to Samuel Strudwick. "Board of Trade Journals," March 17, 1761 and April 1, 1761, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 625-626; "Letter from Governor Martin to Secretary Hillsborough," March 7, 1772, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 263-268.

[22]Spaight was reappointed by Dobbs and served until his death sometime during July or early August, 1672. Commission to Richard Spaight, April 24, 1762, and Certification of Qualification by Dobbs, May 1, 1762, Commissions, 1754-1767, 192-193; Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 711-712.

[23]Heron was appointed by Dobbs to replace Spaight. On March 6, 1769, Heron was granted a leave of absence to return to England where he apparently died. Commission to Benjamin Heron, August 5, 1762 and Certification of Qualification, August 6, 1762, Commissions, 1754-1767, 196-197; Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 732; Council Minutes, May 6, 1769, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 107-108.

[24]London was already a deputy secretary under Heron and acted in this capacity until news of Heron's death was received.

[25]London was appointed by Tryon upon the death of Heron and served until he "declined acting any longer . . ." Council Minutes, October 18, 1770 and December 31, 1770, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 130-131, 141.

[26]Palmer was appointed by Tryon to replace London. On July 8, 1771 he was granted a leave of absence to return to England for reasons of health. Council Minutes, December 31, 1770, Council Journ-absence to return to England. Council Minutes, December 31, 1770, Council Journal, 1764-1775; Commission Book, 1761-1722, 52.

[27]Strudwick was appointed by Martin after Strudwick had produced "sufficient evidence that he had rented the Secretary's Office in this Province of Mr. Faulkner . . ." He apparently continued serving until the Revolution. Commission to Samuel Strudwick, January 28, 1772, Commission and Charter Book, 1761-1772, 58-59; "Letter from Governor Martin to Secretary Hillsborough," March 7, 1772, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 263-268.

Surveyor General

[28]Lepreyrie was chosen by the Lords Proprietors, but apparently never left England. "Meeting of the Lords Proprietors", May 23, 1663 and "A Letter to Sir William Berkeley", September 8, 1663. Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 34, 52-55; Paschal, "Proprietary North Carolina."

[29]Woodward was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, probably at the same time that Carteret was commissioned secretary. By June 2, 1665, he knew of his appointment as surveyor and was acting in that capacity. He was still serving in October, 1666 but how much longer he served is not known. Woodward to Sir John Colleton, June 2, 1665, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 99-101, 141-143; Powell, Ye Countie of Albemarle, 8n.

[30]Eastchurch seems to have acted as surveyor general as early as 1669 according to Mrs. Parker, and possibly continued serving following his election as Speaker of the Assembly and his takeover of the government in 1675. He departed the colony the following spring for England. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, xli-xliii.

[31]Eastchurch was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, but never qualified. Commission to Eastchurch, November 21, 1676, Entry Number 1144, Calendar of State Papers, IX, 1675-1676, 495; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, xlvi-xlvii.

[32]There is no evidence to indicate that Miller served as Surveyor-General; however, it is possible that since he was appointed to act for Eastchurch until he arrived in the colony that Miller did serve in this capacity.

[33]Wilkinson was commissioned "surveyor of Northern Province of Carolina" by the Lords Proprietors, but apparently never served. Commission to Robert Wilkinson, March 26, 1681, Entry Number 55, Calendar of State Papers, XI, 1681-1685, 23.

[34]When Swann was appointed and how long he served is not known. He was serving by September 29, 1694 and was still acting on February 27, 1694/5. It is possible that he had been acting in this capacity as early as 1692 or 1693 and could have continued until his appointment as secretary in 1699 or 1700, or until Relfe was appointed in 1703. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, 48, 139.

[35]Relfe was commissioned by Robert Daniel and was apparently still serving in 1705. Commission to Thomas Relfe, August 26, 1703, Colonial Court Records, Miscellaneous Papers, 1677-1775, CCR 192, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[36]Lawson was apparently serving as surveyor general in 1705. His name appears on several survey warrants in 1706. However, there seems to be a conflict as to whether he was surveyor general or only a deputy surveyor. There is evidence to support both cases, but the latter seems to be the most prevalent, especially in 1706 when Edward Moseley is acting as early as April of that year. Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 266; Various Certifications of Surveys, Land Patent Book No. 7, 1706-1740, 94, 250, 273.

[37]Moseley was acting as surveyor general as early as April, 1706 and was still acting as late as May 1711. Under whose authority he was acting is not known but Moseley was a known supporter of Glover and probably acted under his authority. The period between 1709 and 1711 is one of turmoil and confusion. Botn Moseley and Lawson acted as surveyor general. Certification of a Survey for Adam Lewis, April 16, 1706 and Certification of a Survey for Thomas Brown, Jr., May 30, 1711, Land Patent Book No. 7, 1706-1740, 29, 94.

[38]Lawson was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors. Although it is not known whether he actually qualified or not, he did in fact serve as surveyor general. His record as surveyor general is August 1, 1709 when he certifies to a survey made for Thomas Cely. He was killed, according to Christopher Gale, by Indians on September 22, 1711 while on an expedition with Baron de Graffenried. Commission to Lawson, April 28, 1709, English Records, ER 14-3; Certification of a Survey for Thomas Cely, August 1, 1709, Land Patent Book No. 7, 1706-1740, 251; "A Letter from Major Christopher Gale," November 2, 1711, Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 825.

[39]Maule was appointed by the council to inspect a tract of land. . . ." sometime prior to a meeting on June 2, 1712 and may have acted as temporary surveyor general following Lawson's death. Council Minutes, June 2, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 29.

[40]Brook was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and was considered surveyor general by them as late as August 13, 1713; but there is no record of qualification or service. Commission to Frances Brook, April 10, 1712, Entry Number 379, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. XXVI, 1711-1712, Cecil Headlam (editor), (London: His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1925), 264, hereinafter cited as Calender of State Papers, XXVI, 1711-1712; warrant from Lords Proprietors to Francis Brook, August 13, 1713, Entry Number 450, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, XXVII, 1712-1714, Cecil Headlam (Editor), (London: His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1926), 219.

[41]Pollock was appointed by the council and served until Maule qualified. Council Minutes, September 12, 1712, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 39.

[42]Maule was commissioned by the Lords Proprieors and qualified before the council. He served until Moseley took over in 1723. Commission to William Maule, May 5, 1714, (recorded in Secretary's Office on October 19, 1714), Council Journal, 1712-1728, 102.

[43]Moseley was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the council. He served until Jenoure took over in 1731. Commission to Edward Moseley, June 3, 1723 and Council Minutes, November 16, 1723, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 257, 262-263.

[44]Jenoure was commissioned by the crown and apparently qualified sometime in early 1731. (He qualified as a council member on February 25, 1731). He died between July 27, 1732 when he attended a council meeting and October 18, 1732, when he was reported dead. Warrant for Jenoure to be Surveyor General signed by Robert Walpole, et al, November 28, 1730, T54/31 English Records, ER 18-33, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh; Council Minutes, February 25, 1730/31, July 27, 1732, and October 18, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 45, 153, 156.

[45]Lovick was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Jenoure and qualified before the council. Council minutes, October 18, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 156.

[46]Gale was appointed by Governor Burrington and qualified before his council. North Carolina Council Minutes, September 26-28, 1734, CO 5/306, English Records, ER 14-15.

[47]Wardroper was commissioned by the crown, and qualified before the council. He died sometime prior to September 21, 1736. Warrant appointing Wardroper Surveyor General, signed by Robert Walpole, et al, March 6, 1733, T 52/38, English Records, ER 18-2; Council Minutes, February 20, 1734/35, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 13-14; Council Minutes, September 21, 1736, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 222.

[48]Rowan was appointed by Governor Johnston and qualified before the council. He continued serving until the arrival of Gould in 1741. Council Minutes, September 21, 1736, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 222.

[49]Gould was commissioned by the crown in 1739 to replace Wardroper, but did not qualify until 1741. He served until his death in 1753. Commission to Gould, July 5, 1739, Land Grant Records, XIX, 177-179 and T 52/40, English Records, ER 18-2; Council Minutes, November 8, 1753, Council Journal, 1752-1754, 78-79.

[50]Palmer was probably commissioned by Matthew Rowan who was serving as chief executive, to replace Gould who had died; however, the date of his commission is not known. He qualified before the council. Council Minutes, November 8, 1753, Council Journal, 1752-1754, 78-79.

[51]Palmer's commission was renewed by the crown and he qualified on April 13, 1762. The date of his reappointment could not be found. On July 8, 1771, Palmer was granted a leave of absence by James Hassell, president of the council, to return to England. There is no record of anyone being appointed to replace him. Council Minutes, April 13, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 200; Leave of Absence to Palmer, July 8, 1771, Commission Book, 1761-1772, 52.

Receiver General

[52]Holden was appointed by the Lords Proprietors. On June 10, 1679 he was in Boston and would "depart in two or three days" for Albemarle. He presumably qualified soon after his arrival. In July, 1682 a blank commission was issued to Archdale with instruction to appoint a new receiver general. Warrant appointing Robert Holden Receiver General of Carolina, February 19, 1679, Entry Number 897 and Holden to Commissioners of the Customs, June 10, 1679, Entry Number 1017, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. X, 1677-1680, W. Noel Sainsbury and J. W. Fortescue, (editors), (London: Her Majesty's Stationery Office, 1896), 330, 372; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, footnote 145, lvii.

[53]Archdale acted as receiver general under the blank commission from the Lords Proprietors. This was only a "stop gap" appointment until the Lord Proprietors could appoint someone else. Paschal, "Proprietary North Carolina," 270.

[54]There is evidence that Cary served as receiver general, but the authority under which he acted is not known. On April 15, 1709 and then again on April 7, 1713, Cary signed receipts as receiver general for land surveys. Receipt for William Barrow, April 15, 1709 and receipt for James Davis, April 7, 1713, Land Patent Book No. 7, 1706-1740, 133, 47.

[55]Danson was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, but the commission must have been withdrawn the same day since Gale's commission as receiver general bears the same date. Commission to John Danson, May 19, 1709, Entry Number 514, Calendar of State Papers, XXIV, 1708-1709, 303.

[56]Gale was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors, but there is no record of qualification or service. The confusion created by the Cary-Glover conflict probably prevented Gale from presenting his commission to either claimant. Commission to Christopher Gale, May 19, 1709, CO 5/289, English Records, ER 13-31.

[57]Stafford was appointed by the Lords Proprietors but never served—his commission was set aside. Minutes of meeting of the Lords Proprietors, December 23, 1711, CO 5/292, English Records, ER 14-3; Paschal, "Proprietary North Carolina," 273.

[58]Richardson was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the council. He served until Goffe took over in 1724. Commission to Daniel Richardson, January 29, 1711/12, and Council Minutes, April 14, 1713, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 41, 56.

[59]Goffe was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the Council. He served until his departure from the colony during the winter of 1725. Commission to Arthur Goffe, June 3, 1723 and Council Minutes, January 15, 1723/24, Council Journal, 295, 268.

[60]Little was appointed by Governor Everard to replace Goffe and qualified before the Council. He served until Hammerton took over in 1731. Council Minutes, January 19, 1726, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 374-375.

[61]Hammerton was commissioned receiver general for both North and South Carolina. It is not known when he qualified; however, it must have been sometime early in 1731. On March 6, 1734/35 Hammerton was "relieved of duty in North Carolina" by order of Johnston because he resided in South Carolina. Commission to John Hammerton, September 16, 1730, Clark, Colonial Records, XI, 4-6; Council Minutes, March 6, 1734/35, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 16.

[62]Rice was supposedly appointed by Hammerton to act as his deputy in North Carolina, but no record of service in this capacity could be found. Protest of Suspension, John Hammetron, June 30, 1735, T 1/289, English Records, ER 16-36.

[63]Allen was appointed by Governor Johnston to replace Hammerton and qualified before the council. Council Minutes, March 6, 1734/35 and March 22, 1734/35, Council Journal 1734-1743, 16, 20.

[64]Allen was commissioned by the crown and qualified before the council. He served until his death in 1750. Warrant appointing Eleazer Allen Receiver General, April 2, 1741, T 52/41, English Records, ER 182; Council Minutes, May 4, 1742, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 179; Council Minutes, July 5, 1750, Council Journal, 1743-1750, 225.

[65]Rowan was appointed by Governor Johnston to replace Allen and served until the qualification of Rutherford. The date of his appointment and qualification are not known, but Allen's death was reported to the council on July 5, 1750. Copy of Mr. Walpole's report to the Lords of the Treasury on widow Johnston's claim, dated the 10th April 1753, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 21-23; Council Minutes, July 5, 1750, Council Journal, 1743-1750, 225.

[66]Rutherford was commissioned by the crown and apparently qualified on April 20, 1751—his accounts however are dated from May 14, 1751. He was suspended by Governor Dobbs on December 14, 1757. April 20, 1751, Council Journal, 1755-1764. 197; Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 1255; Council Minutes, December 14, 1757, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 115.

[67]DeRossett was appointed by Governor Dobbs to replace Rutherford. The dates of his appointment and qualification is not known; however, he was probably appointed shortly after Rutherford's suspension. His resignation was presented to the council on December 1, 1761. Council Minutes, December 1, 1761, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 194.

[68]Rutherford was appointed by Governor Dobbs following the resignation of DeRossett. Council Minutes, December 1, 1761, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 194.

[69]Rutherford was commissioned by the Crown and qualified before the council. He apparently served until the Revolution. Commission to John Rutherford, April 2, 1761, and Council Minutes, March 8, 1762, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 197-199.

Attorney General

[70]Durant was probably appointed by Jenkins, possibly as early as 1673 or 1674; he was serving by 1676. When the conflict between Eastchurch and Jenkins broke out, Durant went to England to plead Jenkin's case—he was not very successful since Eastchurch was commissioned. Durant did not return to the colony until December, 1677 but apparently once again served as attorney general. He was still serving in November, 1679 and probably continued serving until 1681 or later. Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 40; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, xliv-xlvi; The Affidavit of Peter Brockwell, February 16, 1679, and "Indictment of Th. Miller Recd from Ye Commrs of Ye Customs the 15 July 1680," Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 299-300, 313-314.

[71]Little is known of Wilkinson's service as attorney general except that he was suspended from office in 1694 by Governor Harvey for "Misdemeanors," Governor of North Carolina to Lords Proprietors, September 6, 1694, Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 53-54.

[72]Porter was appointed by Harvey to replace Wilkinson and qualified before the court. He probably served until Walker took office in 1695. Governor of North Carolina to Lords Proprietors, September 6, 1694, Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 53-54; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, 87.

[73]Walker was appointed by Harvey and qualified before the court. Parker, Higher Court Records, 1670-1696, 179.

[74]Abington served for two indictments during the February, 1696 court. Abington to Glover, October 27, 1697, Hathaway, Historical Register, III, 53; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696, 239.

[75]Plater was appointed by Governor Harvey and qualified before the court. He was still serving in October, 1703. Hawk, History of North Carolina, II, 140; Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1670-1696. 269; Saunders, Colonial Records, I, 595.

[76]When Gale was appointed is not known. The first record of service is at the General Court for July, 1704 and he was still serving in October, 1705. General Court Minutes, July 1704, Colonial Court Records, CCR 103 and General Court, File Papers, October, 1705, Colonial Court Records, CCR 148, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Colonial Court Records.

[77]Snoden began serving during the Fall term of the general court for 1705 and according to Mrs. Parker was still serving in 1708. General Court Minutes, October-November 1705, Colonial Court Records, CCR 104.

[78]Gale was again acting as attorney general by October, 1708. There are no court records available for 1709 and 1710 and the records for the First Court in 1711 indicate that Bonwicke was attorney general. It is possible that scattering courts were held during this period and that Gale continued to serve as attorney general. General Court Minutes, October 1708 and March, 1711, Colonial Court Records, CCR 189.1., CCR 189.

[79]Bonwicke was serving by March, 1711 and records from the Receiver General's office indicate that he was still serving in June, 1714; however, by October he was no longer in office. General Court Records March, 1711, Colonial Court Records CCR 104; Accounts of Daniel Richardson, Receiver General, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 126-127; Colonial Court Records, CCR 189.

[80]Prior was appointed by the Lords Proprietors but never served. Commission to Daniel Prior, March 6, 1712, Entry Number 340, Calendar of State Papers, XXVI, 1711-1712, 243 and CO 5/292, English Records, ER 14-3.

[81]Richardson was apparently appointed by Governor Eden sometime during the summer of 1714. He qualified before the General Court on October 26, 1714 and served until 1724 when he was replaced by Little. General Court Minutes, October 26, 1714, Colonial Court Records, CCR 189; Council Minutes, April 2, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 304.

[82]Worley's name appears in Hawks' list of attorney generals with the date, August 2, 1716, following it. Since there are no records which indicate that he served, it is assumed that this is an appointment date. Hawks, History of North Carolina, II, 140.

[83]Instructions issued to Governor Burrington by the Lords Proprietors indicate that James Stanaway was appointed attorney general; however, there is no evidence to indicate that he served. Instructions to Burrington, June 3, 1723, Council Journals, 1712-1728, 294.

[84]Montgomery is reported to have been appointed attorney general in 1723; however, no evidence could be found to indicate that he served at this time. Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 445.

[85]Little was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Richardson and qualified before the Council. His resignation was announced at a council meeting on November 7, 1724. Council Minutes, April 2, 1724 and November 7, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 304, 324.

[86]Boyd was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Little and qualified before the council. He served until Little took over in 1725. Council Minutes, November 7, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 324.

[87]Little was commissioned by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the council. He apparently continued serving until 1731. Commission to William Little, March 25, 1725 and Council Minutes, July 17, 1725, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 342-343, 336.

[88]Connor was appointed by Governor Burrington and qualified before the council. He served only until Montgomery arrived. Council Minutes, March 30, 1731, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 48.

[89]Montgomery was appointed by the crown and qualified before the council. He was suspended by Burrington on September 29, 1734, but was either restored to office by Johnston or never left as he is considered the attorney general in November. He Continued serving until 1741 when he was appointed acting chief justice. Warrant appointing John Montgomery Attorney General of North Carolina, November 30, 1730, Entry Number 575, Calendar of State Papers, Colonial and West Indies, Vol. XXXVI, 1730, Cecil Headlam (editor), (London: His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1937), 376; Council Minutes, May 20, 1731, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 81; "Gov[erno]r Burrington to Lords of Trade," October 7, 1734, Saunders, Colonial Records, III, 629-630; Council Minutes, March 24, 1740/41, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 161.

[90]Hodgson was appointed by Burrington following the suspension of Montgomery and apparently qualified before the council. He served only until Governor Johnston took office in November, 1734. "Gov[erno]r Burrington to Lords of Trade," October 7, 1734, Saunders, Colonial Records, III, 629- 630.

[91]Anderson was appointed acting attorney general by Governor Johnston when Montgomery became chief justice. He served until Montgomery returned to service in 1742. Council Minutes, March 24, 1740/41, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 161.

[92]Montgomery served under his old commission until he was commissioned chief justice by the crown.

[93]Anderson was appointed permanent attorney general by Governor Johnston when Montgomery was commissioned chief justice. He qualified before the council and continued serving until Child took office in 1747. Council Minutes, July 26, 1743, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 201.

[94]Child was appointed by the crown and qualified on May 16, 1747. He served until he returned to England in 1752. Warrant appointing Thomas Child Attorney General of North Carolina, February 28, 1745/46, Clark, State Records, XI, 109; Commission to Child, May 16, 1747, Land Grant Records, Book XIX, 1764-1768, North Carolina Department of the Secretary of State, Raleigh, 287-289, hereinafter cited as Land Grant Records, XIX.

[95]Nicholas was apparently appointed to serve when Child left North Carolina to go to England. He was reported ill in October, 1755; however, there is no evidence that anyone else was appointed until 1756. Message to Council, October 14, 1755, Saunders, Colonial Records, V, 515-516.

[96]Elliot was appointed by Governor Dobbs to replace Nicholas, and apparently qualified before Dobbs. He only served a few months before he died. Commission to Charles Elliott, April 6, 1756, Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 457.

[97]Jones was appointed by Governor Dobbs to replace Elliott and presumably qualified before him. He served until Child took over in 1761. Commission to Robert Jones, Jr., October 4, 1756, Commissions, 1754-1767, 5, 60.

[98]Child was commissioned by the crown and apparently qualified before Governor Dobbs. He served until he resigned in 1761. Patent to appoint Thomas Child, July 6, 1759 and Commission to Thomas Child, November 6, 1759, Commissions, 1754-1767, 135, 138-139; Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 621.

[99]Jones was appointed by the crown and apparently qualified before Governor Dobbs. He served until his death on October 2, 1766. Warrant appointing Robert Jones Attorney General of North Carolina, April 14, 1761, CO 324/40, English Records, ER 15-22; Commission to Robert Jones, July 25, 1761, Commission Book, 1761-1772, 1; Letter from Governor Tryon to Earl of Shelburne, January 12, 1767, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 425-426.

[100]Jones was appointed by Governor Tryon to replace Jones and served until McQuire took office in 1767. Letter from Governor Tryon to Earl of Shelburne, January 12, 1767, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 425-426.

[101]McGuire was commissioned by the crown to replace Jones and qualified before the council. He presumably served until the Revolution. Patent apinting Thomas McGuire Attorney General of North Carolina, May 22, 1767, Commissions Book, 1761-1722, GO3, 45; Council Minutes, October 14, 1767, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 59.

Treasurers

[102]The right to appoint colonial treasurers was reserved by the lower house. This policy along with the extensive control exercised by the assembly over other financial matters was a constant source of friction between the governor and the lower house.

Treasurers were usually appointed in conjunction with money bills during the early years of the office, but later were appointed on bills passed specifically for the purpose of appointing treasurers. Treasurers were apparently first appointed by the assembly during the Tuscarora War in 1711 when several commissioners were appointed to issue paper currency. This practice continued until 1731 when George Burrington, the first royal governor, questioned the right of the assembly and tried to appoint his own treasurer. The lower house resisted this infringement upon their rights, and Burrington sought support from royal authorities in England. Crown officials were not anxious to upset the lower house and hesitated supporting Burrington and those who followed him.

In 1729 the complexity of financial matters which concerned the treasurer was so great that the Assembly created the office of precinct treasurer. Perhaps the most significant practice regarding the appointments of these precinct treasurers was the practice of submitting a list of two or three nominees to the governor for final decision. However, the practice of "filling the offices of precinct treasurer seems to have fallen into disuse" by 1735 when there apparently are only two treasurers for the entire province—one for the northern district and one for the southern. This division continued for the remainder of the colonial period. (See Jack P. Greene's "The North Carolina Lower House and the Power to Appoint Public Treasurers, 1711-1775," North Carolina Historical Review, XL, (January, 1963). 37-53, for short study of the governor—assembly conflict over appointing treasurers.)

[103]Moseley was appointed as one of the commissioners to issue paper currency in 1711 and was apparently appointed as public treasurer in 1715. He seems to have continued serving until 1735 when the office was divided into two positions with a treasurer appointed for the northern district and another appointed for the southern. Moseley was appointed treasurer of the southern district and continued in that capacity until his death in 1749. Jack P. Greene, "The North Carolina Lower House and the Power to Appoint Public Treasurers, 1711-1775." North Carolina Historical Review, XL, (January, 1963), 39-41, 43-45, hereinafter cited as Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775"; Council Journal, April 26-27, May 1, 1731 and Burrington to Board of Trade, May 19, 1733, Saunders, Colonial Records, III, 265-269, 475-489.

[104]Smith was appointed by Governor Burrington and the council, but there is no evidence that he ever served—probably due to the response of the lower house. Council Minutes, April 22, 1731, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 51.

[105]Downing was appointed by the legislature as treasurer for the northern district and served until his death in 1739. Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775," 43.

[106]Smith was appointed on November 21, 1739 by the governor and council to act as temporary treasurer, following the death of Downing. Council Journal, November 21, 1739, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 354.

[107]Hodgson was apparently appointed by the assembly in August, 1740 to replace Downing and served until 1748. "An Act to establish and confirm John Hodgson, Esq., Treasurer . . .", Chapter V, Laws of North Carolina, 1740, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 149.

[108]Barker appointed by the assembly in April, 1848 and served until he resigned in 1752. "An Act to appoint Public Treasurers," Chapter 1, Laws of North Carolina, 1748 and "An Act for appointing a Treasurer for the Counties of . . . [Northern District]," Chapter III, Laws of North Carolina, 1752, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 273-275, 378-380.

[109]Allen was appointed by the general assembly in November, 1749 to replace Moseley and served until his death in 1750. "An Act to appoint a Public Treasurer, in room of Edward Moseley, Esq., deceased," Chapter V, Laws of North Carolina, 1749 and "An Act to appoint a Public Treasurer in the room of Eleazer Allen, Esq., deceased," Chapter 1, Laws of North Carolina, 1750, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 331-332, 349-350.

[110]Starkey was appointed in July, 1750 to replace Eleazer Allen and served until his death in 1765. "An Act to appoint a Public Treasurer in the room of Eleazer Allen, Esq., deceased," Chapter I, Laws of North Carolina, 1750, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 349-350; Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775," 51.

[111]Haywood was appointed to replace Barker and served until he apparently resigned in 1754. "An Act for appointing a Treasurer for the Northern counties. . . ." Chapter III, Laws of North Carolina, 1752, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 378-380.

[112]Barker was appointed in 1754 to replace Haywood and served until he apparently resigned in 1764. Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775," 45-50.

[113]Montford was appointed in February, 1764 to replace Barker and served until 1775. "An Act to appoint Public Treasurers," Chapter X, Laws of 1764, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 618-619.

[314]Swann was appointed by Governor Tryon in 1765 to act as a temporary replacement for the deceased Starkey. Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775," 51.

[115]Ashe was appointed in November 1766 to replace Starkey and served until he was replaced by Caswell in 1773. "An Act to appoint a Public Treasurer of the Northern District and other Purposes," Chapter VII, Laws of North Carolina, 1766, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 723-725; Greene, "Treasurers, 1711-1775," 51-52.

[116]Caswell was appointed in 1773 to replace Ashe and served until the "end" of royal government in 1775. "An Act for appointing Public Treasurers, and directing their Duty in office," Chapter V, Laws of North Carolina, Clark, State Records, XXIII, 904-906.

[117]Johnston and Caswell were appointed treasurers of the northern and southern districts respectively on September 8, 1775 by the provincial congress. Caswell served until his election as governor in 1776 and Johnston served until his re-election in May, 1777, but he declined to serve. Entry for September 8, 1775, "The Journal of the proceedings of the Provincial Congress of North Carolina, held at Hillsborough 20th August, A.D. 1775," Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 203-204.

[118]See footnote 117.

COLONIAL ASSEMBLY

[1]The scarcity of records pertaining to the assembly during the early Proprietary period makes it difficult to compile complete lists of assemblies. The editor has tried to establish as accurately as possible, the counties of representation through extensive examination of court records, juryman rolls, vestry records, and land grant records. Unless otherwise stated, the material found in the following footnotes was obtained from the Legislative Journals in Saunders' Colonial Records.

[2]The date of this assembly is uncertain, it may have been 1703 or 1704/05. "Address from House of Burgesses to the Governor and Council," Hathaway, Historical Register, II, 223.

[34]"Assembly of 1708", Hathaway, Historical Register, II, 225.

[4]Moore did not attend the second session, and Ashe was chosen [on April 5, 1726] to replace him.

[5]See footnote 4.

[6]Lloyd successfully challenged the election of Parris as representative from Edenton, and Lloyd took his seat on April 11, 1726.

[7]See footnote 6.

[8]The members of this assembly are not known since no journal could be found; however, there is evidence that an assembly met. 1729 Folder, Legislative Papers, LP 1, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[9]This assembly was prorogued by Governor Burrington on September 6, 1731. There is no evidence that a second session was ever held.

[10]Lowther was declared "not duly elected" on April 14, 1731, and a new writ of election issued.

[11]Lane successfully challenged the election of Hannis as representative from New Bern and Lane took his seat on April 14, 1731.

[12]See footnote 11.

[13]"Several Gent[lemen] that were elected for the new precincts of Onslow, Edgecombe and Bladen appeared and the House was of the opinion that they ought not to qualify as Members. . . ." After deliberating the House reaffirmed this stand declaring that the governor did not have the authority to create new precincts without consulting the lower house. The assembly was dissolved by Governor Burrington on July 18, 1733.

[14]On July 13 Williams declined to serve any longer due to ill health, and Vail was appointed to replace him.

[15]See footnote 14.

[16]The assembly adjourned on November 8, 1733 due to the lack of a quorum in the upper House.

[17]The assembly adjourned on November 13, 1734 after receiving word that the new governor, Gabriel Johnston had published his commission.

[18]The seat of Hodgson was challenged by John Harrell, but the assembly decided in favor of Hodgson on November 8, 1734.

[19]The assembly was prorogued until July 1, 1735 and there is no record of another session.

[20]Harrold and Hodgson tied for one of the seats; however, Harrold was declared the winner by the assembly on January 17, 1735.

[21]See footnote 20.

[22]Howe's seat was successfully contested by Moore who took his seat on January 17.

[23]See footnote 22.

[24]The journals for the lower house are apparently missing for this assembly.

[25]The assembly was prorogued until March 1, 1737 and then prorogued again until March 3; however, when they met they were dissolved by the governor.

[26]Turner's seat was successfully contested by Rigby who took his seat on February 13, 1738/39.

[27]See footnote 26.

[28]The first name of Butler and the county of representation for Butler, Davis and Moore could not be determined.

[29]See footnote 28.

[30]See footnote 28.

[31]Castelaw's seat was declared vacant, because he also had been elected to represent Bertie. A new writ of election was issued.

[32]Kennedy, who was probably elected to replace Castelaw, took his seat for the first time during the second session.

[33]Wilmington was given representation during the first session and Farris took his seat during the second.

[34]Complete Journals for this assembly are missing.

[35]Governor Johnston reported to the council on September 21, 1741 that enough "Burgesses" had met to conduct business, but that not enough councilmen were present to form a quorum. He then inquired of the chief justice whether the lower house could conduct business. The chief justice advised against it suggesting that Nathaniel Rice who was preparing to leave the colony be requested to attend. He arrived on September 24, making a quorum of the council; however, there is no evidence that any business was conducted by either house as an assembly.

[36]An assembly was apparently held on March 15, 1742/43; however there is no journal to determine the membership or what, if any, business transpired. Several laws were signed by Governor Johnston on April 21, 1743 which indicates that this might have been the closing day. Clark, Laws, 1715-1776, State Records, XXIII, 207.

[37]The lack of sufficient members prohibited the house from conducting any real business. The governor prorogued it once from July twentieth to the twenty-second and then again until the twenty-sixth Finally on July twenty-seventh, he prorogued it until "the second tuesday in November next at Edenton."

[38]An assembly was called by the governor for "the second tuesday in November next at Edenton;" however, there are no records to indicate whether a full assembly met and conducted business.

[39]This assembly was prorogued from February twenty-first until the twenty-third and was dissolved by the governor on March eighth.

[40]Porter died sometime in late 1743, and a new writ of election was issued.

[41]Moore was elected to replace him and took his seat on February 23, 1743/44.

[42]Thomas Lee was apparently elected to replace Stephen Lee and took his seat February 23, 1743/44,

[44]Ormond was apparently elected to replace Turner.

[45]The full names of Hill and Smith could not be found, nor could county of representation for Barker, Hill, Reed, Smith or Guin.

[46]See footnote 45.

[47]See footnote 45.

[48]See footnote 45.

[49]See footnote 45.

[50]He died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[51]See footnote 50.

[52]He died without taking his seat.

[53]See footnote 52.

[54]The county of representation for Stille could not be determined.

[55]Swann's seat was declared vacated on June 12, when he chose to represent Onslow County. A new writ of election was issued.

[56]Marsden was elected to replace Swann and took his seat on November 21, 1746.

[57]Clark died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[58]Granger was elected to replace Clark and took his seat on November 25, 1746.

[59]Neither the first name, nor the county of representation could be determined for Stewart.

[60]The third session was prorogued by Governor Johnston until September 1748, and there is evidence that this fourth session was concluded on October 15, 1748; however, the journals seem to be missing. Clark, State Records, XXIV, 297.

[61]There is no evidence other than the numbering of the sessions that a fifth session was ever held.

[62]Anson County was not created until 1750. Howell and Robinson took their seats in September, 1751.

[63]See footnote 62.

[64]Peyton died prior to the sixth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[65]Ormont was elected to replace Peyton and took his seat on September 26, 1749.

[66]Because he was a Quaker, Borden refused to take the oath prescribed for office holders. His request for acceptance of "his solemn affirmation" was apparently denied, and a new writ of election was issued.

[67]Bell was elected to replace Borden and took his seat on October 2, 1747.

[68]Duplin County was not created until 1750. Brice and Houston took their seats in September, 1751.

[69]See footnote 68.

[70]Howell apparently died at some time prior to the tenth session.

[71]Kerney was apparently elected to replace Howell and took his seat on September 27, 1751.

[72]Jones apparently died during or shortly after the tenth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[73]Harris was elected to replace Jones and took seat on March 31, 1752.

[74]Calfe did not take his seat until the eleventh session.

[75]Swann was appointed to the council by Governor Johnston in September, 1751 and his seat in the lower house vacated. A new writ of election was issued.

[76]Ashe was elected to replace Swann and took his seat on March 31, 1752.

[77]Carruthers was reported dead on April 13, 1752, and a new writ of election was issued.

[78]DeRosset did not take his seat until the tenth session.

[79]Stringer died without taking his seat and a new writ of election was issued.

[80]Bryan was elected to replace Stringer and took his seat on February 21, 1754.

[81]Swann was elected speaker at the third session when Campbell was too ill to attend, and he continued serving the remainder of the assembly.

[82]Lovick died prior to the start of the eighth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[83]Houston was elected to replace Lovick and took his seat on November 23, 1759.

[84]The seats of Blount and Walton were declared vacated because they held the office of inspector within their county. A new writ of election was issued.

[85]See footnote 84.

[86]Johnston was elected to replace Blount and took his seat on November 27, 1759.

[88]Brown was expelled from the house on December 5, 1758 for unworthy conduct.

[89]Surry disqualified himself because he had accepted the office of inspector with his country.

[90]Kinchen died prior to the seventh session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[91]Harvey died prior to the eighth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[92]Sinclaire was reported dead during the first session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[93]Smith was elected to replace Sinclaire and took his seat on September 25, 1755.

[94]Barrow was elected to replace Harvey and took his seat on November 23, 1759.

[95]Brothers seat was declared vacated on May 16, 1759 because he held the office of inspector within his county. A new writ of election was issued.

[96]Murden died prior to the ninth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[97]Taylor was elected to replace Brothers and took his seat on November 23, 1759.

[98]Carter was expelled from the house on November 23, 1757 for the mishandling of funds, and a new writ of election issued.

[99]Waddell was elected to replace Carter and took his seat on November 28, 1757.

[100]Ormond died prior to the sixth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[101]Coutanch was elected to replace Ormond and took his seat on November 25, 1758.

[102]Brunswick was granted borough representation in 1757. Moore was elected and took his seat on November 22, 1757.

[103]Davis' election was declared void during the first session because he already held the office of sheriff within his county. A new writ of election was issued.

[104]Rew was elected to replace Davis, but died prior to the start of the second session. A new writ of election was issued.

[105]Davis was elected to replace Rew and took his seat on September 31, 1755.

[106]The election for Granville County was declared illegal on April 25, 1760, and a new writ was issued. Benton and Harris were elected and took their seats on May 16, 1760.

[107]See footnote 106.

[108]The election of Brown was declared void, and his seat vacated on April 30, 1750. A new writ of election was issued; however, no one had appeared by the fifth session and another writ was issued.

[109]Blount died prior to the fifth session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[110]Moore was appointed to the Governors Council and forced to vacate his right to a seat in the lower house. A new writ of election was issued.

[111]Dry was elected to replace Moore and took his seat during the third session.

[112]The first session was prorogued until November 19, 1761. Attempts were made by Governor Dobbs to call the assembly, but after several further prorogations covering 19 days, a quorum had still not been obtained and the assembly was dissolved. Dobbs to the Board of Trade, December, 1761, Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 595-596.

[113]Hutchins was disqualified from serving, because he already held the office of sheriff within his county when he was elected. A new writ of election was issued.

[114]Swann was elected, but declined to serve due to ill health, and John Ashe was elected to replace him.

[115]See footnote 114.

[116]Brunswick County was not created until 1764. Howe and McGuire took their seats on October 26, 1764.

[118]Bute County was not created until 1764. Bell and Person took their seats on October 27, 1764.

[119]See footnote 118.

[120]Smith died prior to the third session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[121]Starkey died prior to the third session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[122]Crawford resigned his seat prior to the second session; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[123]Paine died prior to the second session, and a new writ was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[124]The seat of Codgell was declared vacated on December 4, 1767, because he had accepted the office of inspector within his county.

[125]Williams died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[126]Jones died without taking his seat, and a new writ of election was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[127]Swann died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[128]The election of Gordon was declared illegal by the assembly on November 8, 1766. His seat was vacated and given to Blinn.

[129]See footnote 128.

[130]Graves died without taking his seat, and a new writ of election was issued.

[131]Walsh was elected to replace Graves and took his seat on December 11, 1767.

[132]The county of representation for Jones could not be determined; however, it is probable that he was elected to replace Robert Jones of Northampton.

[133]Baker died without taking his seat, and a new writ of election was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[134]Lockhart died prior to the second assembly, and a new writ of election was issued; however, there is no evidence that anyone was elected to replace him.

[135]Gibbs died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[136]Waddell was elected to replace Gibbs and took his seat on November 19, 1771.

[137]Person died prior to the second session, and a new writ of election was issued.

[175]Brown was elected to replace Ormond and took his seat on March 2, 1774.

[176]Irwin was denied his seat when it was decided that Tarborough did not have sufficient population to merit representation.

[177]The assembly was dissolved by Governor Martin on April 8, 1775 and no other assemblies were called.

COLONIAL COURTS

Chief Justices

[1]Prior to the creation of the office of chief justice, it was customary for the person whose name first appeared on the court commission to be designated as "chief judge." In 1712 the Lords Proprietors felt it prudent to establish the office of chief justice and to issue a separate commission for the office.

[2]Prior was appointed by the Lords Proprietors, but never served. Commission to Arthur Prior, March 6, 1712, Entry Number 340, Calendar of State Papers, XXVI, 1711-1712, 243; Paschal, "Proprietary North Carolina," 342.

[3]Gale was apparently appointed by Hyde, and began serving on July 1, 1712. Council Minutes, April 14, 1713, Saunders, Colonial Records, II, 32-35.

[4]Gale was appointed by the Lords Proprietors and qualified before the council. He served until he left North Carolina in 1717. Minutes of a Meeting of the Lords Proprietor, March 26, 1715, CO 5/292, English Records, ER 14-3; Council Minutes, January 21, 1715/16 and August 1, 1717, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 122, 148.

[5]Knight was appointed by Governor Eden to replace Gale and qualified before the council. He served until Jones took over in 1718. Saunders, Colonial Records, II, 291.

[6]Jones was apparently appointed by Governor Eden—no record of any commission issued by the Lords Proprietors could be found. The date of his assumption of duties is not known; however in Volume II of Hawk's History of North Carolina, the date November 4, 1718 appears after his name and could be the date of his appointment and/or qualification. He was serving by December 30, 1718 and continued until his death in 1721. Hawks, History of North Carolina, II, 139; Council Minutes, December 30, 1718, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 171.

[7]Gale was appointed by the Lords Proprietors and qualified sometime early in 1722. He continued serving until his departure from the colony sometime between August and October, 1724. Commission to Christopher Gale, March 21, 1720/21, and Council Minutes, August 3, 1724 and October 24, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 218, 320-321.

[8]Pollock was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Gale and qualified before the council. He served until Gale returned in 1725. Council Minutes, October 24, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 320-321.

[9]Gale served under his old commission and qualified before the council. He apparently served until Smith took over in 1731. Council Minutes, July 17, 1725, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 336.

[10]Smith was commissioned by the crown and qualified before the council. He had left the Colony by July 27, 1731. Commission to William Smith, November 30, 1730 and Council Minutes, March 9, 1731, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 179, 47-48.

[11]Palin was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Smith and qualified before the council. His letter of resignation was presented to the council on October 18, 1732. Council Minutes, July 27, 1731 and October 18, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 99-100, 157.

[12]Little was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Palin and qualified before the council, and served until his death sometime in August or September, 1734. Council Minutes, October 18, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 157; Council Minutes, September 26-28, 1734, CO 5/306, English Records, ER 15-1.

[13]Hanmer was appointed by President Rice to replace Little and qualified before the council. C ouncil Minutes, September 26-28, 1734, English Records, ER 15-1.

[14]Smith was commissioned by the crown and qualified before the council. He served until March 24, 1741 when he was granted a leave of absence by the governor. Commission to William Smith, April 17, 1734, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 180; Council Minutes, March 24, 1741, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 161.

[15]Montgomery was appointed by Governor Johnston to act during Smith's absence and probably qualified before the council shortly afterwards. Council Minutes, March 24, 1741, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 591.

[16]Montgomery was appointed as permanent chief justice following news of Smith's death. He continued serving until his death in early 1744. (His will was probated on May 22, 1744.) Council Minutes, July 26, 1743, Council Journal, 1734-1743, 201; Hathaway, Historical Register, I, 344.

[17]Moseley was appointed by Governor Johnston to replace Montgomery and apparently qualified before him. He served until Hall took over in 1745. Commission to Edward Moseley, March 7, 1744, Land Grant Records, XIX, 240.

[18]A warrant appointing Hall was issued by the crown on April 21, 1744 and a commission was issued by Governor Johnston on May 2, 1745. He qualified before him on May 23 and continued serving until he departed the colony in 1749. Clark, State Records, XI, 74; Commission to Enoch Hall, May 2, 1745 and Certification of Qualification, May 23, 1745, Land Grant Records, XIX, 248.

[19]Allen was apparently appointed by Governor Johnston to replace Hall and served as chief justice during the September term of the court. It is not known when he was appointed. He died sometime in 1749 or early 1750. Minutes, 1745-1751, General Court Papers, CCR 102, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 99, hereinafter cited as Minutes, 1745-1751.

[20]Hassell was appointed to replace Allen and began serving in 1750 at the March term of the court, but the date of his appointment could not be found. He continued serving until Henley took office in 1755. Minutes, 1745-1751, 99.

[21]A warrant for Henley's appointment was apparently issued by the Crown on May 13, 1755. He was commissioned by Governor Dobbs on November 15 and qualified on December 5. He continued serving until his death in March or April 1758. Saunders, Colonial Records, V, 403; Clark, State Records, XI, 124; Commission to Peter Henly, November 15, 1755 and Certification of Qualification, December 5, 1755, Commissions, 1754-1767, 34-35, 36.

[22]Hasell was appointed by Governor Dobbs to replace Henly and continued serving until Berry took over in 1759. Council Minutes, April 28, 1758, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 123.

[23]A warrant for Berry's appointment was issued by the crown on November 27, 1758. He was commissioned by Governor Dobbs on November 6, 1759 and qualified before the council. He died on December 29, 1765 having shot himself in the head. Warrant appointing Charles Berry Chief Justice, November 27, 1758, Saunders, Colonial Records, V, 963-964; Commission to Charles Berry, November 6, 1759, Commission, 1750-1767, 101; Council Minutes. December 6, 1759, Council Journal, 1755-1764, 161; Letter from Governor Tryon to the Board of Trade, February 1, 1766, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 158-161.

[24]Hasell was appointed by Governor Tryon to replace Berry and qualified before Governor Tryon. He continued serving until Howard took over. Commission to James Hassell, January 7, 1766, Commission Book, 1761-1772, 37-38; Council Minutes, January 6, 1766, Council Journal, 1764-1755, 27.

[25]Letters of patent for Howard's appointment were apparently issued on July 9, 1766 and a commission issued by Governor Tryon on January 23, 1767. He qualified before the council and continued serving until 1774 when he was apparently granted a leave of absence. Letters of Patent, July 9, 1766 and Commission to Martin Howard, January 9, 1767, Commission Book, 1761-1772, 42, 43; Council Minutes, January 23, 1767, Council Journal, 1764-1775, 46.

[26]Hasell was appointed by Governor Martin to act in Howard's absence and qualified before the Council. Council Minutes, August 12, 1774, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 1028.

Vice-Admiralty Judges

[27]Hill was appointed by the crown and commissioned by the governor of Virginia to serve as judge for both Virginia and North Carolina. He qualified before the Virginia Council and apparently served until his death in 1700. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1697-1701, lvi; Commission to Edward Hill, March 8, 1697/8, CO 5/1310, English Records, 71.1032, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh; The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography, Vol. III, 1896, 156-158.

[28]Walker was apparently appointed by Harvey shortly after receiving a letter from Hill informing Harvey of Hill's commission as admiralty judge for both Virginia and North Carolina. Walker seems to have continued acting as judge even after his election as president of the council following Harvey's death on July 3, 1699. Walker died on April 14, 1704. Parker, Higher-Court Records, 1697-1701, lvi-lix.

[29]Glover sat as "admiralty judge" under a new commission issued by Governor Daniel following Walker's death. Records for this period are incomplete. Court Minutes, October 3, 1704, Minutes of the Court of Vice-Admiralty, Colonial Court Records, CCR 189, North Carolina Department of Archves and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Minutes of Vice-Admiralty Courts, CCR 189.

[30]Turbill was appointed judge of the admiralty by the Lords Proprietors, and a warrant issued by the Lords of Admiralty on March 17, 1709; however, there is no evidence that he ever served. Warrant to John Turbill, March 17, 1709, Entry Number 420, Calendar of State Papers, XXIV, 1708-1709, 254.

[31]Lovick was appointed by President Pollock and apparently held his first court on May 2, 1722. Richard Everard to Edmund Porter, July 23, 1730, Vice-Admiralty Papers, Vol. I, 1697-1738, CCR 142, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 25-26, hereinafter cited as Vice-Admiralty Papers, I.

[32]When Richardson was appointed and when he qualified are not known. He did act as judge on August 12, 1723 according to available sources and was still serving when he died in 1724. Richard Everard to Edmund Porter, July 23, 1730, Vice-Admiralty Papers, I, 25-26. Council Minutes, April 2, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 304.

[33]Moseley was appointed by Governor Burrington to replace Richardson and qualified before the council. His resignation was presented to the council on November 7, 1724. Council Minutes, April 2, 1724 and November 7, 1724, Council Journal, 1712, 1728, 304, 327.

[34]Maule was appointed by Governor Burrington upon the resignation of Moseley and qualified before the council. It is not known when he terminated service. Council Minutes, November 7, 1724, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 327.

[35]Moseley was appointed by Governor Everard and qualified before the Council. Extant records do not indicate that anyone else served prior to Porter's taking office in 1728 and it is possible that Moseley continued in office until Porter took over. Council Minutes, October 5, 1725, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 374.

[36]Porter's commission as judge is dated June 30, 1727 and was recorded in the secretary's office in North Carolina on January 29, 1727/28. Presumably he qualified shortly before this date. The earliest court records indicate that he was acting by April 23, 1728. He was suspended by Burrington on January 21, 1731/32 when charges of misconduct were brought against him. Commission to Porter, June 30, 1727, Council Journal, 1712-1728, 443-446; "Memo" by Porter, April 23, 1728, Vice-Admiralty Court Records, Colonial Court Records, CCR 191, Folder 1720-1729, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Vice-Admiralty Court Records, CCR 191; Council Minutes, January 21, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 137-138.

[37]Gale was appointed by Governor Burrington to act until "his majesty's council or the Right Honorable the Lords of Admiralty" decide what to about Porter. He qualified before the council but when he terminated service is not known. Extant records indicate that he did not hold court after June, 1734. Since he also held the Office of surveyor general during 1734 and 1735, his deputies probably held court in his absence. This is the case on at least two instances in 1735. Council Minutes, January 22, 1732, Council Journal, 1729-1734, 140-141; "Decree by Gale;" June 3, 1734, and Court Minutes, March 26, 1735 and July 28, 1735, Vice Admiralty Papers, I, 88, 92, 95.

[38]Porter began acting as judge under his old commission following Governor Johnston's proclamation on November 2, 1734—he and Gale may have served simultaneously in 1734 and 1735. On October 14, 1736 Porter was officially reinstated as Judge by Governor Johnston and continued serving until his death in late 1738. Council Minutes, October 14, 1734, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 223-224.

[39]Winright held court during 1735 as deputy vice-admiralty judge. Court Minutes, March 26, 1735 and July 28, 1735, Vice-Admiralty Papers, I, 92-95.

[40]Blackwell held court as deputy judge during 1737. Court Minutes, June 22-28, 1737 and Account Records, July 5, 1737, Vice-Admiralty Papers, I, 113-121.

[41]Hodgson was appointed by the governor to replace Porter and qualified before the council. Hodgson was still serving on March 29, 1742 and was replaced sometime during the fall of 1742. Council Minutes, March 6, 1739, Saunders, Colonial Records, IV, 345; Bill of Indictment, March 29, 1742, Vice-Admiralty Papers, Vol. II, 1739-1746, CCR 143, North Carolina Archives and History, Raleigh, 54, hereinafter cited as ice-Admiralty Papers, II.

[42]Anderson was presumably appointed to replace Hodgson sometime during the Fall of 1742. He was already serving by January 3, 1742/43. Extant records indicate that he was still serving as late as December 3, 1750 and possibly served until Corbin took over in 1752. Court Minutes, January 3, 1742/43, Vice Admiralty Papers, II, 42-49; Anderson to officer of Vice-Admiralty Court, December 3, 1750, Vice-Admiralty Court Records, CCR 191.

[43]Faris was instructed by Anderson to hold court as deputy judge at various times when Anderson was busy in another capacity. Court Minutes, January 3-29, 1742/43, March 23, 1743/44, April 10, 1744, February 12, 1744/45 and March 20, 1744/45, Vice-Admiralty Papers, II, 42-49, 63, 108, 97, 98.

[44]Lovett served as judge-surrogate of vice-admiralty on November 3, 1748. Vice-Admiralty Court Records, CCR 191.

[45]When Corbin was appointed is unknown; extant records indicate that he may have been acting as early as March 5, 1752. He was on the council by September 26, 1751 and may have been appointed shortly afterwards. He continued to serve until McCulloch took over in 1755. Court Minutes, April 8, 1752, Vice-Admiralty Court Records, CCR 191; Council Minutes, September 26, 1751. Council Journals, 1752-1754, 21; Vice-Admiralty Papers, Vol. IV, 1754-1759, CCR 145, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 35, 38, hereinafter cited as Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV.

[46]McCulloch was appointed by the crown and was serving as judge by April 19, 1755. He served until his death sometime during late 1755. Patent appointing McCulloch Judge of Admiralty, December 6, 1754, Commissions, 1754-1767, 1-7; Robard McCordy to McCulloch, April 19, 1755, Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV, 37.

[47]Corbin was apparently appointed to replace McCulloch. He held court in December, 1755 and probably continued serving until Ross took over in 1756 or 1757. Court Minutes, December 2-25, 1755, Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV, 43.

[48]Charlton held court as a surrogate judge presumably by Corbin's instructions on March 30, 1756 and again on October 30, 1756. Court Minutes, March 30, 1756, Vice-Admiralty Court Records, CCR 191; Court Minutes, October 30, 1756, Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV, 44.

[49]When Ross took office is not known; the first records of his being vice-admiralty judge are in May, 1757. He continued serving until his death in 1760. Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV, 48; "The Colony, Its Climate, Soil, Population, Government, Resources, & c," Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 621.

[50]Charlton was appointed by Ross on May 27, 1757 as his surrogate judge. He acted in this capacity throughout 1757 and 1758. Commission to Charlton, May 27, 1757 and Charlton to Thomas Jones, May 29, 1758 and July 20, 1758, Vice-Admiralty Papers, IV, 48, 50, 53.

[51]Harron held court as a surrogate judge sometime during 1759. The spelling of his name is uncertain due to the lack of document clarity. Vice Admiralty Papers, IV, 54.

[52]McGuire was appointed to replace Ross, but the date he took office is unknown. "The Colony, Its Climate, Soil, Population, Government, Resources, & c," Saunders, Colonial Records, VI, 621.

[53]McQuire was commissioned by Dobbs and presumably qualified the same day or shortly afterwards. He appears to have continued serving until 1766 or 1767. Commission to McGuire, December 6, 1763, Commissions Book, 1761-1772, 16-17.

[54]Gordon was appointed surrogate judge to McGuire at some time prior to July 11, 1766. Court Minutes, July [11], 1766, Minutes of the Court of the Court of Vice-Admiralty, 1766-1771, John Gray Blount Papers, PC 193, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Vice-Admiralty Court Minutes, 1766-1771.

[55]Gordon was appointed judge by Governor Tryon and qualified before him at some time prior to December 9, 1766. He apparently continued serving until early 1768; however, records indicate that he is no longer serving in March of 1768. Court Minutes, December 9, 1766, Vice-Admiralty Court Minutes, 1766-1771; Tryon to Earl of Shelburne, March 14, 1768, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 698.

[56]There is no evidence to indicate that Faris ever served. The only reference which could be found is in "An Account of the Establishment of Vice-Admiralty Court in His Majesty's Several Colonies of North America," and is dated April 30, 1767. Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 459-460.

[57]Dewey was apparently appointed to replace Gordon, but extant records do not reveal his dates of service; however, he was serving by March 14, 1768 and appears to have been serving for some time prior to this date. Tryon to the Earl of Shelburne, March 14, 1768, Saunders, Colonial Records, VII, 497-498.

[58]Augustus Johnston was appointed by the crown as Admiralty Judge of the Charleston District which was one of four courts created by an act passed by Parliament in 1768. The Charleston Court had jurisdiction over causes in North and South Carolina, Georgia, and East and West Florida. He arrived in South Carolina in late Spring of 1770, but did not immediately publish his commission or organize his court. He returned to Newport, Rhode Island and apparently left behind a deputy to act for him. He did not reside in Charleston, but returned during the winter months to hold court—he left a deputy for the remaining time. He was still considered Judge at the outbreak of the war, although he never returned to Charleston, Carl Ubbelohde, The Vice-Admiralty Courts and the American Revolution, (Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press, 1960), 130-133, 134-135, 150-151, 191-192.

[59]Brimmage was appointed by Governor Tryon and qualified at court when he published his commission. His actual length of service is not known, however, he was still serving in April, 1771 and probably served on into early 1772. Court Minutes, January 15, 1770 and April 24, 1771, Vice-Admiralty Court Minutes, 1766-1771.

[60]Biggleston was apparently appointed by Governor Martin; however, no record of qualification or service could be found in extant records. Martin to Samuel Johnston, February 6, 1772, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 237.

[61]Charlton was to be appointed by Biggleston as his surrogate, but it is not known whether the appointment was ever made. Martin to Samuel Johnston, February 6, 1772, Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 237.

[62]Bowen held court as a surrogate judge on April 1, 1776. Court Minutes, April 1, 1776, Adm 1/3680, English Records, ER 2-5.

DOCUMENTS FOR THE COLONIAL PERIOD[1]

Charter to the Lords Proprietors of Carolina

March 24, 1663

INTRODUCTION

A charter granting the old Heath tract to eight prominent supporters of King Charles II passed the seals on March 24, 1663. The recipients of this charter had helped Charles regain the English throne after an exile following the execution of his father, Charles I. The territory granted, which had been called Carolana in the Heath charter, was now named Carolina, and the grantees were designated "the true and absolute Lords and Proprietaries" of the province.

All of the men to whom Carolina was granted had given King Charles substantial aid. Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, had gone into exile with Charles and had been a leader in restoring the monarchy. George Monck, Duke of Albemarle, who had been commander of troops under Cromwell, had used his influence over the army to provide decisive assistance in effecting the restoration of the monarchy. William Craven, Earl of Craven, had contributed large sums of money to Charles' cause, and he had lost much property through confiscation by the Commonwealth. John Berkeley, Baron Berkeley of Stratton, had gone to London to plead openly for the life of Charles I; consequently, he had been forced to flee to Paris and live in exile until the restoration. Anthony Ashley Cooper, Baron Ashley of Wimborne St. Giles, had supported Cromwell for a time, but later he had opposed Cromwell in Parliament and had been influential in returning power to that body as the first step in restoring the monarchy. Sir George Carteret, governor of the Isle of Jersey, had provided hospitality to Charles and his retinue during the exile and had contributed substantial sums for arms and ammunition for the royalist forces. Sir William Berkeley, governor or Virginia, had kept that colony loyal to Charles and had aided Cavaliers who sought refuge in Virginia. Sir John Colleton had raised troops and had contributed money for King Charles' cause; he later had become a planter in Barbados. Colleton and William Berkeley, both of whom had first-hand knowledge of America, appear to have taken the initiative in obtaining the charter.

[1]The documents and materials in this chapter were reprinted from Mattie Erma Edwards Parker's North Carolina Charters and Constitutions, 1578-1698, by permission of the North Carolina Department of Archives and History.

The 1663 charter provided the basis for the beginning of representative government in North Carolina. It required that, except in emergencies, laws, promulgated by the proprietors be enacted "with the advice, assent, and approbation of the Freemen of the said Province, or of the greater part of them, or of their Delegates or Deputies," whom the proprietors were directed to assemble from time to time "in such manner and form as to them shall seem best." Although at times during the proprietary period the assembly was allowed little power, popular participation in the government of the colony was maintained in form throughout the period. Eventually, the assembly became an important governmental agency in the colony.

Another significant feature of the 1663 charter is a provision giving the proprietors feudal powers equal to those formerly possessed by the bishop of the county palatine of Durham. This provision became the legal basis for many features of the Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina, by means of which the proprietors sought to establish a feudal type of society in their province. Another provision of the charter authorized the proprietors to create a local nobility in Carolina. This provision had little effect, as few noblemen were created by the proprietors.

A third important feature of the proprietary charter is a provision authorizing religious tolerance in Carolina. Although the Church of England was to be the established church in the province, the proprietors were given "Licence, liberty, and Authority" to grant "Indulgencies and Dispensations" to those "Who really in their Judgments, and for Conscience sake" could not conform to the ritual and beliefs of the established church. Such a provision had not appeared in previous charters involving the North Carolina area. In conformity with the religious tolerance provision, the proprietors permitted all religious groups to follow their own forms of worship in Carolina.

By 1663, a few settlers from the Virginia colony already had moved into the area adjoining Albemarle Sound. Although this settlement was thought to be included in the grant to the proprietors, it was not. The mistake seems not to have been discovered for some time, as the proprietors established government, granted land, and exercised other privileges in the Albemarle region, despite its omission from their grant. Soon after the charter was issued, the proprietors in England authorized their fellow proprietor in America, Sir William Berkeley, who was governor of Virginia, to exercise governmental authority over the Albemarle settlement. A year later, in October, 1664, William Drummond was appointed governor of Albemarle. It was not until June, 1665, however, that the proprietors were given legal authority over the settlement, by issuance of a second charter adding the Albemarle area and other territory to Carolina.

[2]Because of the similarities between the Charter of 1663 and that of 1665, only the first Charter is found herein. (The primary changes were to extend the boundaries of the Charter to cover the Albemarle Region not previously covered as well as its southern boundaries.)

THE CHARTER

CHARLES THE SECOND, BY THE grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, defender of the Faith, etc. TO ALL to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

WHEREAS, our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousins and Counsellors: Edward, Earl of Clarendon, our High Chancellor of England; and George, Duke of Albemarle, Master of our Horse and Captain General of all our Forces; Our right trusty and well-beloved William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Our right trusty and well-beloved Counsellor, Anthony, Lord Ashley, Chancellor of our Exchequer; Sir George Carterett, Knight and Baronet, Vice Chamberlain of our Household; And our trusty and well-beloved Sir William Berkley, Knight; and Sir John Colleton, Knight and Baronet, being excited with a laudable and pious zeal for the propagation of the Christian Faith and the enlargement of our Empire and Dominions, HAVE humbly besought leave of us, by their industry and Charge, to Transport and make an ample Colony of our Subjects, Natives of our Kingdom of England and elsewhere within our Dominions, unto a certain Country, hereafter described, in the parts of AMERICA not yet cultivated or planted, and only inhabited by some barbarous People who have no knowledge of Almighty God;

AND WHEREAS, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, have humbly besought us to give, grant, and Confirm unto them, and their heirs, the said Country, with Privileges and Jurisdictions requisite for the good Government and safety thereof:

KNOW YE, therefore, that We, favouring the pious and noble purpose of the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, Of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, HAVE given, granted, and Confirmed, AND, by this our present Charter, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give, grant, and Confirm, unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns:

ALL that Territory or Tract of ground, situate, lying, and being within our Dominions in America, extending from the North end of the Island called Luck Island, which lies in the Southern Virginia Seas and within six and Thirty Degrees of the Northern Latitude, and to the West as fas as the South Seas; and so Southerly as far as the River Saint Mathias, which borders upon the Coast of Florida, and within one and Thirty Degrees of Northern Latitude; and West in a direct Line as far as the South Seas aforesaid; Together with all and singular Ports, Harbours, Bays, Rivers, Isles, and Islets belonging unto the Country aforesaid; And also, all the Soil, Lands, Fields, Woods, Mountains, Farms, Lakes, Rivers, Bays, and Islets situate or being within the Bounds or Limits aforesaid; with the Fishing of all sorts of Fish, Whales, Sturgeons, and all other Royal Fishes in the Sea, Bays, Islets, and Rivers within the premises, and the Fish therein taken;

AND moreover, all Veins, Mines, and Quarries, as well discovered as not discovered, of Gold, Silver, Gems, and precious Stones, and all other, whatsoever be it, of Stones, Metals, or any other thing whatsoever found or to be found within the Country, Isles, and Limits aforesaid;

AND FURTHERMORE, the Patronage and Advowsons of all the Churches and Chapels which, as Christian Religion shall increase within the Country, Isles, Islets, and Limits aforesaid, shall happen hereafter to be erected; Together with licence and power to Build and found Churches, Chapels, and Oratories in convenient and fit places within the said Bounds and Limits, and to cause them to be Dedicated and Consecrated according to the Ecclesiastical Laws of our Kingdom of England; Together with all and singular the like and as ample Rights, Jurisdictions, Privileges, Prerogatives, Royalties, Liberties, Immunities, and Franchises of what kind soever within the Country, Isles, Islets, and Limits aforesaid;

TO HAVE, use, exercise, and enjoy, and in as ample manner as any Bishop of Durham, in our Kingdom of England, ever heretofore have held, used, or enjoyed, or of right ought or could have, use, or enjoy.

AND them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and assigns, WE DO, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, make, Create, and Constitute the true and absolute Lords and Proprietaries of the Country aforesaid, and of all other the premises;

SAVING always, the Faith, Allegiance, and Sovereign Dominion due to us, our heirs and Successors, for the same; and Saving also, the right, title, and interest of all and every our Subjects of the English Nation which are now Planted within the Limits and bounds aforesaid, if any be;

TO HAVE, HOLD, possess, and enjoy the said Country, Isles, Islets, and all and singular other the premises; to them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, forever;

TO BE HELD of us, our heirs and Successors, as of our Manor of East Greenwich, in our County of Kent, in Free and Common Soccage, and not in Capite nor by knight's Service;

YIELDING AND PAYING yearly, to us, our heirs and Successors, for the same, the yearly Rent of Twenty Marks of Lawful money of England, at the Feast of All Saints, yearly, forever, The First payment thereof to begin and be made on the Feast of All Saints which shall be in the year of Our Lord One thousand six hundred Sixty and five; AND also, the fourth part of all Gold and Silver Ore which, within the limits aforesaid, shall, from time to time, happen to be found.

AND that the Country thus by us granted and described may be dignified with as large Titles and Privileges as any other parts of our Dominions and Territories in that Region:

KNOW YE, that We, of our further grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, HAVE thought fit to Erect the same Tract of Ground, Country, and Island into a Province, and, out of the fullness of our Royal power and Prerogative, WE DO, for us, our heirs and Successors, Erect, Incorporate, and Ordain the same into a province, and do call it the Province of CAROLINA, and so from henceforth will have it called.

AND FORASMUCH AS we have hereby made and Ordained the aforesaid Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, the true Lords and Proprietors of all the Province aforesaid:

KNOW YE, therefore, moreover, that We, reposing especial Trust and Confidence in their fidelity, Wisdom, Justice, and provident circumspection, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do Grant full and absolute power, by virtue of these presents, to them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, and their heirs, for the good and happy Government of the said Province:

TO ORDAIN, make, Enact, and under their Seals to publish any Laws whatsoever, either appertaining to the public State of the said Province or to the private utility of particular Persons, according to their best discretion, of and with the advice, assent, and approbation of the Freemen of the said Province, or of the greater part of them, or of their Delegates or Deputies; whom, for enacting of the said Laws, when and as often as need shall require, WE WILL that the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, and their heirs, shall, from time to time, assemble, in such manner and form as to them shall seem best;

AND the same Laws duly to execute upon all people within the said Province and Limits thereof for the time being, or which shall be Constituted under the power and Government of them, or any of them, either Sailing towards the said Province of CAROLINA or returning from thence towards England, or any other of our or foreign Dominions; by Imposition of penalties, Imprisonment, or any other punishment, YEA, if it shall be needful and the quality of the Offence require it, by taking away member and life, either by them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarindon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, and their heirs, or by them or their Deputies, Lieutenants, Judges, Justices, Magistrates, Officers, and Ministers, to be Ordained or appointed according to the tenor and true intention of these presents;

AND LIKEWISE, to appoint and establish any Judges or Justices, Magistrates or Officers whatsoever within the said Province, at Sea or land, in such manner and form as unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarindon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, or their heirs, shall seem most convenient;

ALSO, to remit, release, Pardon, and abolish, whether before Judgment or after, all Crimes and Offences whatsoever against the said Laws; and to do all and every other thing and things which unto the Complete establishment of Justice, unto Courts, Sessions, and forms of Judicature, and manners of proceeding therein, do belong, although in these presents express mention be not made thereof;

AND by Judges, by him or them delegated, to award Process, hold Pleas, and determine, in all the said Courts and Places of Judicature, all Actions, Suits, and Causes whatsoever, as well Criminal as Civil, real, mixt, personal, or of any other kind or nature whatsoever;

WHICH LAWS, so as aforesaid, to be published OUR PLEASURE IS, and We do enjoin, require, and Command shall be absolute, firm, and available in law; And that all the liege People of us, our heirs and Successors, within the said Province of CAROLINA, do observe and keep the same inviolably in those parts, so far as they concern them, under the pains and penalties therein expressed or to be expressed;

PROVIDED, nevertheless, that the said laws be consonant to reason and, as near as may be conveniently, agreeable to the laws and Customs of this our Kingdom of England.

AND because such assemblies of Freeholders cannot be so suddenly called as there may be occasion to require the same:

WE DO, therefore, by these presents, give and Grant unto the said Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, by themselves or their Magistrates in that behalf lawfully authorized, full power and authority, from time to time, to make and Ordain fit and wholesome Orders and Ordinances within the Province aforesaid, to be kept and observed, as well for the keeping of the Peace as for the better Government of the People there abiding; and to publish the same to all to whom it may concern;

WHICH Ordinances We do, by these presents, straightly Charge and Command to be inviolably observed within the said Province, under the penalties therein expressed; So as such Ordinances be reasonable, and not repugnant or contrary, but as near as may be agreeable, to the laws and Statutes of this our Kingdom of England; And so as the same Ordinances do not extend to the binding, charging, or taking away of the right or interest of any Person or Persons in their freehold, goods, or Chattels whatsoever.

AND to the end the said Province may be the more happily increased by the multitude of People resorting thither, and may likewise be the more strongly defended from the incursions of Savages and other Enemies, Pirates, and robbers:

THEREFORE, We, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give and Grant, by these presents, Power, licence, and liberty unto all the liege people of us, our heirs and Successors, in our Kingdom of England or elsewhere within any other our Dominions, Islands, Colonies, or Plantations, Excepting those who shall be especially forbidden, to transport themselves and Families unto the said Province, with convenient Shipping and fitting Provisions, and there to settle themselves, dwell and inhabit; any law, Act, Statute, Ordinance, or other thing to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

AND WE WILL also, and, of our more especial grace, for us, our heirs and Successors, do straightly enjoin, Ordain, Constitute, and Command, that the said Province of Carolina shall be of our Allegiance; And that all and singular the Subjects and liege people of us, our heirs and Successors, transported or to be transported into the said Province, and the Children of them and of such as shall descend from them there, born or hereafter to be born, be and shall be Denizens and lieges of us, our heirs and Successors, of this our Kingdom of England; and be in all things held, treated, and reputed as the liege, faithful people of us, our heirs and Successors, born within this our said Kingdom or any other of our Dominions; and may inherit or otherwise Purchase and receive, take, have, hold, buy, and possess any lands, Tenements, or hereditaments within the same Places, and them may Occupy and enjoy, give, sell alien, and bequeath; as likewise, all liberties, Franchises, and Privileges of this our Kingdom of England, and of other our Dominions aforesaid, may freely and quietly have, possess, and enjoy as our liege people born within the same, without the let, molestation, vexation, trouble, or grievance of us, our heirs and Successors; any Statute, Act, Ordinance, or Provision to the contrary notwithstanding.

AND FURTHERMORE, that our Subjects, of this our said Kingdom of England and other our Dominions, may be the rather encouraged to undertake this Expedition with ready and cheerful minds:

KNOW YE, that We, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, Do give and Grant, by virtue of these presents, as well to the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, and their heirs, as unto all others as shall, from time to time, repair unto the said Province with a purpose to inhabit there or to trade with the Natives of the said Province, full liberty and Licence to lade and freight in any Ports whatsoever of us, our heirs and Successors;

AND into the said Province of Carolina, by them, their Servants and Assigns, to Transport all and singular their goods, Wares, and Merchandises; as likewise, all sorts of grain whatsoever, and any other things whatsoever necessary for the food and Clothing, not prohibited by the laws and Statutes of our Kingdoms and Dominions; to be Carried out of the same without any let or molestation of us, our heirs and Successors, or of any other our Officers and Ministers whatsoever; Saving also, to us, our heirs and Successors, the Customs and other duties and payments due for the said Wares and Merchandises, according to the several rates of the Places from whence the same shall be transported.

WE WILL also, and, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give and Grant Licence, by this our Charter, unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, and to all the Inhabitants and Dwellers in the Province aforesaid, both present and to come, full power and absolute authority to Import or unlade, by themselves or their servants, Factors, or Assigns, all Merchandises and goods whatsoever that shall arise of the fruits and Commodities of the said Province, either by land or Sea, into any the Ports of us, our heirs and Successors, in our Kingdom of England, Scotland, or Ireland, Or otherwise to dispose of the said goods in the said Ports; and, if need be, within one year next after the unlading, to lade the said Merchandises and goods again into the same or other Ships, and to Export the same into any other Countries, either of our Dominions or foreign, being in Amity with us, our heirs and Successors; So as they pay such Customs, Subsidies, and other duties for the same, to us, our heirs and Successors, as the rest of our Subjects of this our Kingdom for the time being shall be bound to pay, beyond which We will not that the inhabitants of the said Province of Carolina shall be any way Charged.

PROVIDED, nevertheless, and our Will and pleasure is, and We have further, for the Considerations aforesaid, of our more especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, given and Granted, and, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give and grant, unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarindon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full and free licence, liberty, and authority, at any time or times from and after the Feast of Saint Michaell The Archangel which shall be in the year of our Lord Christ One thousand six hundred Sixty and Seven, as well to Import and bring into any of our Dominions from the said Province of Carolina, or any part thereof, the several goods and Commodities hereinafter mentioned: THAT IS TO SAY, Silks, Wines, Currants, Raisins, Capers, Wax, Almonds, Oil, and Olives; without paying or Answering to us, our heirs or Successors, any Custom, Impost, or other duty for or in respect thereof, for and during the term and space of Seven years, to commence and be accounted from and after the First Importation of four Tons of any the said goods in any one Bottom, Ship, or Vessel from the said Province into any of our Dominions; as also, to export and carry out of any of our Dominions into the said Province of Carolina, Custom free, all sorts of Tools which shall be useful or necessary for the Planters there in the accommodation and Improvement of the premises; any thing before in these presents contained, or any Law, Act, Statute, Prohibition, or other matter or thing heretofore had, made, Enacted, or provided, or hereafter to be had, made, Enacted, or Provided, to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

AND FURTHERMORE, of our more ample and especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, WE DO, for us, our heirs and Successors, Grant unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full and absolute power and authority to Make, Erect, and Constitute within the said Province of CAROLINA, and the Isles and Islets aforesaid, such and so many Seaports, harbours, Creeks, and other Places for discharge and unlading of goods and Merchandises out of Ships, Boats, and other Vessels, and for lading of them, in such and so many Places, and with such Jurisdictions, Privileges, Jurisdictions,[3] and Franchises unto the said Ports belonging, as to them shall seem most expedient;

AND that all and singular the Ships, Boats, and other Vessels which shall come for Merchandise and Trade into the said Province, or shall depart out of the same, shall be laden and unladen at such Ports only as shall be erected and Constituted by the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, and not elsewhere; any use, Custom, or any thing to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

AND WE DO, furthermore, Will, appoint, and Ordain, and, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, do Grant unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, That they, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, may, from time to time, forever, have and enjoy the Customs and Subsidies, in the Ports, Harbours, Creeks, and other Places within the Province aforesaid, payable for goods, Merchandises, and Wares there laded or to be laded or unladed; the said Customs to be reasonably Assessed upon any occasion by themselves, and by and with the Consent of the free people there, by the greater part of them, as aforesaid: to whom We give power, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, upon just Cause and in a due proportion, to Assess and Impose the same.

AND FURTHER, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, WE HAVE given, Granted, and Confirmed, and, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give, Grant, and Confirm, unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full and absolute licence, power, and authority that the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, from time to time hereafter, forever, at his and their will and pleasure, may Assign, Alien, Grant, Demise, or enfeoff the premises, or any part or parcels thereof, to him or them that shall be willing to purchase the same, and to such Person or Persons as they shall think fit;

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD to them the said Person or Persons, their heirs and Assigns, in Fee simple or Fee tail, or for term of life or lives or years; to be held of them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, by such Rents, Services, and Customs as shall seem meet to the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, and not immediately of us, our heirs and Successors.

AND to the same Person or Persons, and to all and every of them, WE DO give and Grant, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, Licence, authority, and power That such Person or Persons may have or take the premises, or any parcel thereof, of the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns; and the same to hold to themselves, their heirs or Assigns, in what estate of Inheritance soever, in Fee simple of Fee tail or otherwise, as to them and the said Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, shall seem expedient; The Statute made in the Parliament of Edward, Son of King Henry, heretofore King of England, our Predecessor, commonly called the Statute of Quia Emptores Terrarum, or any other Statute, Act, Ordinance, use, Law, Custom, or any other matter, Cause, or thing heretofore published or provided to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

AND because many Persons born or inhabiting in the said Province, for their deserts and Services, may expect, and be capable of, Marks of Honour and favour, which, in respect of the great distance, cannot conveniently be Conferred by us:

OUR WILL AND PLEASURE, therefore, is, and We do, by these presents, Give and Grant unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their Heirs and Assigns, full Power and Authority to give and Confer, unto and upon such of the Inhabitants of the said Province as they shall think do or shall merit the same, such marks of favour and Titles of honour as they shall think fit; so as those Titles or honours be not the same as are enjoyed by or Conferred upon any the Subjects of this our Kingdom of England.

AND FURTHER, also, We do, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, give and grant Licence to them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George

Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full power, liberty, and licence to Erect, raise, and build, within the said Province and Places aforesaid, or any part or parts thereof, such and so many Forts, Fortresses, Castles, Cities, Boroughs, Towns, Villages, and other Fortifications whatsoever; And the same, or any of them, to Fortify and furnish with Ordnance, Powder, Shot, Armour, and all other Weapons, Ammunition, and habiliments of War, both offensive and defensive, as shall be thought fit and convenient, for the safety and welfare of the said Province and Places, or any part thereof; And the same, or any of them, from time to time, as occasion shall require, to dismantle, disfurnish, demolish, and pull down; and Also, to place, Constitute, and appoint, in or over all or any of the said Castles, Forts, Fortifications, Cities, Towns, and Places aforesaid, Governors, Deputy Governors, Magistrates, Sheriffs, and other Officers, Civil and Military, as to them shall seem meet;

AND to the said Cities, Boroughs, Town, Villages, or any other Place or Places within the said Province, to grant Letters or Charters of Incorporation, with all Liberties, Franchises, and Privileges requisite and usual, or to or within any Corporations within this our Kingdom of England granted or belonging; And in the same Cities, Boroughs, Towns, and other Places, to Constitute, Erect, and appoint such and so many Markets, Marts, and Fairs as shall in that behalf be thought fit and necessary;

AND further, also, to Erect and make in the Province aforesaid, or any part thereof, so many Manors as to them shall seem meet and convenient; and in every of the same Manors to have and to hold a Court Baron, with all things whatsoever which to a Court Baron do belong; And to have and to hold Views of Frankpledge and Courts Leet, for the Conservation of the Peace and better Government of those parts, within such Limits, Jurisdiction, and Precincts as by the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, or their heirs, shall be appointed for that purpose, with all things whatsoever which to a Court Leet or View of Frankpledge do belong; the same Courts to be held by Stewards, to be Deputed and authorized by the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, or their heirs, or by the Lords of other Manors and Leets for the time being, when the same shall be Erected.

AND because that, in so remote a Country and situate among so many barbarous Nations, the Invasions as well of Savages as other Enemies, Pirates, and Robbers may probably be feared:

THEREFORE, WE HAVE given, and, for us, our heirs and Successors, Do give, power, by these presents, unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, by themselves or their Captains or other their Officers, to Levy, Muster, and Train all sorts of men, of what Condition or wheresoever born, in the said Province for the time being; and to make War and pursue the Enemies aforesaid, as well by Sea as by land, yea, even without the limits of the said Province; and, by God's assistance, to vanquish and take them, and being taken, to put them to death, by the law of war, or to save them, at their pleasure; and to do all and every other thing which unto the Charge And Office of a Captain General of an Army belongs, or has accustomed to belong, as fully and freely as any Captain General of an Army has ever had the same.

ALSO, our Will and pleasure is, and, by this our Charter, WE DO give unto the said

Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full power, liberty, and authority, in case of rebellion, tumult, or Sedition, if any should happen, which God forbid, either upon the land within the Province aforesaid or upon the main Sea in making a Voyage thither or returning from thence, by him and themselves, their Captains, Deputies, or Officers, to be authorized under his or their Seals for that purpose, to whom also, for us, our heirs and Successors, WE DO give and Grant, by these presents, full power and authority, to exercise Martial Law against mutinous and seditious Persons of those parts, such as shall refuse to submit themselves to their Government, or shall refuse to serve in the Wars, or shall fly to the Enemy, or forsake their Colors or Ensigns, or be loiterers or Stragglers, or otherwise howsoever offending against Law, Custom, or Discipline Military; as freely and in as ample manner and form as any Captain General of an Army, by virtue of his Office, might, or has accustomed to, use the same.

AND Our further pleasure is, and, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, WE DO Grant unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, and to the Tenants and Inhabitants of the said Province of Carolina, both present and to come, and to every of them, that the said Province, and the Tenants and Inhabitants thereof, shall not from henceforth be held or reputed a Member or part of any Colony whatsoever, in America or elsewhere, now transported or made, or hereafter to be transported or made; nor shall be depending on, or subject to, their Government in any thing, but be absolutely separated and divided from the same;

AND OUR pleasure is, by these presents, that they be separated, and that they be subject immediately to our Crown of England, as depending thereof, forever; And that the Inhabitants of the said Province, nor any or[4] them, shall, at any time hereafter, be compelled or compellable, or be any ways subject or liable, to appear or Answer to any matter, Suit, Cause, or Plaint whatsoever, out of the Province aforesaid, in any other of our Islands, Colonies, or Dominions, in America or elsewhere, other than in our Realm of England and Dominion of Wales.

AND because it may happen that some of the People and Inhabitants of the said Province cannot in their private opinions Conform to the Public Exercise of Religion according to the Liturgy, forms, and Ceremonies of the Church of England, or take or subscribe the Oaths and Articles made and established in that behalf; AND for that the same, by reason of the remote distances of those Places, Will, as We hope, be no breach of the unity and uniformity established in this Nation:

OUR WILL and pleasure, therefore, is, AND WE DO, by these presents, for us, our heirs and Successors, Give and Grant unto the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns, full and free Licence, liberty, and Authority, by such legal ways and means as they shall think fit, to give and grant unto such Person and Persons inhabiting and being within the said Province, or any part thereof, Who really in their Judgments, and for Conscience sake, cannot or shall not Conform to the said Liturgy and Ceremonies, and take and Subscribe the Oaths and Articles aforesaid, or any of them, such Indulgencies and Dispensations in that Behalf, for and during such time and times, and with such limitations and restrictions, as they, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs or Assigns, shall, in their discretions, think fit and reasonable;

AND with this express Proviso and Limitation also, that such Person and Persons to whom such Indulgencies or Dispensations shall be granted, as aforesaid, do and shall, from time to time, Declare and continue all fidelity, Loyalty, and Obedience to us, our heirs and Successors; and be subject and obedient to all other the Laws, Ordinances, and Constitutions of the said Province, in all matters whatsoever, as well Ecclesiastical as Civil; And do not in any wise disturb the Peace and safety thereof, or scandalize or reproach the said Liturgy, forms, and Ceremonies, or any thing relating thereunto, or any Person or Persons whatsoever for, or in respect of, his or their use or exercise thereof, or his or their obedience or Conformity thereunto.

AND in Case it shall happen that any doubts or questions should arise concerning the true Sense and understanding of any word, Clause, or Sentence contained in this our present Charter:

WE WILL, Ordain, and Command that, at all times and in all things, such interpretation be made thereof, and allowed in all and every of our Courts whatsoever, as lawfully may be Adjudged most advantageous and favourable to the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, their heirs and Assigns.

ALTHOUGH EXPRESS MENTION be not made in these presents of the true yearly value and certainty of the premises, or any part thereof, or of any other gifts and grants made by us, our Ancestors or Predecessors, to them, the said Edward, Earl of Clarendon; George, Duke of Albemarle; William, Lord Craven; John, Lord Berkley; Anthony, Lord Ashley; Sir George Carterett; Sir William Berkley; and Sir John Colleton, or any other Person or Persons whatsoever, Or any Statute, Act, Ordinance, Provision, Proclamation, or restraint heretofore had, made, published, ordained, or Provided, or any other thing, Cause, or matter whatsoever to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

IN WITNESS whereof We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent.

WITNESS, our Self, at Westminster, the Four and Twentieth day of March, in the Fifteenth year of our Reign.

Concessions and Agreement between the Lords Proprietors and Major William Yeamans and Others

INTRODUCTION

Six months after receiving their first charter, the lords proprietors of Carolina authorized one of their number, Sir William Berkeley, governor of Virginia, to exercise governmental powers in Albemarle, the only settled area in Carolina. They also authorized Berkeley to select a governor and council for the settlement. In October, 1664, William Drummond was appointed governor, and a legislative assembly was convened by the following spring.

For nearly two years, government in Carolina was based on the proprietors' temporary authorizations and instructions. In January, 1665, the proprietors adopted a more formal plan of government for the province and incorporated it in an agreement made with a group from Barbados and elsewhere who proposed to settle in the Cape Fear region. This document, known as the Concessions and Agreement of 1665, is the first constitution, or over-all plan of government, put into effect in Carolina. An earlier plan, contained in a document called A Declaration and Proposals to All That Will Plant in Carolina, approved by the proprietors in 1663, was never put into effect, for it was applicable only to new colonies, and none were established under its terms. The plan provided in the Concessions and Agreement likewise was designed primarily for new settlements, but, unlike the earlier plan, it also applied to the existing settlement in Albemarle.

The Concessions and Agreement provided that Carolina be divided into large subdivisions, called counties, in each of which was to be established a governor, an assembly, and other agencies. Each county was to be divided into districts, which were to be administrative and judicial units. The present-day counties in North Carolina bear more likeness to the old districts, or precincts, than to the old counties, which eventually were abolished.

The known records do not show when the plan of government provided in the Concessions and Agreement was put into effect in Albemarle. Apparently, the plan was in force by October, 1667, when Samuel Stephens was appointed to succeed Drummond as governor, for the proprietors' instructions to Stephens conformed to the provisions of the Concessions and Agreement. There is also question as to when government under the Concessions and Agreement ended. Although a different plan, the Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina, was sent to Albemarle in January, 1670, it appears that the old plan was continued for some time, perhaps until early in 1672. Thus, the system provided in the Concessions and Agreement may have been used five years or longer.

A significant feature of the Concessions and Agreement was the extensive power allowed the popular assembly, which was far greater than that required by the proprietors' charter. Consequently, the assembly was a major governmental agency in the early years of the Albemarle colony. Later, under the Fundamental Constitutions, the assembly lost most of its power, and many years passed before it regained its former status.

The Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina

INTRODUCTION

In 1669, the lords proprietors of Carolina adopted for their province a new plan of government, officially called the Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina, but often referred to as the "Grand Model." This plan was quite different from that provided in the Concessions and Agreement, which, having been intended to attract settlers, allowed the colonists a large degree of control over their government. The new plan gave the people little part in government, for it was intended primarily to promote the interests of the proprietors and to "avoid erecting a numerous Democracy."

The Fundamental Constitutions have been attributed to the philosopher John Locke, and they are included in collections of his writings. Among historians, however, there is question as to what extent, if any, Locke contributed to the composition of the "Grand Model." Although an early copy is in Locke's handwriting, this may not be significant, as Locke was secretary to the proprietary board, a position that normally would have required preparation of such a copy. Locke also was secretary to Lord Ashley, who, like Locke, has been suggested as author of the Fundamental Constitutions. There is reason also to think that other proprietors had part in formulating the "Grand Model." Several were associated with James Harrington, who, in 1656, published, The Commonwealth of Oceana, which contains ideas similar to those expressed in the Fundamental Constitutions. As the same ideas also are incorporated in the proprietors' charters, it seems obvious that the proprietors had in mind such a plan long before the Constitutions were drafted. Locke was not associated with the proprietors when the charters were issued and, therefore, could not have suggested to them those features of the Fundamental Constitutions which are provided for in the charters. Although he could have drafted the "Grand Model," and may have originated some of its provisions, it is also possible that Locke merely recorded and put into appropriate form decisions reached by the proprietors. Some of the errors in the copy of the Constitutions that is said to be in Locke's handwriting indicate that the latter is true. In that copy, from which the 1669 version of the Constitutions was transcribed for this volume, preservation was written for persuasion, narrative for maritime, pass for possess, recorded for reckoned, counsellors for chancellors, and marshalls for masters. These and other errors in the manuscript appear more likely to have been made by a person recording what was said by others than by one setting forth his own ideas.

The Fundamental Constitutions were intended to provide a governmental structure which would enable the proprietors to exercise the feudal powers granted in their charters. Such powers were conferred in several provisions, such as that authorizing creation of a local nobility, the clause exempting Carolina from the statute of quia emptores terrarum (which forbade further subinfeudation), the provision authorizing creation of manors and manorial courts, and the bishop-of-Durham clause. The last of these provisions was the most comprehensive in the authority conferred, for it granted powers and privileges as great as any which the bishop of Durham ever "held, used, or enjoyed, or of right ought or could have, use, or enjoy." At the height of his power, which was in the fourteenth century, the bishop had possessed almost regal authority in Durham; he had enacted laws, levied taxes, raised troops, impressed ships, made truce with enemies, and exercised other such powers. Similar powers were specifically granted in the proprietors' charters, reinforcing the broad grant in the bishop-of-Durham clause.

The "Grand Model" provided not only a governmental system for Carolina but also a social and economic system. As in all feudal societies, control over land was to be the basis of governmental power and of legal and social status. The Constitutions placed ultimate governmental control in the hands of the proprietors, who had right to all of the land in the province. Next to them in power and status were the local nobility, of which there were to be two ranks, landgrave and cacique. Titles of nobility, to be conferred by the proprietors, would carry with them grants of large tracts of land and special privileges, such as membership in parliament and the right to be tried in a proprietors' court instead of lower courts. Beneath the nobility were to be the freemen, who could own land, have a limited part in government, and enjoy certain legal rights, such as appeal from lower courts. Below the freemen were to be leet-men, who were to be tenants of the noblemen and lords of manors; they would be bound to the land on which they lived and have status similar to that of serfs in medieval Europe. Leet-men were given no voice in government, and they were to be tried in manorial courts, without right of appeal. Still lower on the scale were slaves, who would be subject to their masters in all respects except religion. Land granted to noblemen and freemen would be subject to rents, paid to the proprietors; leet-men would owe rents to the lords of the land on which they lived.

The Constitutions provided that the province of Carolina was to be divided into counties. One fifth of each county would be divided into eight seigniories, to be assigned to the proprietors. Another fifth would be divided into eight baronies, to be granted to the local nobility; four baronies were to go to one man, entitled landgrave, and the other four would be divided between two caciques. The remainder of the county was to be divided into four precincts, each to be subdivided into colonies; land in the colonies was to be granted to freemen.

The supreme governmental agency provided in the Fundamental Constitutions was the palatine's court, composed of the eight proprietors, the eldest of whom would hold the office of palatine. Beneath this agency, seven other courts were provided, each consisting of a proprietor and six councillors, selected by a complicated procedure which assured that at least half the councillors in each court would be members of the local nobility, sons of proprietors, or sons of local noblemen. Executive, administrative, and judicial functions were assigned to the proprietors' courts. The Fundamental Constitutions also provided for an agency called the grand council, which was assigned executive, judicial, and legislative powers. Another agency, called the parliament, was to be the assembly for the province. The grand council was to be composed of the eight proprietors and the forty-two councillors of the proprietors' courts. Among its powers was that of deciding what matters might go before the parliament, which was prohibited from considering any matter that had not first passed the grand council and been proposed by it. The parliament was to consist of the proprietors or their deputies, all of the landgraves and caciques of the province, and one freeholder from each precinct, who was to be elected by the freeholders of his precinct. All actions by the parliament would require ratification by the palatine and three other proprietors. Any action of the grand council and parliament could be nullified by the palatine's court. All of these agencies—the eight proprietors' courts, the grand council, and the parliament—were to have jurisdiction over the entire province.

In addition to agencies for the whole province, the Fundamental Constitutions provided for local courts and officials, including municipal officers. They also guaranteed to freemen certain individual rights, such as trial by jury and protection against double jeopardy, and they provided that all inhabitants, including slaves, should be permitted to belong to whatever religious groups they chose. Provision also was made for such governmental activities as the exercise of eminent domain and the keeping of legal records and vital statistics.

The "Grand Model" was intended to last forever, and it was designed for a society which the proprietors expected to develop in Carolina, not for conditions existing in the province when the instrument was drafted. After adoption of the Constitutions, therefore, the proprietors instructed officials in Albemarle to make effective only those features which were considered practicable under existing conditions. Even limited implementation, however, required significant changes in the government that had been established in Albemarle under the Concessions and Agreement. The assembly was deprived of power to initiate legislation, and the governor lost much of his authority and prestige. Some of the powers lost by the assembly and the governor were assigned to the council, which thereby acquired greater prestige as well as increased authority.

Although the proprietors expected eventually to make the Fundamental Constitutions fully effective, they never succeeded in doing this. Like the early instructions to the governor at Albemarle, later instructions to governors were, in effect, modifications of the "Grand Model." From time to time, the proprietors formally revised "The Sacred and Unalterable Form and Rule of Government," of which they sent at least five versions to Carolina.

The Fundamental Constitutions, adopted July 21, 1669, were first sent to Albemarle in January, 1670. A copy already had been given to a colony which sailed for Port Royal, in modern South Carolina, in August, 1669. Although the proprietors soon appointed deputies in Albemarle and took other steps to conform to the "Grand Model," these changes appear to have been nominal and to have had little practical effect. On March 1, 1670, the proprietors adopted a new version of the Fundamental Constitutions, which they claimed was the official form, asserting that the earlier version was only a draft sent for temporary use. Apparently, the Albemarle government was not reorganized until after receipt of the 1670 version. The proprietors formally revised the "Grand Model" twice in 1682, in January and in August, to meet objections raised by groups proposing to settle in Carolina. As actual government of the colonies was conducted under modifications of the Constitutions, contained in the proprietors' instructions to governors, alterations in the official version had little real effect. Settlers in Albemarle, however, expressed dissatisfaction with certain features of the "Grand Model," and protests against alteration of the original form were made by inhabitants of South Carolina. There were frequent disorders in both colonies, and, in 1693, the proprietors officially suspended the Fundamental Constitutions. Five years later, the Constitutions were revived, after drastic revision. Although the 1698 version was more practicable than the earlier ones, its full enforcement was never attempted. After 1700, the proprietors gradually ceased referring to the "Grand Model."

It is difficult to determine what effect the Fundamental Constitutions had on the development of North Carolina, for few records of the colony in its early years have survived. On the surface, it would appear that they had little influence, for they were never fully implemented. A landed nobility never developed in North Carolina, nor did serfdom develop. The palatine's court was the only proprietors' court organized, and the grand council and parliament were never constituted as provided in the Constitutions. Nevertheless, the governmental agencies that were established in the colony bore the imprint of the "Grand Model," and the policies of the proprietors were directed toward full implementation of the Constitutions. These agencies and policies necessarily had important effects on the colony. For example, the assembly in North Carolina had little power for many years, and it did not regain its former right to initiate legislation until the Constitutions were suspended, in the 1690's. Violence and confusion were frequent in the colony as long as the Fundamental Constitutions were the official "Form and Rule." These disorders may have been due in large part to the form of government, which provided settlers with no legitimate channels for initiating change.

THE FUNDAMENTAL CONSTITUTIONS

Version of July 21, 1669 [1]

OUR Sovereign Lord the King having, out of his royal grace and bounty, granted unto us the Province of Carolina, with all the royalties, Proprieties, Jurisdictions, and privileges of a County Palatine, as large and ample as the County Palatine of Durham, with other great privileges; for the better settlement of the Government of the said Place, and establishing the interest of the Lords Proprietors with Equality, and without confusion; and that the Government of this Province may be made most agreeable unto the Monarchy under which we live, and of which this province is a part; and that we may avoid erecting a numerous Democracy: We, the true and absolute Lords and Proprietors of the Province aforesaid, have agreed to this following form of Government, to be perpetually established amongst us, unto which we do oblige ourselves, our heirs and successors, in the most binding ways that can be devised.

2. Out of the eight Proprietors there shall be chosen, by themselves, a Palatine, who shall continue during life, whose son shall not be capable of immediately succeeding him after his death; but the eldest in Age of the other Proprietors shall succeed, to prevent the making the office in this little government Hereditary and to avoid the mischief of factions in Elections.

3. There shall be Seven other chief offices erected, viz., the chief Justice's, Chancellor's, Constable's, High Steward's, Treasurer's, Chamberlain's, Admiral's; which places shall be enjoyed by none but the Lords Proprietors, to be assigned at first by lot; and upon the vacancy of any one[2] of the seven great Offices by death, or otherwise, the Eldest proprietor [shall] have his choice of the said place.

4. Each Province shall be divided into Counties; each County shall consist of eight Seigniories, eight Baronies, and four precincts; each Precinct shall consist of Six Colonies.

5. Each Colony, Seigniory, and Barony shall consist of twelve thousand Acres, the eight Seigniories being the share of the eight Proprietors, and the eight Baronies of the Nobility; both which shares, being each of them a fifth part of the whole, are to be perpetually annexed, the one to the Proprietors, the other to the Hereditary Nobility, Leaving the Colonies, being three fifths, amongst the people; that so, in the Setting out and planting the lands, the Balance of Government may be preserved.

6. At any time before the year 1701, any of the [Lords] Proprietors shall have power to relinquish, Alienate, and dispose, to any other person, his Proprietorship, and all the Seigniories, powers, and Interest thereunto belonging, wholly and entirely together, and not otherwise. But after the year 1700, those who are then [Lords] Proprietors shall not have power to Alienate or make over their proprietorship, with Seigniories and privileges thereunto belonging, or any part thereof, to any person whatsoever, otherwise than as in article 18,[3] but it shall descend unto their heirs male; and for want of heirs male, it shall descend on that Landgrave or Cacique of Carolina who is descended of the next heir female of the said Proprietor; and for want of Such heirs, it shall descend on the next heir general; and for want of Such heirs, the remaining Seven proprietors shall, upon the Vacancy, choose a Landgrave to succeed the deceased proprietor, who being chosen by the majority of the Seven Surviving proprietors, he and his heirs Successively shall be proprietors as fully, to all intents and purposes, as any of the rest.

7. And that the number of eight Proprietors may be constantly kept, if, upon the vacancy of any Proprietorship, the Surviving Seven Proprietors shall not choose a Landgrave [or Cacique] as a proprietor before the Second session of Parliament after the vacancy, then the Parliament, at the next Session but one after Such vacancy, shall have power to choose and Landgrave [or Cacique] to be Proprietor; but whosoever after the year 1700, either by inheritance or choice, shall Succeed any Proprietor in his proprietorship, and Seigniories thereunto belonging, shall be obliged to take the name and Arms of that proprietor whom he Succeeds, which from thenceforth shall be the name and Arms of his Family and their posterity.

8. Whatsoever Landgrave [or Cacique] shall be chosen into a proprietorship shall take the Seigniories annexed to the said proprietorship,[4] but shall relinquish all the Baronies belonging to his Landgraveship [or Caciqueship] to be disposed of by the proprietors as in the following Articles.

9. To every County there shall be three as the hereditary Nobility of this Palatinate, who shall be called the one a Landgrave and the other two Caciques, and shall have place in the Parliament there; the Landgrave shall have four Baronies, and the two Caciques, each of them, two apiece, hereditary,[5] and unalterably annexed to and settled upon the said Dignity.

10. The first Landgrave and Caciques of every County shall be nominated, not by the Joint election of the Proprietors all together, but the eight Proprietors shall, each of them separately, nominate and choose one Landgrave and two Caciques for the eight first Counties to be planted; and when the said eight Counties shall be planted, the proprietors shall, in the same manner, nominate and Choose eight more Landgraves and sixteen Caciques for the eight next Counties to be planted; and so proceed, in the same manner, till the whole province of Carolina be set out and planted according to the [proportions] in these fundamental Constitutions.

11. Any Landgrave or Cacique, at any time before the year 1701, shall have power to alienate, sell, or make over, to any other person, his dignity, with the Baronies thereunto belonging, all entirely together; but after the year 1700, no Landgrave or Cacique shall have power to alienate, Sell, make over, or let the hereditary Baronies of his dignity, or any part thereof, otherwise than as in Article 18;[6] but they shall all entirely, with the dignity thereunto belonging, descend unto his heirs Male; and for want of Such heirs Male, all entirely and undivided, to the next heir general; and for want of Such heirs, shall devolve into the hands of the Proprietors.

12. That the due number of landgraves and[7] Caciques may be always kept up, if, upon the devolution of any Landgraveship or Caciqueship, the Proprietors shall not settle the devolved dignity, with the Baronies thereunto annexed, before the second Session of Parliament after Such devolution, the Parliament, at the next [Biennial] Session but one after Such devolution, shall have power to make any one Landgrave or Cacique in the Room of him, who dying with out heirs, his dignity and Baronies devolved.

13. No one person shall have more than one dignity, with the Seigniories or Baronies thereunto belonging; but whensoever it shall happen that any one who is already Proprietor, Landgrave, or Cacique shall have any of those dignities descend to him by inheritance, it shall be at his choice to keep one of the two dignities, with the Lands annexed, he shall like best, but shall leave the other, with the lands annexed, to be enjoyed by him who, not being his heir apparent, and certain successor to his present dignity, is next afterward.

14. Whosoever, by right of Inheritance, shall come to be Landgrave or Cacique shall take the name and Arms of his predecessor in that dignity, to be from thenceforth the Name and Arms of his Family and their posterity.

15. Since the dignity of Proprietor, of[8] Landgrave, or Cacique cannot be divided, and the Seigniories or Baronies thereunto annexed must for ever, all entirely, descend with and accompany that dignity, when ever, for want of heirs Male, it shall descend upon the Issue Female, the Eldest Daughter and her heirs shall be preferred; and in the Inheritance of those dignities, and in the Seigniories or Baronies annexed, there shall be no Coheirs.

16. After the year 1700, whatsoever Landgrave or Cacique shall, without leave from the Palatine's Court, be out of Carolina during two successive biennial Parliaments shall, at the end of the second biennial Parliament after such his absence, be summoned by Proclamation: and if he come not into Carolina before the next biennial Parliament after Such Summons, then it shall be lawful for the grand Council, at a price set by the said Council and approved by the Parliament, to sell the Baronies, with the Dignities thereunto belonging, of the said absent Landgrave or Cacique, all together, to any one to whom the said Council shall think fit; but the price so paid for said Dignity or Baronies shall be deposited in the Treasury, for the sole use and behoof of the former owner, or his [heirs or] assigns.

17. In every Seigniory, Barony, and Manor, the Lord shall have power in his own name, to hold Court there, for trying of all causes, both Civil and Criminal; but where it shall concern any other person being no Inhabitant, Vassal, or Leet man of the said Barony or Seigniory [or manor], he, upon paying down of forty shillings unto the Proprietors' use, shall have an appeal from thence unto the County Court; and if the Lord be cast, the said Lord shall pay unto the appellant the said forty shillings, with other charges.

18. The Lords of Seigniories and Baronies shall have power only of granting Estates, not exceeding three lives or one and thirty years, in two thirds of the said Seigniories or Baronies; and the remaining third shall be always Demesne.

19. Every Manor shall consist of not less than three thousand Acres and not above twelve thousand Acres in one entire piece; but any three thousand acres or more in one piece and the possession of one Man shall not be a manor unless it be constituted a manor

[16]The passage in brackets was taken from a marginal note rewording the original passage, which reads as follows: to be enacted, whether in an ——— [blank] law or otherwise, or passed into an Act of Parliament.

[17]Originally that, but changed to who.

[18]Article 52 is opposite article 53, instead of preceding it.

57. In every Precinct there shall be a Court, consisting of a Steward and four Justices of the Precinct, being Inhabitants and having three hundred Acres of Freehold within the said Precinct; who shall Judge all Criminal causes, except for Treason, Murder, and any other offences punished with death; and all civil causes whatsoever, and in all personal actions not exceeding fifty pounds without appeal; but where the Cause shall exceed that Value, or concern a Title of land, and in all Criminal causes, there, either party, upon paying five pounds to the Proprietors' use, shall have Liberty of appeal unto the County Court.

58. No cause shall be twice tried in any one Court, upon any reason or pretence whatsoever.

59. For Treason, Murder, and all other offences punishable with death, there shall be a Commission, twice a year at least, granted unto one or more members of the [Grand] Council or Colleges, who shall come as Itinerant Judges to the Several Counties, and, with the Sheriff and four Justices, shall hold assizes, and Judge all Such causes. But upon paying of fifty pounds to the proprietors' use, there shall be Liberty of appeal to the respective Proprietors' Court.

60. The grand Juries at the Several assizes shall have, upon their Oaths, and, under their hands and Seals, deliver in to the Itinerant Judges a presentment of Such grievances, Misdemeanors, exigencies, or defects which they shall think necessary for the Public good of the Country; which presentment shall, by the Itinerant Judges, at the End of their circuit, be delivered in to the grand Council at their next Sitting; and whatsoever therein concerns the Execution of Laws already made, the Several Proprietors' Courts, in the matters belonging to each of them respectively, shall take Cognizance of [it], and [give] such order about it as shall be Effectual for the due Execution of the laws; but whatever concerns the making of any new laws shall be referred to the Several respective Courts to which that matter belongs, and by them prepared and brought to the grand Council.

61. For Terms, there shall be quarterly Such a certain number of days, not exceeding twenty one at any one time, as the Several respective Courts shall appoint; the time for the beginning of the Term in the precinct Court shall be the first Monday in January, April, July, and October; and in the County Court, the first Monday of February, May, August, November; and in the Proprietors' [Courts], the first Monday of March, June, September, and December.

62. For Juries[19] in the Precinct Court, no Man shall be a Jury Man under fifty Acres of Freehold. In the County Court, or at the assizes, no man shall be a Jury Man under two hundred acres of Freehold. No man shall be a Grand Jury Man under three hundred acres of freehold; and in the Proprietors' Courts, no Man shall be a Jury Man under five hundred acres of Freehold.

63. Every Jury shall consist of twelve Men; and [it] shall [not] be necessary they should all agree, but the Verdict shall be according to the consent of the Majority.

64. It shall be a base and vile thing to Plead for money or Reward; nor shall any one, except he be a Near Kinsman, not farther off than Cousin German to the party concerned, be admitted to plead another man's cause till, before the Judge in open Court, he has taken an Oath that he does [not] pleas for money or reward, nor has nor will receive, nor directly nor indirectly bargained with the party, whose cause he is going to Plead, for any money or other reward for Pleading his Cause.

[19] For Juries was struck out.

65. There shall be a Parliament, consisting of the Proprietors, or their deputies, the Landgraves and Caciques, and one Freeholder out of every Precinct, to be Chosen by the Freeholders of the said Precinct respectively. They shall sit all together in one Room, and have every member one Vote.

66. No man shall be Chosen a member of Parliament who has less than five hundred Acres of Freehold within the Precinct for which he is Chosen; nor shall any have a vote in choosing the said member that has less than fifty acres of Freehold within the said precinct.

67. A new Parliament shall be assembled the first Monday of the Month of November every second year, and shall meet and Sit in the Town they last Sat in, without any Summons, unless by the Palatine, or his Deputy, together with any three of the Proprietors, or their Deputies, they be Summoned to meet at any other place; and if there shall be any occasion of a Parliament in these Intervals, it shall be in the power of the Palatine, with any three of the Proprietors, to assemble them on forty days' notice, at such time and place as they shall think fit; and the Palatine, or his Deputy, with the advice and consent of any three of the Proprietors, or their Deputies, shall have power to dissolve the Said Parliament when they shall think fit.

68. At the opening of every Parliament, the first thing that shall be done shall be the reading of these fundamental constitutions, which the Palatine, and Proprietors, and the rest of the members then present shall Subscribe. Nor shall any Person whatsoever Sit or Vote in the Parliament till he has, that Sessions, Subscribed these fundamental constitutions in a book kept for that purpose by the Clerk of the Parliament.

69. And[20] in order to the due Election of members for this Biennial Parliament, it shall be lawful for the Freeholders of the respective precincts to meet the first Tuesday in September every two years, in the Same Town or place that they last met in, to choose Parliament men, and there choose those members that are to Sit the next November following, unless the Steward of the Precinct shall, by Sufficient notice Thirty days before, appoint some other place for their meeting in order to the Election.

70. No act or Order of Parliament shall be of any force unless it be Ratified in open Parliament, during the same Session, by the Palatine, or his Deputy, and three more of the Proprietors, or their deputies; and then not to continue longer in force but until the End of the next Biennial Parliament, unless in the mean time it be Ratified under the hand and seal of the Palatine him self and three more of the Proprietors them selves, and, by their Order, published at the next Biennial Parliament.

71. Any Proprietor, or his Deputy, may enter his Protestation against any act of the Parliament, before the Palatine or his deputy's consent be given as aforesaid, if he shall conceive the said act to be contrary to this Establishment or any of these Fundamental Constitutions of the Government; and in Such case, after a full and free debate, the several Estates shall retire into four several Chambers, the Palatine and Proprietors into one, the Landgraves into another, and the Caciques into another, and those Chosen by the Precincts into a fourth; and if the major part of any four of these Estates[21] shall Vote that the law is not agreeable to this Establishment and fundamental constitution of the Government, then it shall pass no further, but be as if it had never been proposed.

72. To avoid multiplicity of laws, which by degrees always change the Right foundations of the Original Government, all acts of Parliament whatsoever, in what form soever passed or enacted, shall, at the end of Sixty years after their enacting, respectively Cease and determine of them selves, and, without any repeal, become Null and void, as if no such acts or laws had ever been made.

[20] And was struck out.
[21] Thus in the manuscript. See Revisions.

73. Since multiplicity of Comments, as well as of laws, have great inconveniences, and Serve only to obscure and perplex, all manner of comments and expositions on any part of these fundamental constitutions, or on any part of the Common or Statute law of Carolina, are absolutely prohibited.

74. There shall be a Registry in every precinct, wherein shall be enrolled all deeds, Leases, Judgments, or other conveyances which may concern any of the land within the Said Precinct; and all Such conveyances not so entered or Registered shall not be of force against any person not privy to the Said contract or conveyance.

75. No man shall be Register of any Precinct who has not at least three hundred acres of Freehold within the Said Precinct.

76. The freeholders of every Precinct shall nominate three men, out of which three the Chief Justice court shall choose and Commission one to be Register of the Said precinct, whilst he shall well behave him self.

77. There shall be a Registry in every Colony, wherein shall be Recorded all the Births, Marriages, and deaths that shall happen within the said Colony.

78. No man shall be Register of a Colony that has not above fifty acres of Freehold within the said Colony.

79. The time of every one's Age shall be Recorded from the day that his Birth is entered in the Registry, and not before.

80. No Marriage shall be lawful, whatever Contract or Ceremonies they have used, till both the parties mutually own it before the Colony Register, and he enter it, with the names of the Father and mother of such party.

81. No man shall administer to the goods, or have right to them, or enter upon the Estate, of any person deceased till his death be Registered in the Colony Registry.

82. He that does not enter in the Colony Registry the death or[22] Birth of any person that dies in his house or ground shall pay to the said Register one shilling per week for each Such neglect, Reckoning from the time of each death or birth respectively to the time of Registering it.

83. In like manner, the births, Marriages, and deaths of the Lords Proprietors, Landgraves, and Caciques shall be Registered in the Chamberlain's Court.

84. There shall be in every Colony one Constable, to be Chosen annually by the Freeholders of the Colony, his Estate to be above one hundred acres of Freehold within the Said Colony; and Such Subordinate officers appointed for his assistance as the precinct court shall find requisite, and shall be Established by the Precinct court; the Election of the Subordinate annual officers shall be also in the Freeholders of the Colony.

85. All Towns incorporate shall be Governed by a Mayor, twelve Aldermen, and twenty four of the Common Council; the Said Common Council to be chosen by the present householders of the Said Town; and the Aldermen to be Chosen out of the Common Council, and the Mayor out of the Aldermen, by the Palatine and the Proprietors.

[22] Penalty was written after or, but was struck out.

86. No man shall be permitted to be a Freeman of Carolina, or to have any Estate or habitation within it, that does not acknowledge a God, and that God is publicly and Solemnly to be worshipped.

87. But since the Natives of that place, who will be concerned in our Plantations, are utterly Strangers to Christianity, whose Idolatry, Ignorance, or mistake gives us no right to expel or use them ill; and those who remove from other parts to Plant there will unavoidably be of different opinions concerning matters of Religion, the liberty whereof they will expect to have allowed them, and it will not be reasonable for us, on this account, to keep them out; that Civil peace may be maintained amidst the diversity of opinions, and our agreement and compact with all men may be duly and faithfully observed, the violation whereof, upon what pretence soever, cannot be without great offence to Almighty God, and great Scandal to the true Religion that we profess; and also, that heathens, Jews, and other dissenters from the purity of Christian Religion may not be Scared and kept at a distance from it, but, by having an opportunity of acquainting them selves with the truth and reasonableness of its Doctrines, and the peaceableness and inoffensiveness of its professors, may, by good usage and persuasion,[23] and all those convincing Methods of Gentleness and meekness Suitable to the Rules and design of the Gospel, be won over to embrace and unfeignedly receive the truth: Therefore, any Seven or more persons agreeing in any Religion shall constitute a church or profession, to which they shall give Some name to distinguish it from others.

88. The terms of admittance and communion with any church or profession shall be written in a book and therein be Subscribed by all the members of the said church or profession.

89. The time of every one's Subscription and admittance shall be dated in the said book, or record.

90. In the terms of Communion of every church or profession, these following shall be three, without which no agreement or assembly of men upon pretence of Religion shall be accounted a Church or Profession within these Rules:

1. That there is a God.
2. That God is publicly to be worshipped.
3. That it is lawful, and the duty of every man, being thereunto called by those that Govern, to bear witness to truth; and that every church or profession shall, in their Terms of Communion, Set down the External way whereby they witness a truth as in the presence of God, whether it be by laying hands on and Kissing the Gospel, as in the Protestant and Papist Churches, or by holding up the hand, or any other Sensible way.

91. No person above seventeen years of Age shall have any benefit or protection of the law, or be capable of any place of profit or honor, who is not a member of Some church or profession, having his name recorded in Some one, and but one Religion Record at once.

92. The Religious Record of every church or profession shall be kept by the public Register of the Precinct where they reside.

93. No man of any other Church or profession shall disturb or molest any Religious Assembly.

94. No person whatsoever shall speak any thing in their Religious assembly Irreverently or Seditiously of the Government or Governors or States matters.

[23]Originally preservation, but changed to persuasion.

95. Any person Subscribing the terms of Communion of any church or profession in the Record of the said church before the Precinct Register and any one member of the church or profession shall be thereby made a member of the Said church or profession.

96. Any person striking out his own name out of any Record, or his name being struck out by any officer thereunto Authorized by any church or profession, shall cease to be a member of that Church or profession.

97. No person shall use any reproachful, Reviling, or abusive language against the Religion of any Church or Profession, that being the certain way of disturbing the public peace, and of hindering the conversion of any to the truth, by engaging them in Quarrels and animosities, to the hatred of the professors and that profession, which otherwise they might be brought to assent to.

98. Since Charity obliges us to wish well to the Souls of all men, and Religion ought to alter nothing in any man's civil Estate or Right, It shall be lawful for Slaves, as all others, to enter them selves and be of what church any of them shall think best, and thereof be as fully members as any freemen. But yet, no Slave shall hereby be exempted from that civil dominion his Master has over him, but be in all other things in the same State and condition he was in before.

99. Assemblies, upon what pretence soever of Religion, not observing and performing the above said Rules shall not be Esteemed as churches, but unlawful meetings, and be punished as other Riots.

100. No person whatsoever shall disturb, molest, or persecute another for his speculative opinions in Religion or his way of worship.

101. Every Freeman of Carolina shall have absolute Authority over his Negro Slaves, of what opinion or Religion soever.

102. No person whatsoever shall hold or claim any land in Carolina, by Purchase or gift or otherwise, from the Natives or any other person whatsoever, but merely from and under the [Lords] Proprietors, upon pain of forfeiture of all his Estate, moveable or unmoveable, and perpetual Banishment.

103. Whoever shall possess[24] any Freehold in Carolina, upon what Title or grant soever, shall, at the farthest, from and after the year 1689, pay yearly unto the Proprietors for each acre of Land, English measure, as much fine Silver as is at this present in one English penny, or the Value thereof, to be as a Chief Rent and acknowledgment of the Proprietors, their heirs and Successors, for ever; and it shall be lawful for the proprietors, by their Officers, at any time, to take a new Survey of any man's land, not to out him of any part of his possession, but that by Such a Survey, the Just number of acres he possesses may be known, and the Rent thereupon due may be paid by him.

THE FUNDAMENTAL CONSTITUTIONS

Revisions in the Version of July 21, 1669

Article 2 was struck out and the following was substituted:

The eldest of the Lords Proprietors shall[27] be Palatine; and upon the decease of the Palatine, the Eldest of the Seven Surviving Proprietors shall always succeed him.

Article 6 was revised to read as follows:

At any time before the year 1701, any of the Lords Proprietors shall have power to relinquish, Alienate, and dispose, to any other person, his Proprietorship, and all the Seigniories, powers, and Interest thereunto belonging, wholly and entirely together, and not otherwise. But after the year 1700, those who are then Lords Proprietors shall not have power to Alienate, make over, or let their proprietorship, with the Seigniories and privileges thereunto belonging, or any part thereof, to any person whatsoever, otherwise than as in article 18, but it shall descend unto their heirs male; and for want of heirs male, it shall descend on that Landgrave or Cacique of Carolina who is descended of the next heir female of the said Proprietor; and for want of Such heirs, it shall descend on the next heir general; and for want of Such heirs, the remaining Seven proprietors shall, upon the Vacancy, choose a Landgrave to succeed the deceased proprietor, who being chosen by the majority of the Seven Surviving proprietors, he and his heirs Successively shall be proprietors as fully, to all intents and purposes, as any of the rest.

Article 7 was revised to read as follows:

And that the number of eight Proprietors may be constantly kept, if, upon the vacancy of any Proprietorship, the Surviving Seven Proprietors shall not choose a Landgrave as a Proprietor before the Second Biennial Parliament after the vacancy, then the next Biennial Parliament but one after Such vacancy shall have power to choose any Landgrave to be Proprietor; but whosoever after the year 1700, either by inheritance or choice, shall Succeed any Proprietor in his proprietorship, and Seigniories thereunto belonging, shall be obliged to take the name and Arms of that proprietor whom he Succeeds, which from thenceforth shall be the name and Arms of his Family and their posterity.

Article 8 was struck out and the following was submitted:

Whatsoever Landgrave or Cacique shall any way come to be a Proprietor shall take the Seigniories annexed to the said Proprietorship, but his former dignity, with the Baronies annexed, shall devolve into the hands of the Lords Proprietors.

Article 10 was revised to read as follows:

The first Landgrave and Caciques of every County shall be nominated, not by the Joint election of the Proprietors all together, but the eight Proprietors shall, each of them separately, nominate and choose one Landgrave and two Caciques to be the eight Landgraves and the sixteen Caciques for the eight first Counties to be Planted; and when the said eight Counties shall be planted, the proprietors shall, in the same manner, nominate and Chose eight more Landgraves and sixteen Caciques for the eight next Counties to be planted; and so proceed, in the same manner, till the whole province of Carolina be set out and planted according to the proportions in these fundamental Constitutions.

Article 12 was revised to read as follows:

That the due number of landgraves and Caciques may be always kept up, if, upon the devolution of any Landgraveship or Caciqueship The Palatine's Court shall not settle the devolved dignity, with the Baronies thereunto annexed, before the Second biennial Parliament after Such devolution, the next Biennial Parliament but one after such devolution shall have power to make any one Landgrave or Cacique in the Room of him, who dying with out heirs, his dignity and Baronies devolved.

Article 13 was revised to read as follows:

No one person shall have more than one dignity, with the Seigniories of Baronies thereunto belonging; but whensoever it shall happen that any one who is already Proprietor, Landgrave, or Cacique shall have any of those dignities descend to him by inheritance, it shall be at his choice to keep which of the two dignities, with the Lands annexed, he shall like best, but shall leave the other, with the lands annexed to be enjoyed by him who, not being his heir apparent, and certain successor to his present dignity, is next of blood, unless when a Landgrave or Cacique comes to be proprietor, and then his former dignity and Baronies shall devolve as in Article 8.

Article 16 was revised to read as follows:

After the year 1700, whatsoever Landgrave or Cacique shall, without leave from the Palatine's Court, be out of Carolina during two successive biennial Parliaments shall, at the end of the second biennial Parliament after such his absence, be summoned by Proclamation; and if he come not into Carolina before the next biennial Parliament after Such Summons, then the Grand Council shall have power thence forward to receive all the rents and profits arising out of his Baronies until his return or death, and to dispose of the said profits as they shall think fit.

Article 17 was revised to read as follows:

In every Seigniory, Barony, and Manor, the respective Lord shall have power, in his own name, to hold Court there, for trying of all causes, both Civil and Criminal; But where it shall concern any[28]person being no inhabitant, vassal, or Leet man of the said Barony, Seigniory, or manor, he, upon paying down of forty shillings to the Lords Proprietors' use, shall have an appeal from[29]the Seigniory or Barony Court to the County Court, and from the Manor Court to the precinct Court.

Article 19 was revised to read as follows:

Every Manor shall consist of not less than three thousand Acres and not above twelve thousand Acres in one entire piece; but any three thousand acres or more in one piece and the possission of one Man shall not be a manor unless it be constituted a manor by the grant of the Palatine's Court.

Article 22 was revised to read as follows:

In every Seigniory, Barony, and manor, all the Leet men shall be under the [29]Thence to the County Court was written after from, but was struck out.

Jurisdiction of the respective Lord of the said Seigniory, Barony, or Manor, without appeal from him; nor shall any Leet man or Leet woman have liberty to go off from the Land of his particular Lord and live any where else without Licences obtained from his Said Lord, under hand and Seal.

Article 24 was revised to read as follows:

No man shall be capable of having a Court Leet or Leet men but a Proprietor, Landgrave, or Cacique, or Lord of a Manor. Nor shall any man be a Leet man who has not voluntarily entered himself a Leet man in the Registry of the County Court.[30]

Article 25 was revised to read as follows:

Whoever is Lord of Leet men shall, upon the marriage of a Leet man or Leet woman of his, give them ten Acres of Land for their lives, they paying to him therfor not more than one eighth of all yearly produce and growth of the said ten acres.

Article 26 was struck out and the following was submitted:

No Landgrave or Cacique shall be tried for any criminal cause in any but in the Chief Justice Court,[31] and that by a jury of his peers.

Article 27 was revised to read as follows:

There shall be eight supreme Courts, the first, Called the Palatine's Court, consisting of the Palatine and the other Seven Proprietors. The other seven courts of the other seven great officers shall consist, each of them, of a Proprietor and six Councillors added to him; under each of these latter seven Courts shall be a College of twelve assistants. The twelve assistants of the Several Colleges shall be Chosen: two out of the Landgraves, by the Landgraves' Chamber; two out of the Caciques, by the Caciques' Chamber; two out of the Landgraves, Caciques, or Eldest sons of the Proprietors, by the Palatine's Court; four more of the twelve shall be chosen by the Commons' Chamber out of such as have been or are members of Parliament, Sheriffs, or Justices of the County Court; the other two shall be Chosen by the Palatine's Court out of the aforesaid members of Parliament, or Sheriffs, or Justices of the County Court, or the Eldest sons of Landgraves or Caciques, or younger Sons of Proprietors.

Article 28 was revised to read as follows:

Out of these Colleges shall be Chosen Six Councillors to be joined with each Proprietor in his Court; of which six, one shall be of those who were Chosen into any of the Colleges by the Palatine's Court out of the Landgraves, Caciques, or Eldest Sons of Proprietors; one out of those who were chosen by the Landgrave's Chamber; and one out of those who were Chosen by the Caciques' Chamber; two out of those who were Chosen by the Commons' Chamber; and one out of those who were Chosen by the Palatine's Court out of the Proprietors' younger Sons, or Eldest Sons of Landgraves or Caciques, or Commons Qualified as aforesaid.

Article 30 was revised to read as follows:

No man being a member of the grand Council or of any of the seven Colleges shall be turned out but For misdemeanor, of which the grand Council shall be Judge; and the vacancy of the person so put out shall be filled, not by the Election of the grand Council, [30]The added sentence was first written as follows: Nor shall any man be a Leet man whose contract to be a Leet man is not entered in the Registry of the County Court.

[31]One of the Supreme was written and struck out; in the Chief Justice was substituted.

but by those who first chose him, and out of the same degree he was of who is expelled. But is is not hereby to be understood that the Grand Council has any power to turn out any one of the Lords Proprietors, or their Deputies, The Lords Proprietors having in themselves an inherent original right.[32]

Article 32 was revised to read as follows:

The Palatine's Court shall consist of the Palatine and Seven Proprietors, wherein nothing shall be acted without the presence and consent of the Palatine, or his Deputy, and three others of the Proprietors, or their deputies. This Court shall have power to call Parliaments, to pardon all Offences, to make Elections of all Officers in the Proprietors' dispose, to nominate and appoint port towns; and also, shall have power, by their Order to the Treasurer, to dispose of all public Treasure, excepting money granted by the Parliament and by them directed to some particular public use; and also, shall have a Negative upon all Acts, Orders, Votes, and Judgments of the grand Council and the Parliament. Except only as in Articles 7 and 12; and also, shall have a negative upon all Acts and orders of the Constable's Court and Admiral's Court relating to wars; And shall have all the powers granted to the Proprietors by their patent from our Sovereign Lord The King, except in such things as are limited by these fundamental constitutions.

Article 34 was revised to read as follows:

The Chancellor's Court, consisting of one of the Proprietors and his six Councillors, who shall be called vice-chancellors, shall have the Custody of the Seal of the Palatinate, under which all charters, of Lands or otherwise, Commissions, and grants of the Palatine's Court shall pass, etc. And it shall not be lawful to put the Seal of the Palatinate to any Writing which is not signed by the Palatine, or his Deputy, and three other Proprietors, or their Deputies. To this Court, also, belongs all state matters, dispatches, and treaties, with the Neighbour Indians or any other, so far forth as is permitted by our Charter from our Sovereign Lord the King. To this Court, also, belongs all Invasions of the Law of Liberty of conscience, and all disturbances of the public peace upon pretence of Religion, as also, the Licence of printing. The twelve assistants belonging to this Court shall be called Recorders.

Article 37 was revised to read as follows;

The Admiral's Court, consisting of one of the Proprietors and his Six Councillors, called Consuls, shall have the care and inspection over all ports, Moles, and Navigable Rivers so far as the Tide flows; and also, all the public Shipping of Carolina, and stores thereunto belonging, and all maritime affairs. This Court, also, shall have the power of the Court of Admiralty, and also, to hear and try by Law-Merchant all cases in Matters of Trade between the Merchants of Carolina amongst them selves, arising without the limits of Carolina; as also, all controversies in Merchandising that shall happen between Denizens of Carolina and foreigners. The twelve Assistants belonging to this court shall be called proconsuls. In time of actual war, the High Admiral, whilst he is at Sea, Shall command in chief, and his Six Councillors, or such of them as the Palatine's Court shall for that time and service appoint, shall be the immediate great officers under him, and the proconsuls next to them.

Article 39 was revised to read as follows:

The High Steward's court, consisting of a proprietor and his six Councillors, who shall be called Comptrollers, shall have the care of all foreign and domestic Trade, [32]Are not under the jurisdiction of the Grand Council followed inherent original right, but was struck out.

Manufactures, public buildings and workhouses, high ways, passages by water above the flood of the Tide, drains, sewers and Banks against inundations, Bridges, Posts, Carriers, Fairs, Markets, and all things in order to trade and travel, and any thing that may corrupt, deprave, or infect the common Air or water, and all other things wherein the Public commerce or health is concerned; and also, the setting out and surveying of lands; and also, the setting out and appointing places for towns to be built on in the Precincts, and the prescribing and determining the Figure and bigness of the said Towns according to such Models as the said court shall order, contrary or differing from which Models it shall not be lawful for any one to build in any Town.

Another revision of Article 39 reads as follows:

The High Steward's court, consisting of a proprietor and his six Councillors, who shall be called Comptrollers, shall have the care of all foreign and domestic Trade, Manufactures, public buildings and workhouses, high ways, passages by water above the flood of the Tide, drains, sewers and Banks against inundations, Bridges, Posts, Carriers, Fairs, Markets, Corruptions or infections of the common air and water, and all things in order to public commerce and health. . . .[33]

Nothing in the manuscript indicates which revision of Article 39 was adopted, but the latter appears in the March 1, 1670, version.

Article 40 was first revised to read as follows:

This Court shall have power, also, to make any public building or any new high way, or enlarge any old high way, upon any Man's Land whatsoever; as also, to make cuts, Channels, Banks, locks, and Bridges, for making Rivers Navigable, for draining of Fens, or any other public uses; the damage the owner of such land, on or through which any such public thing shall be made, shall receive therby shall be valued by a Jury of twelve men of the Precinct in which any such thing is done, and satisfaction shall be made accordingly by a Tax, either on the County or that particular precinct, as the grand Council shall think fit to order in that particular case. And if it be a Seigniory or Barony on or through which any such public thing shall be made, then the damage the owner of the said Seigniory or Barony shall receive thereby shall be valued by the High Steward's Court, and satisfaction shall be made accordingly by a tax on the County. The twelve assistants belonging to this Court shall be called Surveyors.

Article 40 was finally revised to read as follows:

This Court shall have power, also, to make any public building or any new high way, or enlarge any old high way, upon any Man's Land whatsoever; as also, to make cuts, Channels, Banks, locks, and Bridges, for making Rivers Navigable, for draining of Fens, or any other public uses; the damage the owner of such land, on or through which any such public thing shall be made, shall receive thereby shall be valued, and satisfaction made, by such ways as the Grand Council[34]shall appoint. The twelve assistants belonging to this Court shall be called Surveyors.

Article 45 was struck out and the following was substituted:

In all the Proprietors' Courts, the Proprietor and any three of his Councillors shall make a Quorum; Provided always, that, for the better dispatch of business, it shall be in the power of the Palatine's Court to direct what sort of causes shall be heard and determined by a Quorum of any three.

[33]The remainder of the article, as thus revised, was unchanged.
[34]The High Steward's Court was written and struck out; Grand Council was substituted.

Article 46 was revised to read as follows:

The grand Council shall consist of the Palatine, and Seven Proprietors, and the forty two Councillors of the Several Proprietors' Courts; who shall have power to determine any Controversies that may arise between any of the Proprietors' Courts about their respective Jurisdictions, or between the Members of one and the same Court about their manner and methods of proceeding; to make peace and war, Leagues, Treaties, etc., with any of the Neighbour Indians; To issue out their General Orders to the Constable's and Admiral's Court for the Raising, disposing, or disbanding the Forces, by land or by Sea; to prepare all matters to be proposed in Parliament; nor shall any matter whatsoever be proposed in Parliament but what his first passed the Grand Council, which, after having been read three several days in the Parliament, shall be passed or rejected.

Article 54 was revised to read as follows:

Each Proprietor's deputy shall be always one of their own Six Councillors respectively; And in case any of the Proprietors has not, in his absence out of Carolina, a Deputy in Carolina, commissioned under his hand and seal, the Eldest Nobleman of his Court shall of course be his Deputy.

Article 55 was struck out and the following was substituted:

In Every County there shall be a Court, consisting of a Sheriff and four Justices of the County Court, for Every precinct one. The Sheriff Shall be an inhabitant of this County and have at least five hundred acres of freehold within the said County; and the Justices Shall be inhabitants and have, each of them, five hundred acres apiece in the precinct for which they Serve respectively. These five Shall be chosen, commissioned from time to time by the Palatine's Court.[35]

Article 57 was revised to read as follows:

In every Precinct there shall be a Court, consisting of a Steward and four Justices of the Precinct, being Inhabitants and having three hundred Acres of Freehold within the said Precinct; who shall Judge all Criminal causes, except for Treason, Murder, and any other offences punished with death and all criminal causes of the Nobility; and all civil causes whatsoever, and in all personal actions not exceeding fifty pounds without appeal; but where the Cause shall exceed that Value, or concern a Title of land, and in all Criminal causes, there, either party, upon paying five pounds to the Proprietors' use, shall have Liberty of appeal unto the County Court.

Article 67 was revised to read as follows:

A new Parliament shall be assembled the first Monday of the Month of November every second year, and shall meet and Sit in the Town they last Sat in, without any Summons, unless by the Palatine's Court they be Summoned to meet at any other place; and if there shall be any occasion of a Parliament in these Intervals, it shall be in the power of the Palatine's Court to assemble them on forty days' notice, at Such time and place as the said Court shall think fit; and the Palatine's Court shall have power to dissolve the said Parliament when they Shall think fit.

Article 71 was revised to read as follows:

Any Proprietor, or his Deputy, may enter his Protestation against any act of the Parliament, before the Palatine or his deputy's consent be given as aforesaid, if he shall [35]And shall try and judge all appeals from any of the General Courts followed Palatine's Court, but was struck out.

conceive the said act to be contrary to this Establishment or any of these Fundamental Constitutions of the Government; and in Such case, after a full and free debate, the several Estates shall retire into four several Chambers, the Palatine and Proprietors into one, the Landgraves into another, and the Caciques into another, and those Chosen by the Precincts into a fourth; and if the major part of any of these four Estates shall Vote that the law is not agreeable to this Establishment and these fundamental constitution of the Government, then it shall pass no further, but be as if it had never been proposed. The Quorum of the Parliament shall be one half of those who are members and capable of sitting in the house that present session of Parliament. The Quorum of each of the Chambers of Parliament shall be one half of the members of that Chamber.

Article 74 was revised to read as follows:

There shall be a Registry in every precinct, wherein shall be enrolled all deeds, Leases, Judgments, mortgages, or other conveyances which may concern any of the land within the Said Precinct; and all Such conveyances not so entered or Registered shall not be of force against any person not privy to the Said contract or conveyance.

Article 77 was revised to read as follows:

There shall be a Registry in every Seigniory, Barony, and Colony, wherein shall be Recorded all the Births, Marriages, and deaths that shall happen within the said Colony.

Article 79 was revised to read as follows:

The time of every one's Age that is born in Carolina shall be Reckoned from the day that his Birth is entered in the Registry, and not before.

Article 80 was revised to read as follows:

No marriage shall be lawful, whatever Contract of Ceremonies they have used, till both the parties mutually own it before the Register[36] where they were married, and he enter it, with the names of the Father and mother of each party.

Article 81 was revised to read as follows:

No man shall administer to the goods, or have right to them, or enter upon the Estate, of any person deceased till his death be Registered in the Respective Registry.

Article 82 was revised to read as follows:

He that does not enter in the respective Registry the death or Birth or any person that dies or is born in his house or ground shall pay to the said Register one shilling per week for each Such neglect, Reckoning from the time of each death or birth respectively to the time of Registering it.

Article 84 was revised to read as follows:

There shall be in every Colony one Constable, to be Chosen annually by the Freeholders of the Colony, his Estate to be above one hundred acres of Freehold within the Said Colony; and Such Subordinate officers appointed for his assistance as the County Court shall find requisite, and shall be Established by the said County court; the Election of the Subordinate annual officers shall be also in the Freeholders of the Colony.

[36] Of the place where they ——— [illegible] dwells was inserted here, but was struck out, and where they were married was substituted.

Article 85 was revised to read as follows:

All Towns incorporate shall be Governed by a Mayor, twelve Aldermen, and twenty four of the Common Council; the Said Common Council to be chosen by the present householders of the Said Town; and the Aldermen to be Chosen out of the Common Council, and the Mayor out of the Aldermen, by the Palatine's Court.

Article 90 was revised to read as follows:

In the terms of Communion of every church or profession, these following shall be three, without which no agreement or assembly of men upon pretence of Religion shall be accounted a Church or Profession within these Rules:

1. That there is a God.
2. That God is publicly to be worshipped.
3. That it is lawful, and the duty of every man, being thereunto called by those that Govern, to bear witness to truth; and that every church or profession shall, in their Terms of Communion, Set down the External way whereby they witness a truth as in the presence of God, whether it be by laying hands on and Kissing the Bible, as in the Protestant and Papist Churches, or by holding up the hand, or any other Sensible way.

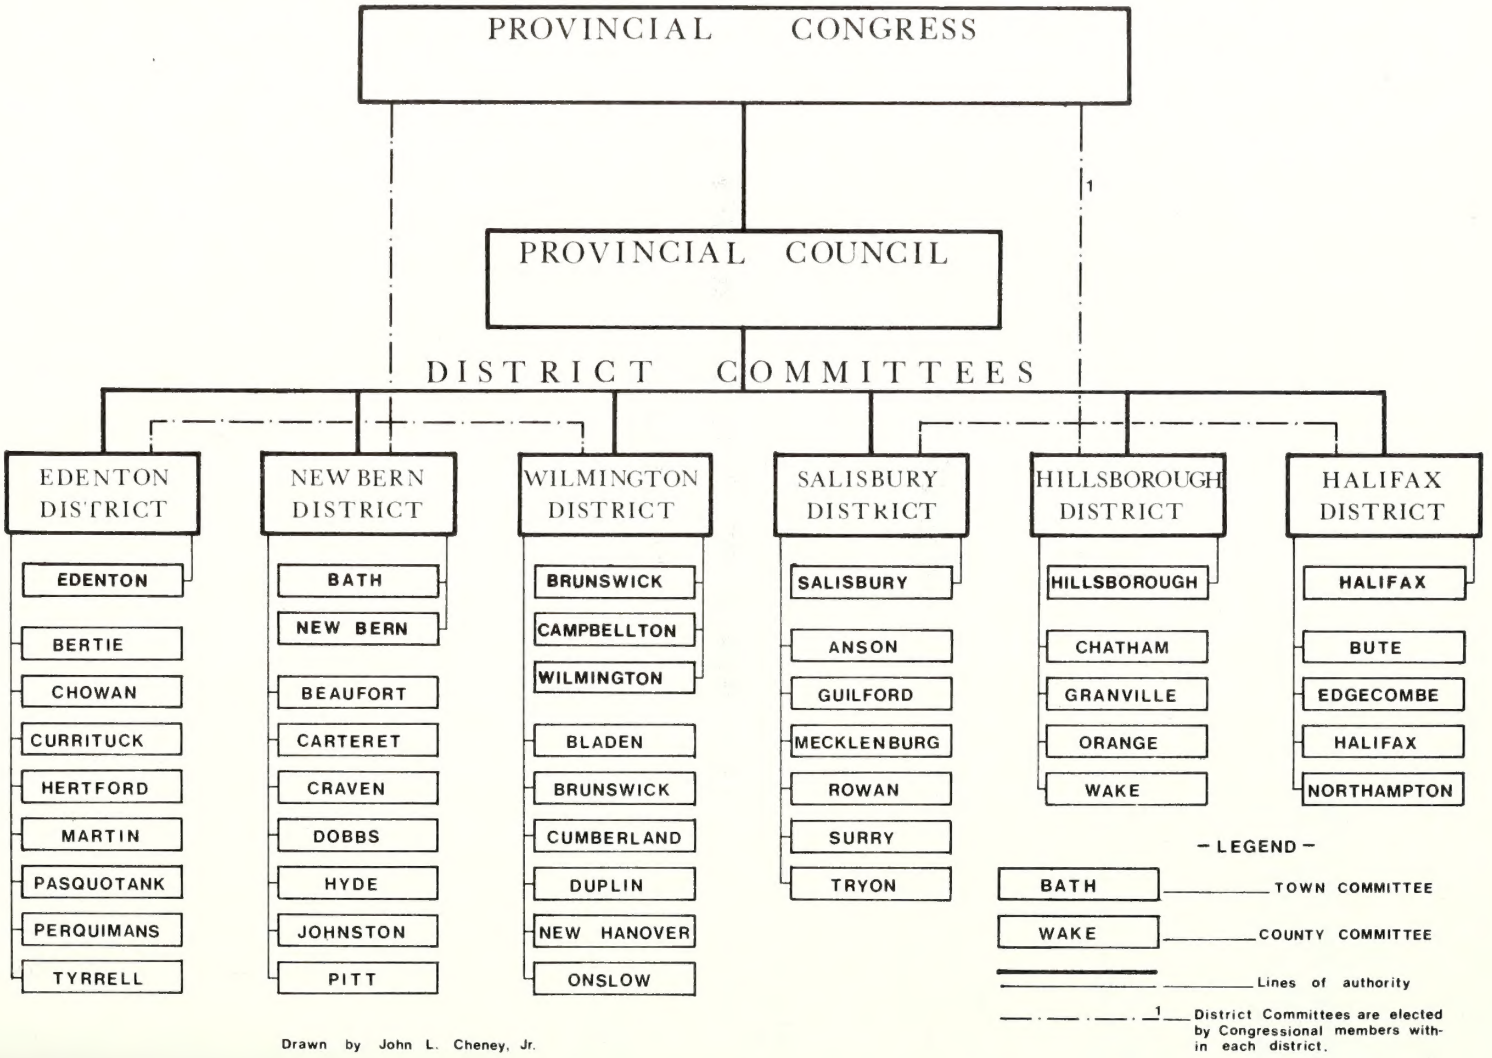
Article 95 was revised to read as follows:

Any person Subscribing the terms of Communion of any church or profession in the Record of the said church before the Precinct Register and any five members of the church or profession shall be thereby made a member of the Said church or profession.

Article 96 was revised to read as follows:

Any person striking out his own name out of any religious Record, or his name being struck out by any officer thereunto Authorized by Each church or profession respectively, shall cease to be a member of that Church or profession.

Article 101 was revised to read as follows:



Every Freeman of Carolina shall have absolute power and Authority over his Negro Slaves, of what opinion or Religion soever.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT

Provincial Council

[1]The information in this section was obtained from the "Journals of the Proceedings of the Provincial Council of North Carolina," found in Saunders, Council Records, X, 283-294, 349-362, and 469-477.

Council of Safety

[2]The information in this section was obtained from the "Journals of the Proceedings of the Council of Safety of North Carolina," found in Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 618d-647, 682-707, 826-830, and 873-881.

[3]Harnett was granted a leave of absence at the end of the July-August session.

[4]Ashe was chosen to replace Harnett on August 21, 1776 and was granted a leave of absence at the end of the September session.

[5]Jones was chosen to replace Ashe on September 27, 1776.

[6]Eaton served on June 19 and 20 during the absence of Harnett.

Provincial Congress

[7]The information in this section was obtained from the "Journals of the Proceedings of the Provincial Congresses of North Carolina," found in Saunders, Colonial Records, IX, 1041-1049, 1178-1185; X, 164-220, 499-590, and 913-1013.

[8]Harvey was moderator during the first and second congresses.

[9]Johnston was chosen president at the third congress and served in this capacity throughout the third and fourth congresses.

[10]Caswell was chosen president at the fifth congress.

[12]Harnett was appointed vice-president on December 21, 1776.

[13]Knox served as clerk during the first and second congresses and as secretary during the third.

[14]Craige served as clerk during the third congreess only.

[15]See footnote 13.

[20]Gooding served during the fifth congress only.

[21]The seats of Bright, Caswell and Miller were declared vacated on April 10, because of their "appointment as officers in the Continental and Military service." A new election was ordered. All three were re-elected and allowed to take their seats on April 27.

[22]See footnote 21.

[24]Jones was appointed Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Southern District by the Continental Congress, and vacated his seat.

[25]Webb was elected to replace Jones until he returned.

[26]Jarvis' seat was vacated because he held "an appointment on the provincial establishment at the time of his election." A new election was ordered.

[27]Hogan's seat was vacated on November 28 follwing his appointment as an officer in the Continental Army. A new election was ordered.

[28]Haywood was elected to replace Hogan and took his seat on December 7.

[29]Ingram's seat was vacated on November 28 following his appointment as an officer in the Continental Army. A new election was ordered.

[30]Parker was elected to replace Ingram and took his seat on December 9.

[31]The Committee on Elections declared the first election held in Orange County to be void and ordered new ones held on December 10. On this date a new set of delegates was elected, and they took their seats on December 16 and 17.

[32]See footnote 31.

[33]Jones' seat was vacated on November 15 because he held "an appointment as an officer in the Continental Service." A new election was ordered. He was re-elected on November 28 and allowed to take his seat on December 3.

GOVERNORS

[1]The Constitution of 1776 provided for the election of the governor by the general assembly. Paragraph 15, "The Constitution of 1776," Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 1003.

[2]Caswell was appointed by the Provincial Congress to act "until [the] next General Assembly." He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term. "An Ordinance for appointing a Governor, Council of State, and Secretary, until next General Assembly," December 20, 1776, Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 979, 1013.

[4]The House and Senate Journals for 1780 are missing; however, loose papers found in the North Carolina Archives provided the necessary information. He requested that his name be withdrawn from nomination in 1781. Legislative Papers, House of Commons, April 17-30, 1780, LP 31, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Legislative Papers, April 17-30, 1780; Nash to Speaker of the House, June 24, 1781, "The Senate Journal, 1781," Clark, State Records, 802-803.

[5]On September 12, 1781, Burke and several other state officials and continental officers were captured by the British. Burke was sent to Sullivan's Island near Charleston, South Carolina and later transferred to James Island. After several attempts, he was able to obtain a parole to return to North Carolina in late January, 1782. General Alexander Leslie who issued the parole, later changed his mind and wrote General Nathaniel Greene requesting the immediate return of Burke. Feeling that it was more important for him to remain in North Carolina, Burke refused to comply with the request despite urgings from several men of importance who questioned the legality, as well and the prudency of his actions. The adversity which developed, prompted Burke to have his name withdrawn from the list of nominees for governor in 1782. He retired from public life to his home near Hillsborough where he died the following year. Crabtree, North Carolina Governors, 49-50; Leslie to Greene, January 27, 1782, Governors Letter Books, Thomas Burke, 1781-1782, GLB 4, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 17, hereinafter cited as Burke Letter Book, 1781-1782.

[6]Martin, as speaker of the senate, was qualified as acting governor upon receiving news of Burke's capture. He served in this capacity until Burke returned to North Carolina in late January, 1782. Council Minutes, October 5, 1781, Council Minutes and Papers, 1781-1790, GO 119.1, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Council Minutes, 1781-1790.

[7]On November 26, 1789 Johnston was elected as United States Senator after having already qualified as governor. A new election was held on December 5, and Alexander Martin was elected to replace him.

[8]See footnote 7.

[9]Davie served only one term as governor due to his appointment in 1799 by President Adams to a special diplomatic mission to France. Crabtree, North Carolina Governors, 57.

[10]Ashe died before he could qualify, and Turner was elected to replace him.

[11]See footnote 10.

[12]Turner was elected to the United States Senate on November 21, 1805 to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Montford Stokes.

[13]He declined to run for re-election.

COUNCIL OF STATE

[1]He declined to serve. There is some confusion as to whether anyone was appointed to replace him. R. D. W. Connor in his 1913 North Carolina Manual gives the names of John Gray Blount, James Coor, and Martin Perry as councillors. Except for the appearance of their names in a list of people taking an "Oath of Allegiance," there is no evidence that they ever served as councillors—their names do not appear in any of the council journals, nor were "allowances for attendence" granted to any of them. A probable explanation is that like all officials in the new state government, they were required to take the oath before entering into office and were in New Bern for that purpose only. Caswell to Burke, February 16, 1777; "Oath of Allegiance signed by member of the Council of State," January 16, 1777; and "Estimate," January 16, 1777, Clark, State Records, XI, 393, 263-364,363.

[111]Lenoir declined to serve.

[113]Shepherd served during the August meeting only.

STATE OFFICIALS

[1]Most state officials were elected by the general assembly at its annual (biennial, after 1835) meeting for a term of one year. The Constitutional Convention of 1835 extended the terms of office for state officers, but the power of election remained in the hands of the general assembly. The dates of election given for the various officials are the dates on which they were first elected to that office. All information in this section was found in the original journals of the House and Senate in the North Carolina Department of Archives and History and the North Carolina Department of the Secretary of State—both in Raleigh. All other sources have been so noted.

Secretary of State

[2]Glasgow was appointed by the provincial congress to serve until the next meeting of the general assembly. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and continued serving until 1798 when he resigned because of his involvement in a land scandle. His resignation was received by the General Assembly on November 20. "An Ordinance for appointing a Governor, Council of State, and Secretary, until the next General Assembly," December 20, 1776, Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 1013.

[3]See footnote 2.

[4]White was elected to replace Glasgow and served until his death sometime in late September, or early November, 1811.

[5]Hill died on October 29, 1857. His 46 years of service is the longest of any elected state official. Council Minutes, November 10, 1857, Council Journal, 1855-1889.

[6]Page was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and was defeated for re-election in 1862 by Russ. Council Minutes, November 10, 1857, Council Journal, 1855-1889.

[8]Russ requested that his name be withdrawn at the end of the first round of balloting in 1864.

[9]Thomas, who was first elected by the general assembly, took office on January 3, 1865 and served until the end of the Civil War. He was then appointed secretary in the provisional government headed by William W. Holden, but resigned on August 12, 1865. "Thomas to General Assembly," January 3, 1865, Senate Journal, 1864-1865; State Appointments, Secretary of State, Record Book Relative to the Provisional Government, 1865, 120; "Special Orders No. 88," July 12, 1865, Governors Letter Book, William W. Holden, 1865, GLB 51, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 1.

[10]See footnote 9.

[11]Best may have been appointed earlier by Holden following the resignation of Thomas since his name appears beneath that of Thomas in the Record Book; however, only the date 1865 is given. He was later elected by the general assembly and served until the new constitution was put into effect in 1868. State Appointments, Secretary of State, Record Book Relative to the Provisional Government, 1865, 120.

Treasurer

[12]Johnston and Caswell were elected by the provincial congress in 1775. Caswell resigned following his appointment as governor in 1776. Resolution of the Provincial Congress, September 8, 1775, "Journal of the Proceedings of the Provincial Congress of North Carolina, held at Hillsborough 20th August, A.D. 1775," Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 203.

[13]See footnote 12.

[14]Johnston declined to serve due to ill health. Johnston to Caswell, June 7, 1777, Governors Letter Brook, Richard Caswell, 1777-1779, GLB 1.1, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 94, hereinafter cited as Caswell's Letter Book, 1777-1779.

[15]Ashe was elected to replace Caswell.

[16]Skinner was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Johnston. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and continued serving until the district system was abandoned in 1784. Council Minutes, June 11, 1777, Council Minutes, 1777-1780.

[17]See footnote 16.

[19]Johnston declined to serve. Johnston to Caswell, September 17, 1779, Governors Papers, Richard Caswell, Vol. 5, 1779-1780, GP 5, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 29.

[20]Cogdell was defeated for re-election in 1782.

[21]Cathey's name does not appear in the list of nominees for office in 1781.

[22]Records from the treasurer's office indicate that he did not serve after April 25, 1780. Accounts, Wilmington District, 1777-1786, Box 28, Tax and Account Books, Treasurer's and Comptroller's Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Accounts, Wilmington District, 1777-1786.

[23]Rochester was elected by the general assembly to replace Johnston; however, his election was declared illegal on October 26, because he was already a member of the general assembly.

[24]Jones was defeated for re-election in 1782.

[25]Bloodworth was apparently elected by the general assembly at the April Session in 1780. Records from the treasurer's office indicate that he was serving after April, 1780. He seems to have served until 1783 when he was elected to the general assembly. Legislative Papers, House, April 17-30, 1780; Accounts, Wilmington District, 1777-1786.

[26]Cain was elected by the general assembly to replace Bloodworth.

[27]Locke was elected by the general assembly to replace Lanier.

[28]Hunt was the first singular treasurer elected by the general assembly. In 1786 charges of misconduct were brought against him by a "Secret Committee of the General Assembly." Statements concerning the matter were given before a joint meeting of the House and Senate on December 28, and each member was allowed to draw his own conclusions. Two days later he was defeated for re-election by John Haywood.

[29]Haywood died on November 18, 1827 while still in office, having served for thirty years as State Treasurer. Samuel A'Court Ashe, (editor) Biographical History of North Carolina from Colonial Times to the Present, Vol. VI, (Greensboro: Charles L. Van Noppen, Publisher, 1907), 285.

[30]John S. Haywood was elected to replace John Haywood, but decided not to serve. His resignation was accepted by the general assembly on December 4, 1827.

[32]Burton declined to serve.

[33]Mhoon was elected to replace Burton. In 1835 his name was withdrawn from consideration following his declining re-election.

[34]Patterson was elected in 1834 to replace Mhoon and was re-elected in 1835, but failed to give bond within the prescribed fifteen day time period which voided his election. He was then appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council. He declined to run for re-election in 1836. Council Minutes, January 13, 1836, Council Journal, 1835-1836, GO 122.1, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Council Journal, 1835-1836.

[35]See footnote 34.

[37]Court's resignation was presented to the council on April 15, 1839. Council Minutes, April 15, 1839, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[38]Hinton was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Courts. He was later elected by the general assembly; but declined re-election in 1848. Council Minutes, April 15, 1839, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[41]Hinton was defeated for re-election in 1851.

[42]Courts was defeated for re-election in 1862.

[43]Worth served until the end of the war. When the provisional government took over, he was appointed treasurer by Holden. He resigned on November 15, 1865. State Appointments, Treasurer, Record Book Relative to the Provisional Government, 1865, 120.

[45]Sloan was appointed by Holden to replace Worth and served until the new government took over. State Appointments, Treasurer, Record Book Relative to the Provisional Government, 1865, 120.

[46]Battle was elected by the new general assembly and began serving on January 1, 1866. He continued serving until the new constitution went into effect in 1868. "Report of the Treasurer," Document No. 8, Legislative Documents, 1864-1865, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

Attorney General

[47]Avery resigned on May 8, 1779. Avery to Speaker, House of Commons, May 8, 1779, Legislative Papers, LP 27, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Legislative Papers, L.P. 27.

[48]McGuire declined to serve. Council Minutes, July 3, 1779, Folder for October 18, 1779, Legislative Papers, LP 27, hereinafter cited as Council Minutes, July 3, 1779.

[49]Iredell was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace McQuire. He was later elected by the general assembly, but declined to run for re-election in 1782. Council Minutes, July 3, 1779.

[50]See footnote 49.

[51]Moore's resignation was presented to the council on April 9, 1791, but no one was appointed to fill the vacancy. Council Minutes, April 9, 1791, Coouncil Journal and Warrant Book, 1788-1792, GO 121, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[52]Haywood was elected to replace Moore and resigned following his election as judge of the Superior Court of Law and Equity on January 28, 1795.

[54]Seawell was elected to replace Baker and resigned on November 30, 1808.

[55]Fitts was elected to replace Seawell and resigned on July 6, 1810. Fitts to Stone, July 6, 1810, Stone Letter Book, 1808-1810, 330.

[56]Miller was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Council to replace Fitts. Council Minutes, August 21, 1810, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Commission to William Miller, August 21, 1810, Stone Letter Book, 1808-1810, 342.

[57]Burton resigned November 21, 1816. Burton to Miller, November 21, 1816, Miller Letter Book, 1816-1817, 112.

[58]Drew was elected to replace Burton and resigned in November, 1824.

[59]Taylor was elected to replace Drew and died in late June, or early July, 1828.

[60]Jones was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Taylor. Council Minutes, July 31, 1828, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Commission to Robert H. Jones, August 2, 1828, Governors Letter Books, James Iredell, Jr., 1827-1828, GLB 27, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 110, hereinafter cited as Iredell Letter Book, 1827-1828.

[61]Saunders was elected to replace Taylor. On December 16, 1834 a resolution was passed in the House of Commons declaring that the office of Attorney General was vacant because Saunders held a commission from the federal government, which was violation of Chapter 6 of the Laws of 1790—the law prohibited dual office holding by a public official except in special cases. Saunders wrote to Alexander Williams, the Speaker of the House, the following day requesting that he be given "permission to be heard at the bar of the House upon the subject of the Resolution." The request was granted. Despite testimony by Saunders on his own behalf, the House voted 68-60 to uphold the resolution. On December 31, 1834, Saunders sent in his resignation. "Resolution of the House of Commons," December 16, 1834, Vote on Resolution, December 30, 1834 and Letter of Resignation, Saunders to Williams, December 31, 1834, House Journal, 1834-1835.

[62]Daniel was elected to replace Saunders and was defeated for re-election in 1840.

[63]McQueen's resignation was received by the House of Commons on November 25, 1942. Commission to McQueen, January 2, 1841, Commissions and Resignations, Morehead to Bragg, Commission Book, 1841-1877, SS 1054, Secretary of State Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Commission Book, 1841-1877.

[64]Whitaker was elected to replace McQueen, and his name was withdrawn from the list of nominees after two rounds of voting in 1846.

[65]Stanley resigned on May 8, 1848. Stanley to Graham, May 8, 1848, Governors Letter Book, William A. Graham, 1846-1848, GLB 37, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 567, hereinafter cited as Graham Letter Book, 1856-1848.

[66]Moore was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Stanley. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and resigned in May, or June, 1851. Council Minutes, May 20, 1848, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[68]Eaton was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Moore. Council Minutes, June 13, 1851, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Commission dated January 30, 1849, Commission Book, 1841-1877.

[69]Ransom was elected by the general assembly to replace Moore and resigned on May 2, 1855. Commission dated January 4, 1853, Commission Book, 1841-1877; Ransom to Bragg, May 2, 1855, Bragg Letter Book, 1855-1857, 41.

[70]Batchelor was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Ransom. He resigned November 26, 1856. Council Minutes, May 25, 1855, Council Journal, 1855-1889; Batchelor to Bragg, November 26, 1856, Bragg Letter Book, 1855-1857, 600.

[71]Bailey was elected by the general assembly to fill the unexpired term of Batchelor. Commission dated January 5, 1857, Commission Book, 1841-1877.

[72]Jenkins was elected to replace Ransom; however, the office was declared vacant on December 8, 1862 because Jenkins had accepted a commission in the Confederate Army.

[73]Rogers was elected to replace Jenkins and served until the Constitution of 1868 went into effect. Commission dated January 6, 1866, Commission Book, 1841-1877.

Comptroller

[74]Caswell was elected governor on November 9, 1784, but continued serving as comptroller until he qualified on May 13, 1785.

[75]Childs officially qualified before the council on May 13, 1785. Governor Martin reported on August 2, 1792 that the health of Craven was such that death was expected before the meeting of the general assembly. He was authorized by the council to appoint some qualified person to a temporary commission should this occur. Childs died the following November. Entry of May 13, 1785, Council Minutes, 1781-1790; Council Minutes, August 2, 1792, Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[76]Craven was appointed Comptroller pro tempore by Governor Martin upon the death of Childs. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and died on September 3, 1808. A council meeting was called for September 15, 1808 to appoint a successor but several ballotings failed to produce a majority for any one nominee so it was decided to leave the decision to the general assembly. Guion to Burton, September 4, 1808, Williams Letter Book, 1807-1808, 139; Council Minutes, September 15-17, 1808, Council Journal 1795-1855; Death notice, Edenton Gazette, September 15, 1808, 3.

[77]See footnote 76.

[78]Goodwin was elected to replace Craven and died in late June, or early July, 1821.

[79]Hawkins was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Goodwin. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term and died in August, 1827. Council Minutes, July 25, 1821, Council Journal, 1820-1826 GO 122.1, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Council Journal, 1820-1826.

[80]See footnote 79.

[81]Henderson was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Hawkins. Council Minutes, September 4, 1827, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[82]Grant was elected by the general assembly to replace Hawkins. He died in 1834—too late for the governor to call a council and appoint someone else.

[83]Stedman was elected by the general assembly to replace Grant. His name was not in nomination for re-election in 1836.

[84]Collins was defeated for re-election in 1850.

[85]Clarke's name was not in nomination for re-election in 1854.

[86]Brooks was defeated for re-election in 1856.

[87]Brogden was defeated for re-election in 1856.

[88]Burgin served until the Constitution of 1868 was put into effect, and the office of comptroller abolished.

Solocitor General

[89]Haywood resigned on December 27, 1791 following his election as attorney general.

[90]Jones was elected to replace Haywood and resigned on December 6, 1827.

[91]Scott was defeated for re-election in 1835.

Adjutant General

[93]Caswell was appointed to a temporary commission by the governor with the advice and consent of the council. Entry January 2, 1779, Council Minutes, 1777-1780.

[94]Rhodes was elected by the general assembly in accordance with a law passed in 1793 (Chapter 1, Laws of 1793). He was still acting in this capacity as late as August, 1800; however, in that year the Militia laws were revised and the office was discontinued. Rhodes to Williams, August —, 1800, Williams Letter Book, 1799-1802.

[95]Smith was the first adjutant general appointed under the provisions of an 1806 law entitled "A Bill to Revise the Militia Laws of this State, relative to the Infantry," which provided for an adjutant general appointed by the governor. He resigned on December 17, 1807. Commission to Smith, February 10, 1807, Governors Letter Book, Nathaniel Alexander, 1805-1807, GLB 16, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 74-75, hereinafter cited as Alexander Letter Book, 1805-1807; Smith to Williams, December 17, 1807, Williams Letter Book, 1807-1808, 7.

[96]Pasteur was appointed to replace Smith and resigned on June 7, 1808. Commission to Pasteur, December 20, 1807, Pasteur to Williams, July 7, 1808, Williams Letter Book, 1807-1808, 5, 106-113.

[97]The date of Jones' appointment could not be found, but was probably shortly after Pasteur's resignation. Jones resigned on January 23, 1813. Jones to Hawkins, January 23, 1813, Governors Letter Book, Benjamin Hawkins, 1812-1813, GLB 19, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 73, hereinafter cited as Hawkins Letter Book, 1812-1813.

[98]Williams was appointed to replace Jones and died in late June, or early July, 1821. Commission to Williams, January 25, 1813, Hawkins Letter Book, 1812-1813, 77.

[99]Daniel was appointed by the governor to replace Williams, however, it is not known why he stopped serving in 1840. Council Minutes, July 25, 1821, Council Journal, 1820-1826.

[100]Haywood was appointed by the governor to replace Daniel and resigned on February 4, 1857. Commission to Haywood, September 18, 1840, Dudley Letter Book, 1837-1840, 365; Haywood to Bragg, February 4, 1857, Bragg Letter Book, 1855-1857, 688.

[101]On February 16, 1859 a bill entitled "An Act to Repeal a Portion of the 9th section of the 70th Chapter of the Revised Code, entitled 'Militia'," was passed by the general assembly which "repealed" that portion of the code relating "to the appointment and salary of Adjutant General." Several letters of correspondence between Cotton and Ellis reveal that the office was considered abolished. "An Act to Repeal a portion of the 9th section of the 70th Chapter of the Revised Code, entitled Militia, Chapter 22, Laws of North Carolina, 1858-59, (Raleigh: Holden and Wilson, Printers to the State, 1859), 25; Governors Letter Book, John W. Ellis, 1859-1861, GLB 45, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 176-177, hereinafter cited as Ellis Letter Book, 1859-1861; Commission dated, February 4, 1860, Commission Book, 1841-1877.

[102]Daves served as "Acting Adjutant General" and "Acting Assistant Adjutant General" from January 5, 1860 through April 17, 1861. Several letters found in the Ellis Letter Book support this. Ellis Letter Book, 1859-1861.

[103]Hoke was elected by the general assembly and apparently began serving April 18, 1861—all records prior to this date bare the signature of Daves. He resigned on July 13 or 14, 1861 to take a commission in the 13th Regiment of the North Carolina Volunteers. Election results, February 20, 1861, House Journal, 1860-61; Warren Winslow to H. Ray, July 16, 1861, Adjutant Generals Papers, AG 17, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 60, hereinafter cited as Adjutant General Papers, AG 17.

[104]Martin was apparently appointed by Governor Ellis to replace Hoke. He was serving as adjutant general by July 22, 1861. He was later elected by the general assembly. On December 8, 1862 the office was declared vacant by the general assembly, but Martin continued to act as late as March 11, 1863. Winslow to Martin, July 22, 1861, Adjutant General Papers, AG 17, 75; Martin to Morehead, March 11, 1863, Adjutant General Papers, AG 19, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 437.

[106]Fowle began serving in March 1863 and resigned on August 26, 1863. Fowle to Vance, August 26, 1863, Vance Letter Book, 1862-1864, 356.

[107]Gatlin was apparently appointed to replace Fowle, but no date of appointment could be found. He continued serving until the close of the war.

[108]On March 12, 1866, an act by the general assembly was passed recreating the post of adjutant general. Gilmer was appointed shortly afterwards and served until the new constitution went into effect.

Superintendent of Common Schools

Auditor of Public Accounts

[110]Phillips resigned effective July 10, 1864. Phillips to Vance, June 21, 1864, Vance Letter Book, 1862-1864, 527.

[111]Battle was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Phillips. He was later elected by the general assembly to a regular term, and served until the office was abolished in 1865. Council Minutes, July 19, 1864, Council Journal, 1855-1889.

[1]The original House and Senate Journals in the North Carolina Department of the Secretary of State and in the North Carolina Archives were the primary sources for material in this section—other sources have been so noted. Legislators whose names are enclosed in brackets ([]), without a footnote of explanation are found in John H. Wheeler's 1874 Legislative Manual, but could not be certified as to whether they actually were elected. Counties which have dashes (—) under the column for legislative names were entitled to representation but apparently no one was elected to represent the county. The spelling of names was determined from the Journals and/or certificates of election and may vary from one session to another.

[2]A David Smith represented Cumberland County in the provincial congresses, and there is reason to believe he is the same David Smith elected to represent the county in the general assembly.

[4]Spicer was elected to replace Cray and took his seat on December 3.

[5]Skinner was appointed treasurer by Governor Caswell on June 11, 1777, and presumably resigned his seat shortly thereafter.

[6]Jones apparently resigned following the first session, and a new election was ordered.

[7]Rogers was elected to replace Jones and took his seat on November 15.

[8]Ellison was elected, but was out of the country at the time the session began; therefore, a new election was ordered.

[9]Keas was elected to replace Ellison and took his seat on December 4.

[10]Granby and Humphries took their seats on December 8 following an election ordered by the House because no previous election had been held.

[11]Scurlock's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county. A new election was ordered; however, there is no evidence that anyone ever filled the vacancy.

[12]Rand's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county. A new election was ordered; however, there is no evidence that anyone ever filled the vacancy.

[13]Jordan's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[14]Hancock was elected to replace Jordan and took his seat on December 11.

[15]Atherton's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[16]Peebles was elected to replace Atherton and took his seat on December 6.

[17]Rochester's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[18]Burke was elected to replace Rochester and took his seat on December 1.

[19]Ferebee died prior to the opening of the second session, and a new election was ordered.

[20]Harvey was elected to replace Ferebee and took his seat on December 4.

[21]Rice's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected clerk in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[22]Wooten's seat was declared vacant on November 15 because he had been elected sheriff in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[23]Rand was elected to replace Rice and took his seat on December 5.

[24]Jones was elected to replace Wooten and took his seat on December 6.

[25]Turner's name appears in House records and pay records; however, his county of representation could not be determined.

[26]Hill resigned on August 12, and Jones was elected to replace him.

[27]See footnote 26.

[28]McDowell's seat was declared vacant on April 22 because he held another office. A new election was ordered; however, there is no evidence that anyone ever filled the vacancy.

[29]Ramsey's seat was declared vacant on April 22 because he held another office, and a new election was ordered.

[30]Birdsong was elected to replace Ramsey and took his seat on August 8.

[31]Gorrell's seat was declared vacant on April 22 because he held the office of entry taker in his county, and a new election was ordered.

[32]Martin was elected to replace Gorrell and took his seat on August 12.

[33]Bryan's seat was declared vacant on April 22 because he held the office of entry taker in his county. A new election was ordered; however, there is no evidence that anyone ever filled the vacancy.

THE ADMIRALTY COURTS, 1777-1790

[1]Little is known of the Admiralty Court System in North Carolina during early statehood, primarily due to the unexplainable absence of records. Most of the information about those who served as judges was found in executive and legislative records, rather than judicial records, in the North Carolina Archives. The only known extant records of actual cases are transcrips of North Carolina cases which were appealed to the Court of Appeals in cases of capture, these are in the National Archives in Washington, D. C. It has, therefore, been difficult to establish a complete listing of judges and their respective terms. (Sources other than the Journals of the Senate and House of Commons have been so noted.)

[2]Carlton, Neale and Respess were appointed by the Council of Safety to serve temporarily until the next meeting of the general assembly. Journals of the Council of Safety, June 22, 1776, Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 634.

[3]See footnote 2.

[4]See footnote 2.

[5]Wilmington was named in the commission issued by the Council of Safety; however, there is no evidence that anyone was appointed to serve.

[6]Cogdell was appointed by the provincial congress to serve temporarily until the next session of the eneral assmebly. Journals of the Provincial Congress, December 22, 1776, Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 990.

[7]Quince was appointed by the provincial congress to serve temporarily until the next session of the general assembly; however, he apparently declined to serve. Journals of the Provincial Congress, December 23, 1776, Saunders, Colonial Records, X, 998.

[8]Ancrum was appointed by Governor Caswell with the advice and consent of the council to replace Quince and was to serve temporarily until the next meeting of the general assembly. Council Minutes, February 5, 1777, Council Minutes 1777-1780; Gentlemen of the General Assembly, April 9, 1777, Caswell Letter Book, 1777-1779, 57-58.

[9]Campbell was elected by the general assembly, but declined to serve the day following his election.

[10]Jarvis was elected by the general assembly. The term of his service could not be determined, and although James Marshall was elected in December, 1777, extant records indicate that Jarvis was still serving in June, 1778. Harper vs. Liberty, Case 105, The Revolutionary War Prize Cases: Records of the Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture, 1776-1787, Microcopy No. 162, The National Archives, Washington, D.C., 1949, hereinafter cited as Prize Cases, 1776-1787.

[11]Mosely was elected by the general assembly and presumably served until 1782 when a successor was elected. Records indicate that he was still serving in December, 1780. Boitar vs. The Schooner Adventure, Case 106, Prize Cases, 1776-1787.

[12]Respess was elected by the general assembly; however, a successor was elected in August, 1778, and it is not known whether he actually served.

[13]Tisdale was elected by the general assembly. He was suspended on July 12, 1781, until charges of bribery and corruption could be examined. On May 5, 1782 the suspension was removed and he resumed his duties as judge. It is probable that he continued serving until 1787 when a successor was elected.

[14]Blount was elected by the general assembly and apparently served until his death in November, 1777. Beasley was then elected by the general assembly to replace Blount. There is some confusion in existing records, however, for on July 30, 1779, one Josiah Collins was appointed by Governor Caswell to be Admiralty Judge of Edenton—Edenton was the town in which the court for Port Roanoke was held—to replace Joseph Blount, deceased. Council Minutes, July 30, 1779, Council Minutes, 1777-1780.

[15]Cogdell was either elected or appointed, at sometime prior to September, 1780, possibly as early as 1777, since there is no record of anyone else serving at New Bern. Cogdell to Nash, September, 1780, Abner Nash, Governors Papers, State Series, Volume 6, May 24, 1780-June 30, 1781, GP 6, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[17]Records do not indicate whether Marshall ever served. (See footnote 10.)

[18]Willis was elected by the general assembly; however, the term of his service is not known, although there is no indication that anyone else was either elected or appointed for Bath.

[19]See footnote 14.

[20]Green was appointed judge protem by the general assembly until charges against Tisdale were cleared. (See footnote 13.)

[21]Ashe was apparently serving in 1782, although neither the date of his election (or appointment) or the port for which he served could be determined.

[22]Campbell was elected by the general assembly and resigned in 1783, presumably either before or after his election to the general assembly.

[23]See footnote 13.

[24]Spicer was appointed judge protem to replace Campbell; however, the date of his appointment could not be found. He was later elected by the general assembly. His term of service could not be determined.

[25]See footnote 24.

[26]Boyd may have been serving as early as 1783, although the actual date of his election (or appointment) could not be found. He resigned in 1786. Council Minutes, November 2, 1786, Council Papers, 1781-1790.

[27]Skinner resigned on July 20, 1786. The date of his election (or appointment) could not be determined. Caswell to Skinner, September 24, 1786, Caswell Letter Book, 1784-1787, 399.

[28]Leech resigned on August 25, 1787. The date of his election (or appointment) could not be determined. Leech to Caswell, August 25, 1787, Caswell Letter Book, 1785-1787, 674.

[29]Swann was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Council to replace Boyd. He died in November, 1787. Council Minutes, November 2, 1786, Council Papers, 1781-1790.

[30]Kennedy was apparently appointed to replace Leech, although the date of hs appointment could not be determined. He resigned sometime in late 1787.

[31]Beasley was elected to replace Skinner and presumably served until the courts were no longer utilized in 1790.

[32]Hawks, who was probably elected to replace Tisdale, resigned on January 4, 1789. Hawks to Johnston, January 4, 1789, Legislative Papers, 1789.

[33]Snead was elected in 1787, following the creation of the court by the general assembly for Swansborough.

[34]Loomis was elected by the general assembly, but it is not known whom he replaced.

[35]Hill's first name is not known for certain. He was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to fill a vacancy. Council Minutes, March [15], 1789, Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[36]Stanley was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to fill a vacancy. Council Minutes, March [15], 1789, Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[37]Neale was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Hawks. He was later elected by the general assembly. Council Minutes, September 1, 1789, Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[38]See footnote 37.

THE SUPERIOR COURT OF LAW AND EQUITY, 1777-1819

[1]Ashe resigned on November 11, 1795, following his election as governor.

[2]Iredell resigned on June 15, 1778. Caswell to Iredell, June 16, 1778, Caswell Letter Book, 1776-1779, 349.

[3]Spencer died in 1794.

[4]Henderson was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Iredell. He was later elected by the general assembly, but declined to serve. Council Minutes, June 16, 1778, Council Minutes, 1777-1780; Clark, State Records, XXII, 950.

[5]See footnote 4.

[6]Cooke's name was suggested to the governor by the council as a replacement for Henderson; however, there is no evidence that he ever took office. Council Minutes, October 15, 1778, Council Minutes, 1777-1780.

[7]Maclaine was elected by the general assembly to replace Iredell, but declined to serve. Maclaine to Caswell, March 7, 1779, Caswell Letter Book, 1778-1779, 40-41.

[8]Williams was elected by the general assembly to replace Maclaine and died in October, 1799. Ashe, Biographical History, Vol. 3, 435.

[9]In 1790 a fourth position was created on the court, and McKay was elected to fill it. He died on February 29, 1808. Council Minutes, March 21, 1808, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[10]Haywood was elected to replace Spencer and resigned on May 31, 1800. Haywood to Williams, May 31, 1800, Williams Letter Book, 1799-1802, 205-206.

[11]Stone was elected to replace Ashe and resigned in 1798. (The date of his resignation could not be found.)

[12]Moore was elected to replace Stone and resigned on January 14, 1800. Council Minutes, February 7, 1800, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[13]In 1798 an additional position was created on the court, and Taylor was elected to fill this seat. He was elected to the State Supreme Court in 1818.

[14]Johnston was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Moore. He was later elected by the general assembly and resigned on November 18, 1803. Johnston to Turner, November 18, 1803, Turner Letter Book, 1802-1805, 159-160.

[15]See footnote 14.

[16]Hall was elected by the general assembly to replace Haywood. He was elected to the State Supreme Court in 1818. Commission to Hall, February 28, 1801, Williams Letter Book, 1799-1802, 373-374.

[17]Locke was elected by the general assembly to replace Johnston and resigned on February 7, 1814. Commission to Locke, December 16, 1803, Turner Letter Book, 1802-1805, 180-181; Locke to Hawkins, February 7, 1814, Hawkins Letter Book, 1813-1814, 76-78.

[18]In 1806 the general assembly created two new positions on the court, and Lowrie was elected to fill one of them. He died on December 23, 1817. John Branch to William Blackledge, January —, 1818, Branch Letter Book, 1817-1820, 27.

[19]Stone was elected by the general assembly to fill the other position when the court was expanded. He resigned in December, 1808 following his election as governor.

[20]Baker was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace McKay. Council Minutes, March 21-23, 1808, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[21]Henderson was elected by the general assembly to replace McKay and resigned on February 17, 1816. Henderson to Miller, February 17, 1816, Miller Letter Book, 1814-1816, 407-408.

[22]Wright was elected by the general assembly to replace Stone. He sent his resignation to Governor Smith on May 7, 1811 so that a replacement could be appointed should he not be back from his trip in time to hold court. He was ill at the time and died on June 10. Wright to Smith, May 7, 1811, Smith Letter Book, 1810-1811, 64; Council Minutes, July 6, 1811, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Raleigh Register, June 21, 1831, 3.

[23]Seawell was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Wright. Council Minutes, July 6, 1811, Council Journal, 1795-1855.

[24]Harris was elected by the general assembly to replace Wright and died on March 29, 1813. Alexander Troy to Hawkins, March 29, 1813, Hawkins Letter Book, 1812-1813, 162-163.

[25]Seawell was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Council to replace Harris. He was later elected by the general assembly to replace Harris and resigned on March 7, 1819. Council Minutes, April 22, 1813, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Hawkins to Seawell, April 23, 1813, Hawkins Letter Book, 1812-1813, 162-163; Commission to Seawell, December 25, 1813, Hawkins Letter Book, 1813-1814, 39; Seawell to Branch, March 7, 1819, Branch Letter Book, 1817-1820, 142.

[26]See footnote 25.

[27]Cameron was appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council to replace Locke. He was elected by the general assembly and resigned in 1816. (The date of his resignation could not be found.) Council Minutes, February 26, 1814, Council Journal, 1795-1855; Commission to Cameron, Webruary 26, 1814, Hawkins Letter Book, 1813-1814, 106, 107.

[28]See footnote 27.

NORTH CAROLINA IN THE CONFEDERACY

1861-1865

NORTH CAROLINA IN THE SERVICE OF THE CONFEDERACY

JOHN G. BARRETT*

North Carolina, a state in the upper South, played a relatively minor role in the great secession drama of 1860-61. While the "fire-eaters" in South Carolina and the other states of the lower South were calling for secession, most North Carolinians still favored the Union.[1] Nowhere was this contrast between upper and lower South more evident than in the two Carolinas.[2] South Carolina was the first state to leave the Union, North Carolina the last.[3]

The news that Lincoln had won the presidential election of 1860 triggered the secession of the states of the lower South, but in North Carolina the general sentiment seemed to be one of watch and wait. There was little or no talk of secession. The new president, it was thought, should be given a reasonable length of time to reveal his position.[4] An effort to call a convention to consider the sectional crisis was defeated in February, 1861.

Not a few Union newspapers hailed the state's rejection of a convention "as the death blow to secession."[5] North Carolina "radicals,"[6] however, remained undaunted and continued their demands for withdrawal. Events outside the state aided them considerably. The failure of the Washington Peace Conference worked to their advantage because many North Carolinians "had staked much on its success."[7] The final blow was Lincoln's call on April 15 for seventy-five thousand troops to suppress a Southern "insurrection." Secretary of War Simon Cameron wired Governor John W. Ellis to furnish two regiments for immediate service. The governor not only emphatically refused to supply any troops but at the same time ordered Captain M. D. Croton and his "Goldsboro Rifles" to occupy Fort Macon on Bogue Banks and Colonel John L. Cantwell to take possession of Forts Caswell and Johnston at the mouth of the Cape Fear. Later the United States Arsenal at Fayetteville and the Branch Mint at Charlotte were taken over by state troops.[8]

Meanwhile Governor Ellis had issued a proclamation notifying the general assembly to meet in special session on May 1. Certain that withdrawal from the Union was only a matter of time and drafting the proper documents, the Governor began the task of putting the state on a wartime footing. Before the general assembly convened, W. H. C. Whiting was made inspector general in charge of the state's defenses. Military companies were organized, and an encampment named after Governor Ellis was established near Raleigh. In a short while over five thousand troops assembled at this hastily established camp.[9]

*JOHN G. BARRETT was born in Gastonia, North Carolina on August 24, 1921 to the Reverend and Mrs. W. C. Barrett. He was educated in the Laurinburg Public Schools and earned a B.A. (1943) degree from Wake Forest College. Following service in the Navy during World War II, he returned to North Carolina and attended the University of North Carolina Graduate School earning his M.A. (1950) and PhD (1954) degrees in History. Dr. Barrett has taught History at Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Virginia since 1954. He and his wife, the former Lute Buie of Wagram, North Carolina, were married in 1952, and have two daughters—Rebecca Anne and Margaret McKay. Dr. Barrett has written several articles and books on the Civil War period of North Carolina history.

When the general assembly convened on May 1, Governor Ellis recommended a convention to the legislative body as the only legal means by which secession could be accomplished. The assembly speedily enacted into law the governor's proposal, and on May 29 in Raleigh "the convention which was chosen to dissolve the connection between North Carolina and the government of the United States" adopted an ordinance of secession. It "repealed and abrogated the ordinance of 1789 by which North Carolina had ratified the Constitution of the United States and declared the union between the state of North Carolina and the other states, under the title of 'The United States of America' dissolved."[10]

On the 20th the convention also adopted an ordinance ratifying the Provisional Constitution of the Confederate States of America. The following day one hundred and twenty members of the convention signed the engrossed ordinance of secession. "With the issuance of President Davis' proclamation of May 21, North Carolina formally became a member of the Southern Confederacy. By that act it cast its lot against the Union which it loved so well and from which it had been forced to withdraw."[11]

North Carolina found a "custom-made government waiting." On February 4, 1861, at Montgomery, Alabama the Confederate States of America had been formed. The constitution of this new republic quite logically recognized the "sovereign and independent character" of the Confederate states. State legislative bodies thus found themselves shouldering new responsibilities. Great significance was attached to their programs and policies.[12] But for a time the general assemblies had to share their authority with the secession conventions.

The North Carolina convention met four times between May, 1861, and November, 1862. During this period it served as a law making body. Controlled by "elderly men who were mainly Whigs and Unionists," [13] its work pleased most North Carolina conservatives. Jonathan Worth hoped it would replace the general assembly throughout the war.[14] However, in the fall of 1862, when the newly elected governor of the state, Zebulon B. Vance, urged that the convention assemble to deal with the problems of extortion and speculation, the president of that body felt it wise to decline. At the moment the convention was under attack from many quarters. With this development North Carolina's political destiny became the sole responsibility of the governor, the courts, and elected legislators.[15]

All three branches of government faced unfamiliar tasks. Since North Carolina retained the biennial system throughout the war, it was found to be expedient to have numerous called meetings. Seven extra or adjourned sessions of the general assembly were held. Even so law makers could not keep abreast of the formidable problems faced by the state.

The death of Governor Ellis three months after the start of the war greatly complicated the situation over the governorship. In the absence of any lieutenant governor, the presiding officer of the Senate, Henry T. Clark, became the state's chief executive officer. The convention ruled the governorship would be open at the end of Clark's term in the Senate. The election date was set for August 6, 1862, except for soldiers in camp who could cast their ballots a week earlier.

Seldom has one so young as Vance been elected governor of a state[16] with so little effort on his part. Yet, for several weeks before the election numerous public meetings as well as newspapers had been endorsing Vance for the governorship. Friends urged him to run. Thus it was not difficult for the thirty-two year old Colonel of the Twenty-sixth North Carolina to write: "If . . . my fellow citizens believe that I could serve the great cause better as Governor than I am now doing, and should see proper to confer this great responsibility upon me without soliciation on my part, I should not feel at liberty to decline it; however conscious of my own unworthiness." With these words the young officer launched his brief campaign for the governorship of North Carolina, a course that was to give him the unique title of "the war governor of the South."[17]

Vance ran as a Conservative party candidate. His backers were primarily "old Whigs" and those Democrats who had been hostile to secession until the outbreak of hostilities. These people considered the war tragic. They blamed it on Northern abolitionists and the mistaken policies of Southern secessionists. The opposition or Confederate party nominee was William J. Johnston, a railroad official and original secessionist who ardently supported President Davis and the Confederate administration.

Vance was denounced by the opposition as a "Yankee" candidate whose victory would show the North that Unionism was "in the ascendancy in the heart of the Southern Confederacy."[18] In reply Vance stated that the only hope of the South . . . [was] the prosecution of the war at all hazards and to the utmost extremety so long as the foot of an invader pressed the Southern soil."[19] The result was a sweeping victory for Vance at the polls. In his inaugural address, delivered September 8, the new governor eliminated all doubts as to his devotion to the Confederacy. He promised to prosecute the war until the South obtained its independence. Furthermore he accepted secession as the deliberate judgement of the people of the state.[20] The press of both parties endorsed the inaugural and indicated its intention to back the young chief executive.

Early in his administration Vance turned his attention to driving Federal troops from North Carolina soil. As a result of Federal victories at Hatteras, Roanoke Island and New Bern much of coastal North Carolina was lost to the Confederacy by the spring of 1862. Operating out of New Bern and other nearby bases Federal detachments conducted raids as far west as Goldsboro. Consequently Vance received many letters from eastern Carolinians urging that more troops be sent to their region. The governor, in turn, maintained a vigorous correspondence with Richmond in which he demanded that Confederate troops be ordered to eastern North Carolina immediately. Since these pleas were often made without taking the Virginia front into consideration, they were seldom answered, much to Vance's chagrin.

On one occasion in 1862 Vance recommended that the General Assembly raise "at least ten regiments of reserves, to be accepted for three or four months and dismissed in time to pitch their crops in the spring."[21] The lower house responded by passing a bill authorizing the governor to raise a 10,000 man force. The bill, nevertheless, died on its second reading in the Senate.

The failure of the legislative body to raise more troops for the defense of the state only made Vance more insistant that Davis send reinforcements. And he met with occasional success. In the spring of 1863 General D. H. Hill was sent from Virginia to move against New Bern and Washington, (N. C.) But the distinguished North Carolinian failed to take either place, and by the last of May most of his regiments were back in the Old Dominion. Then in early 1864 General George Pickett was detached from Lee's command and sent to North Carolina. After conducting an unsuccessful operation against New Bern, his major objective, he returned to Virginia. However, Pickett's able subordinate, General Robert F. Hoke of Lincolnton, captured both Plymouth and Washington that spring and was poised for an attack on New Bern only to be ordered back to Petersburg. This marked the end of the Confederate offensive in North Carolina and fortunately for Vance the Federals conducted no major offensive operations in the state until December of '64 when Fort Fisher below Wilmington came under heavy attack. Thus during the summer of that year the governor almost ceased his calls on Richmond for troops. It is well that he did because no units from Lee's weakened army could have been detached for service in the state.

Besides hounding Davis for troops the young governor strongly critized the chief executive for discriminating against North Carolina in civil and military appointments. During the latter part of the war North Carolinians held no cabinet positions except that of attorney general and relatively few natives of the state were ever given high military rank; yet North Carolina furnished the Confederacy with between 1/6 and 1/7 of its troops.[22] Vance also complained constantly that "outsiders," particularily Virginians, were being appointed to command North Carolina units. On one occasion he declared: "It is mortifying to find entire brigades of North Carolina soldiers in the field commanded by strangers and in many cases our own brave and war-worn colonels are made to give place to colonels from distant states."[23] He was disturbed further by the practice of the Confederate government of appointing citizens of other states to important non-military posts in North Carolina. Especially displeasing to him was the selection of Colonel T. P. Aujust of Virginia as commandant of conscripts. The Governor felt the appointment smacked "of discourtesy toward our people."[24]

Vance's concern went beyond the question of who would command North Carolina troops in the field to what he considered to be the outrageous conduct of certain Confederate forces operating in the state. When he learned that "a parcel of armed soldiers from Georgia" had seized and carried off several citizens of Cherokee County, he instructed the officers of that county "to call out the militia and shoot the first man who attempts to perpetrate a similiar outrage."[25] At about the same time, the spring of 1863, another incident occured in the mountains to infuriate the governor. Colonel J. A. Keith of the Sixty-Fourth North Carolina had thirteen old men and boys shot for supposedly participating in a salt raid on the small town of Marshall. Angered by what he considered to be the murder of civilians, Vance demanded that Keith be punished, but his efforts to have the colonel tried for murder were unsuccessful.[26]

One of the bitterest conflicts between the State of North Carolina and the Confederate government concerned the drastic conscription acts of 1862, '63 and '64. Soldiers considered them "unethical and discriminatory"; lawyers labeled them as unconstitutional and newspapers condemned them. Although Vance thought Richmond's enforcement of the laws "ruthless and unrelenting," he acquiesced in conscription "as a matter of necessity."[27] So energetically did he work that North Carolina provided the Confederate armies with 7,000 more conscripts than any other state. This was not, under any circumstance, a free gift to the Confederacy for the governor demanded in return that the conscripts be allowed to join regiments of their choice.[28]

There were no controversies with Richmond authorities, however, when Vance devoted his efforts to the difficult task of returning deserters to the ranks; "instead the governor ran afoul of the decisions of a state Judge [R. M. Pearson] and found himself accused of trampling the judiciary underfoot."[29] This hurt Vance because in no other state was there so great a recourse to the courts on constitutional grounds as in North Carolina. A highly undemocratic population containing many lukewarm secessionists provided a "fertile soil for opposition to thrive."[30]

Although the Confederate Constitution provided for a Supreme Court and inferior Federal courts, none were ever established.[31] The highest courts in the land were the supreme courts of the states of the Confederacy. The absence of an appelate court in a Federal system made the influence of the state courts "of more than ordinary importance."[32] During the war years the North Carolina Supreme Court was presided over by three men —Richmond M. Pearson, William H. Battle and Matthias E. Manly. Chief Justice Pearson was a strong critic of Confederate policies whereas Battle and Manly both tended to uphold the validity of the Confederate laws "and interpret them in a light favorable to the cause of the South."[33]

The three judges heard cases both individually and as a formal body. Some cases cases went before them initially while others originated in hearings before judges in lower courts. Still others reached the high court on "writs of certiorari, a precedure which enabled the entire court to review a decision of an individual member of the Supreme Court rendered in chambers."[34] These decisions were of far reaching magnitude and were to be the basis for controversy between Governor Vance and both Chief Justice Pearson and Confederate authorities.

By the time Vance assumed the governorship, desertion of North Carolina troops from the Army of Northern Virginia had attained "a menacing aspect."[35] as a consequence the governor ordered the state militia to arrest Confederate deserters, only to have Judge Pearson rule that the state's chief executive officer had no authority to enforce Confederate laws.[36] This meant Vance could no longer use militiamen to round up deserters from North Carolina regiments. But in July, 1863, the general assembly overruled Pearson by giving the governor "the specific authority to arrest deserters from the Confederate armies." At the same time it abolished the militia and created the "Guard for Home Defense." Nevertheless, when Vance used this new body to arrest deserters, Pearson once again overruled him, stating that the legislative body had not given the governor that authority. Thus the General Assembly for the second time had to come to the aid of Vance. It gave him on this occasion full authority to employ the Home Guard to arrest deserters and recalcitrate conscripts.[37]

Disaffection in North Carolina certainly hampered the Confederacy at times, but seldom did it result in actual disloyalty. Two manifestations, though, did occur early in the war. After the capture of Forts Hatteras and Clark by Federal troops in the summer of 1861, the residents of several eastern counties established a "loyal" state government. In November a convention declared secession null and void in North Carolina and "elected" Marble Nash Taylor, a Methodist minister from Virginia, "governor". Charles H. Foster, a transplanted New Englander, was "elected" to Congress. Foster was refused his seat and soon the movement died for general lack of support. In 1862, with much of eastern North Carolina under Federal control, Lincoln appointed a former North Carolinian, Edward Stanly, military governor of the state. Even though Stanly tried to follow a relatively moderate course, his policies evoked little popular support either in the state or in Washington. He often disagreed with the Federal authorities in New Bern and did not hesitate to denounce the Federal troops for their "shameful pillaging and robbery." This "deplorable conduct" of the soldiers, together with Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, which Stanly thought would "spread desolation and sorrow over . . . [the] country", prompted the governor to resign his position in early '63. Thereafter no further effort was made to establish a "loyal" government in North Carolina until Reconstruction.[38]

Throughout most of the war, however, Vance was embarrassed by the Confederate policy of arresting North Carolina citizens who were suspected of being disloyal. Those arrested were usually taken to either Salisbury or Richmond where they were imprisoned without being charged and later released without being tried. This practice infuriated Vance even though a Confederate law of February 27, 1862, had authorized the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus under certain conditions. The governor considered the conduct of the Confederate officials " to be in defiance of North Carolina's civil law and violation of the rights of her citizens." He declared it was his duty to protect the rights of his people, especially their rights to a fair trial.

On occasions prisoners were released upon Vance's demands. Such was the case of the Reverend R. J. Graves who was arrested in the fall of 1862 on charges of disloyalty. Hearing that the unfortunate clergyman was imprisoned at Castle Thunder where "they donate have mutch mircy on a man," the governor wrote President Davis and demanded that the prisoner be returned to North Carolina. Secretary of War James A. Seddon to whom the letter was referred answered that Graves would be released to the governor immediately. This forced Vance to admit that he did not know "exactly what to do with him". Graves never stood trial even though he was thought to have given valuable information to the enemy.[39]

One of the most serious conflcts with the Confederate government over the legal rights of North Carolina citizens developed in the spring of 1863 when the Richmond administration began to ignore adverse decisions of state judges. The initial case concerned John W. Irwin who was arrested and placed in a camp of instruction after his substitute became liable to conscription by an extension of the military age. Irwin appealed to Judge Pearson for a writ of habeas corpus and was released, but Secretary Seddon ordered that the decision be ignored. Thus Irwin was arrested again by an enrolling officer. When Vance learned of this action, he complained bitterly to Seddon of this infringement on the legal rights of one of the state's citizens. The secretary replied that the state courts had no jurisdiction over the case. Still he acquiesced when the North Carolina Supreme Court affirmed Pearson's ruling that "a person, discharged after furnishing a substitute, could not be enrolled as a conscript."[40]

The controversy between Vance and Seddon, nevertheless, erupted again in early 1864 after the Confederate Congress had abolished substitution and made the principals of substitutes liable to service. In the Edward S. Walton Case Judge Pearson ruled that Congress had no right to violate the contracts made with principals of substitutes. As a result Walton was discharged. In similar cases, however, Judges Battle and Manly refused to issue the writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that Congress had suspended it. Ignoring the position of his colleagues on the bench with respect to the suspension of the writ,

Pearson continued to release principals. At the same time enrolling officers, paying no attention to Pearson's decision, continued to hustle their prisoners off to Raleigh. All of this put Vance in a quandary. He did not wish to deprive the Confederate army of badly needed replacements by protecting those released by Pearson. But, especially in an election year, neither could he allow the Confederate defiance of the state judiciary to go unchallenged. The governor therefore adopted a course of action which bought him political support but which was not likely to result in a serious clash between the two governments. Through letters and telegrams, later published for the enlightenment of voters, he loudly protested the usurpations of the military and threatened resistance to the enrolling officers. "If a man is discharged," he wrote Seddon, "I am bound to protect him, and if the process of the court is resisted I am forced by my oath of office to summon the military power of the state to enforce it." Fortunately for Vance the controversy was settled before he had to take any direct action against Confederate authorities. In June, 1864, the State Supreme Court, in a 2-1 decision, overruled Judge Pearson and upheld the constitutionality of the act conscripting the principals of substitutes. Even before the court acted, Secretary Seddon had sent word to Vance that no more men would be arrested who had been released by the chief justice.[41]

The execution of judicial decisions was but one way in which the governor attempted to maintain the civil law and the sovereignty of his state. Throughout his administration Vance inisted upon the right to exempt from military service all persons whom he considered to be necessary "to administer the affairs of state." The North Carolina delegation in the Confederate Congress at the governor's insistence worked successfully to get the exemption laws modified. By the latter part of 1864 the exemption list had been expanded to such a point that it even included workers in textile factories where the state had contracts for the manufacture of clothing.[42]

North Carolina was the only state in the South which clothed its troops and received Confederate commutation. This practice caused more than a little trouble between the Richmond authorities and the state. President Davis strongly believed that the limited resources of the Confederacy should be equitably administered by a central agency, but his efforts to annul the North Carolina agreement were in vain. Not only did the state government monopolize most of the output of the local mills, but it also sent purchasing agents into other states and imported through the blockade quantities of cloth and clothing beyond its needs.[43]

When the Confederate Congress passed acts in late 1863 and early '64 commandeering space on all blockade runners except those owned by a state,[44] Vance protested vigorously to both Davis and Seddon. He accused the Confederate government of hampering his efforts to clothe and equip North Carolina soldiers and supply the citizens with essential goods. In his opinion the regulations were "inquitous and absurd," making the port of Wilmington "more effectually blockaded from within than from without."[45]

The Confederate policy of impressing private property, however, was far more objectionable to most North Carolinians than the restrictions placed on blockade runners. This was especially true in the western part of the state where food was scarce. Vance denounced in particular the "illegal seizures" of food for horses and "other depredations of an outrageous character" by Confederate cavalry. Complaints arose that the soldiers were "frequently breaking open granaries, drinking . . . insulting citizens, and making them a terror to the whole population". It was enough, Vance confessed, "to breed a rebellion in a loyal country against the Confederacy". He threatened to call out the "militia and levy actual war against them". The general assembly backed the governor in his stand against impressment and demanded that the Confederacy "stop all illegal proceedings".[46]

Earlier the legislative body had attempted to increase the supply of food by prohibiting the distillation of grain and other products into whiskey.[47] It also sought to increase the supply of salt in the state. The convention in 1862 had provided for a salt commissioner who could purchase or lease land for works to manufacture salt and sell it to the people at cost. Later the general assembly passed a law relieving salt operatives from militia duty and requiring that they be exempt from the draft. A North Carolina law also allowed county justices of the peace to use tax money to keep an adequate supply of salt on hand. The states first commissioner, Dr. John M. Worth, was dissatisfied with this arrangement. He contended that his commission should be "returning money to the state treasury rather than receiving doles from that source."[48]

Certainly North Carolina's treasurer would not contest this point. State and local taxes were constantly being increased, as were the particularly burdensome Confederate levies. Of all the taxes the Confederate tax-in-kind "bore most heavily and was, consequently, the most unpopular". It was a tax of ten percent of the annual farm production above a specified exemption, which the producer had to deliver to the nearest railroad station.[49]

In view of the heavy tax burden shouldered by most North Carolinians it is not surprising that the general assembly was under tremendous pressure throughout the war to pass a stay law. "No state legislation . . . [in the South] was more persistently demanded by the masses and more viciously execrated by minority and conservative opinion than that staying debts." The North Carolina law was the subject "of more than ordinary controversy." Passed in 1861, it was declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court and repealed by a special session of the general assembly, only to be repassed later.[50]

While economic, military, and political matters received considerable attention from the legislators, the importance of maintaining, in so far as possible, normal social and cultural conditions in the state was not overlooked. Control of Negro labor and the continuation of the state's public schools were two questions which received major attention. It became a capital offense in North Carolina to circulate incendiary materials among the slaves. Neither could a free Negro buy or hire slaves, and in February, 1865, the general assembly resolved: "that the State of North Carolina protests against the arming of slaves by the Confederate government, in any emergency that can possibly arise, but gives its consent to their being taken and used as laborers in the pulbic service, upon just compensation being made."[51]

In its superintendent of education, Calvin H. Wiley, North Carolina had a stalwart champion of public education. Even so, early in the war both the convention and the general assembly attempted to divert funds away from public schools. Wiley countered these moves by a propaganda campaign calling for educational funds to remain intact and schools to keep their doors open. The superintendent, with the aid of Governor Vance, not only won his fight but saw in 1864 North Carolina school legislation take on new life. An act that year permitted any district in the state to establish a graded school[52]

In its attempts to control Negro labor, preserve the educational system and insure economic stability, the general assembly enacted programs which followed well defined objectives. "Laws sustaining soldier and civilian morale, on the other hand, usually grew out of economic or political or defense measures." It was "often incidental, sometimes accidental," when laws designed primarily for one purpose served to boost morale both on the battlefield and the homefront. State legislation providing aid for sick and wounded soldiers stemmed primarily from humanitarian motives, but these acts definitely enhanced morale among the soldiers.

On one occasion the general assembly "ordered the governor to send a surgeon to Virginia to purchase supplies for the sick and to establish a hospital." The legislators also set aside $300,000 to provide for the needs of North Carolina soldiers hospitalized in Virginia. And in 1864 the state's surgeon general was instructed by the law makers to work for the transfer of the North Carolina wounded to hospitals in the home state. These moves did not go unnoticed either by the soldiers or the civilians.[53]

A more direct effort to boost morale was revealed when the general assembly created a military roll of honor and at the same time assured the fighting man that the state would take care of his family.[51] Governor Vance, ever solicitious of the soldier's comfort, also wanted to relieve the unhappy plight of the people at home.

Early in his administration the governor struck at what he considered to be a primary cause of the suffering — "the activities of speculators who bought supplies of food and clothing and held them for a rise in prices." The general assembly gave him permission to place an embargo on food and clothing, and for nearly a year it was illegal to ship certain "necessities" from the state. But this failed to halt speculation. Vance was also unsuccessful in his efforts to relieve the labor shortage in the western counties by having Confederate authorities modify the conscript law.[55]

Even though the governor was unsuccesful in his attempts to relieve suffering by striking at the causes, he was able, with the help of the general assembly, to provide his people with some of the "necessities of life." Using money appropriated by the general assembly he purchased large qualities of food which he sold to the counties at cost. They in turn gave it to the wives and children of the soldiers. In addition over $6,000,000.00 was made available by the legislators for direct gifts to the poor. Each appropriation was allocated to the counties on the basis of their white population.[56]

Governor Vance's concern for the welfare of the poor had important political effects for both himself and the Confederacy. Above all it made him very popular with the great mass of people whose affection and votes made it easier for him to defeat the peace movement in 1864 and keep North Carolina in the Confederacy at the time when many of her citizens were getting "sick of the war". Impressment of property, tithing laws, and conscription made many people long for peace.

There had been murmerings of discontent as early as 1861, but this disaffection did not take on serious proportions until July of 1863. At this time W. W. Holden, editor of the Raleigh Standard, emerged as the leader of the discontented. He demanded that Davis open negotiations for peace. Resolutions adopted in numerous public meetings throughout the state that summer also urged an immediate end to the war.[57]

Fearful of the peace movement Vance not only denounced it strongly but also broke with Holden his erstwhile political ally. In an effort to check further the anti-war movement and placate the state the governor increased his criticism of unpopular Confederate policies, urged Davis to appoint a North Carolinian to the cabinet and to drive the Federals from the New Bern area. These moves, however, bore little fruit and on February 10, 1864, a peace meeting nominated Holden for governor.

The Vance-Holden gubernatorial contest of 1864 was a bitter one. The "peace" party criticized the Confederacy, demanded an end to the fighting and called for a convention, still without avowing any intention of having North Carolina negotiate a separate peace. Vance also desired peace and urged the Confederacy to negotiate with the Union over this matter. But he strongly denounced separate state action for settlement through a convention. He called for a united Southern front until independence was gained. Holden carried only two counties and received but 12,647 civilian votes to Vance's 44,856. The soldiers vote was even more one sided in favor of Vance. After this election there was no danger, if there ever had been, of North Carolina leaving the Confederacy.[58]

Holden's defeat, however, did not end Governor Vance's difficulties. The fall of Atlanta in September, 1864, and Lee's "desperate" condition before Petersburg seemed to spell doom for the Confederacy. This impression was heightened for most North Carolinians when Fort Fisher, guarding the mouth of the Cape Fear, was captured in January of the new year. Wilmington fell in February and the following month General W. T. Sherman, after applying total war to Georgia and South Carolina, entered the state. Fayetteville was occupied on March 11.

While Sherman's army was sweeping through South Carolina, a wave of despondency hit many North Carolinians. These residents abandoned themselves to despair. In an effort to cheer his people and get deserters back in the Army, Vance issued a vigorous proclamation asserting that victory was still possible and reminding everyone of the horrors of subjugation. Furthermore, the General Assembly resolved not to "abate one jot or title of her determination and zeal for a vigorous prosecution of the war to an honorable peace."[59]

Resolutions and proclamations alone could not stop the Federal army. After defeating J. E. Johnston at Bentonville (March 19-21), Sherman entered Goldsboro, his destination since beginning the Carolinas Campaign. He remained there until April 10th at which time he got his army underway for Raleigh. When Johnston, who was bivouached at neighboring Smithfield, learned of this move, he also put his small force in motion for the North Carolina capital.

During the evening of the 11th Sherman learned of Lee's surrender at Appomattox, and the next evening he was visited by peace commissioners William A. Graham and David L. Swain out of Raleigh. These two elderly gentlemen had been sent by Governor Vance to confer with the General about the peaceful occupation of the capital.

By this time Raleigh had been evacuated by the Confederate forces and General Johnston had reported to President Davis at Greensboro.[60] After considerable discussion Johnston, who knew his small force was no match for the enemy, gained Davis' permission to send Sherman a communication asking for a suspension of hostilities. This led to two meetings between the generals at the James Bennett home west of Durham. There on the 26th Sherman granted and Johnston accepted terms similar to those Lee had received at Appomattox.[61]

ed that the governor accompany him west of the Mississippi and there continue the war. Vance refused "to enter such a hopeless undertaking" and departed. At Greensboro he learned of Johnston's surrender and shortly afterwards issued his last war proclamation to the people of North Carolina. It urged "them to remain quietly at their homes, obey the laws and exert themselves to preserve order."[62] He then departed for Statesville to join his family. This left all governmental authority in the hands of Federal troops in the state.

On the 13th Vance was arrested by U. S. military officials and sent to Washington under guard. Although no formal charges were ever lodged against him, the governor remained in the Old Capitol prison until July 6, 1865, when he was paroled and allowed to return to North Carolina.

For the next few years political disabilities kept Vance a spectator at home. Scallawags and Carpetbaggers controlled the state government. As soon as he was pardoned, however, Vance reentered politics. In 1876 he became Governor of North Carolina and later United States Senator.

In his post-war political battles Vance was helped immeasurably by his record as "war governor." From 1862-65 he had endeared himself lastingly to the great mass of people in his native state. As early as 1863 many residents had turned to him for guidance. These were people who, for the most part, had lost confidence in the capacity of the General Assembly to solve the mounting war-time problems which were plaguing the homefront. The "untiring care and unstinted labor" Vance devoted to the particular problem of caring for the soldiers and their families, without question, won him many friends and was possibly the "crowning glory of his administraction."[63] Furthermore the governor's open criticism of unpopular Confederate policies, coupled with his unrelenting efforts in behalf of Southern independence, gained him additional support. Vance labored long and hard both for his state and the South. His name should never be found near the head of any list of causes for the defeat of the Confederacy. On the other hand it would be difficult to say the same for certain members of the legal profession. The constant struggle between the civil courts in the states of the South and Confederate military authorities proved "to be a major factor leading to a breakdown of military might and the ultimate surrender of the Confederate forces in April, 1865.

The judicial interpretations given to conscription and exemption laws by judges of the Superior and Supreme courts in North Carolina certainly "added to the confusion, discontent and choas which existed in the Confederacy" throughout much of the war. A changed attitude on the part of Judges Pearson, Manly and Battle in North Carolina and other state judges in the South "might have much to have helped maintain the spirit of unity and enthusiasm with which the citizens greeted news of secession and war in 1861. But speculation is futile," as pointed out by one authority, "facts stand; the legal system was one of many weak links in the Confederate chain and the outcome, disastrous for the South at the time, proved to be the salvation of citizens North and South as the years of the war passed into the background . . . ."[64]

[57]The peace movement caused hundreds of North Carolina troops to desert their posts. On the other hand some officers and men of the Confederate Army did not hesitate to take direct action against those advocating peace. On the night of September 9, 1863, soldiers belonging to H. L. Benning's Georgia brigade broke into the office of Holden's Standard and wrecked it. R. THE SECESSION CONVENTION

[1]The secession movement in North Carolina was unlike that in other southern states. Prior to the Presidential Election of 1860, only a few of the prominent political and public figures favored secession. Even after Lincoln was elected, the people of North Carolina rejected Governor Ellis's call for a convention by a vote of 47,323 to 46,677.[1a] At the same time the voters were deciding whether or not there would be a convention, they were also electing delegates to the convention should the vote support the governor's call. Examination of these voting results reveals that there was little chance of secession even if the convention had met. Of the one hundred twenty delegates elected, seventy-eight were either conditional or unconditional unionists and only forty-two were secessionists.[1b] Moreover, only thirty counties elected secessionists, while fifty-two elected unionists. Four counties elected divided delegations.[1c] The failure of North Carolina to approve the call for a convention was viewed by many northerners as the end of the secession movement.[1d] But by the end of February, seven of the lower south states had seceded and formed their own government—the Confederate States of America. It was only after the firing on Fort Sumter and Lincoln's call for troops that the remaining states seceded—North Carolina was the last.

Efforts to maintain the Union had failed. In North Carolina, the general assembly met in special session on May 1 to decide whether to call a convention. Governor Ellis, who had summoned the legislature, had no reservations that a bill approving a convention would be passed.[1e] Even those who were formerly unionists realized that secession was inevitable. After the failure of several amendments which would have required confirmation of any ordinance of convention by the people, the bill passed the House unanimously, and the Senate with only three dissenting votes.[1f] The bill provided for elections to be held on May 13 for one hundred twenty delegates to attend a convention which would meet in Raleigh May 20.[1g]

The Convention opened as scheduled on May 20, 1861 with a quorum of the members present. On the same day the delegates unanimously approved an Ordinance of Secession.[1h] As other delegates arrived, they affixed their names to the document. Shortly after approving secession, the convention voted to adopt the Constitution of the Confederate States—also unanimously.[1i] These two items of business were by no means the last of the convention. During the next year it served as the transition government as North Carolina moved from peace into war. Its jurisdiction transcended the authority of the general assembly and the Governor as is illustrated by the passing of an ordinance which not only changed the time for meeting of the general assembly, but also repealed and modified several laws passed by them; it also moved the date of Qualification for the governor from January 1, 1862 to September 2, 1861.[1j] One of its most important undertakings was the expanding and organizing of the state's military and economic system to meet the needs of the state as well as those of the Confederacy. Vacancies created by death or resignation of members of the convention were filled by issuing a new writ of election to the sheriff of the county in which the vacancy occurred. The writ was issued by the president of the convention upon notice of death or resignation. The work of the convention was largely responsible for the relative ease with which North Carolina adjusted to her new position.

The following list of convention members and officials and explanatory information are found in the Convention Journal, 1861-1862, Volumes I and II, located in the Office of the Secretary of State, Raleigh. Any material not found in these volumes is so noted.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

[54]The Washington Peace Conference of 1861 (also known as the "Border Slave State Convention") was called at the urging of the Virginia State Legislature "to bring back the Cotton States and thereby restore the Constitution and Union of the States."[54a] One hundred thirty-two delegates from twenty-one states (the seven states of the lower south who had already seceded did not attend) met at the Willard Hotel to discuss possible legislation, based on the Crittenden Compromise, which could be presented to the United States Congress and would be an acceptable solution to both the North and the South and avert civil war. Although a revised amendment to the United States Constitution was presented to Congress on February 27, it proved unacceptable to either faction and was defeated in the Senate by a vote of 28 to 7 on March 1; the House of Representatives refused to "entertain the recommendations of the Peace Convention."[54b] The North refused to compromise on "guarantees which the founding fathers had refused to give" and "considered secession a sin."[54c] The South felt that unless guarantees regarding slavery were made, the only alternative was secession.[54d] These arguments which had set the tempo of debate during the convention, rose again during debate on the Senate floor. The Convention of 1861 proved to be a failure, but did suceed in strengthening the feeling of unity among "Republicans and many Democrats in the defense of the Union."[54e]

THE PROVISIONAL CONGRESS

[57]The Provisional Congress of the Confederate States of America served as the transitional government of the Confederacy until the regular government under the new constitution began its work. At first only delegates from the seven states who had already seceded attended, but following the failure of the Washington Peace Convention, the firing on Fort Sumter, and the calling of troops by Lincoln, other states issued ordinances of secession and joined the Confederacy. During the first session the Constitution for the new government was written and a President elected. The remaining time was spent setting up the new government.[57a]

North Carolina signed her Ordinance of Secession on May 20, 1861 and one month later elected deputies to the Provisional Congress. There was much debate as to the number of deputies to elect; ten was finally decided upon because that was the number of congressional representatives the state had when it was still in the Union. Two "at large" deputies represented the two senators — the eight additional deputies were elected according to the congressional districts provided for in 1852.[57b] (See Map on page 390). These ten deputies took their seats in July, 1861[57c]

THE HALIFAX RESOLUTION[1]

The Select Committee taking into Consideration the usurpations and violences attempted and committed by the King and Parliament of Britain against America, and the further Measures to be taken for frustrating the same, and for the better defence of this province reported as follows, to wit,

It appears to your Committee that pursuant to the Plan concerted by the British Ministry for subjugating America, the King and Parliament of Great Britain have usurped a Power over the Persons and Properties of the People unlimited and uncontrouled; and disregarding their humble Petitions for Peace, Liberty and safety, have made divers Legislative Acts, denouncing War Famine and every Species of Calamity against the Continent in General. That British Fleets and Armies have been and still are daily employed in destroying the People and commiting the most horrid devastations on the Country. That Governors in different Colonies have declared Protection to Slaves who should imbrue their Hands in the Blood of their Masters. That the Ships belonging to America are declared prizes of War and many of them have been violently seized and confiscated in consequence of which multitudes of the people have been destroyed or from easy Circumstances reduced to the most Lamentable distress.

And whereas the moderation hitherto manifested by the United Colonies and their sincere desire to be reconciled to the mother Country on Constitutional Principles, have procured no mitigation of the aforesaid Wrongs and usurpations, and no hopes remain of obtaining redress by those Means alone which have been hitherto tried, Your Committee are of Opinion that the house should enter into the following Resolve to wit,

Resolved that the delegates for this Colony in the Continental Congress be impowered to concur with the delegates of the other Colonies in declaring Independency, and forming foreign Alliances, reserving to this Colony the Sole, and Exclusive right of forming a Constitution and Laws for this Colony, and of appointing delegates from time to time (under the direction of a general Representation thereof) to meet the delegates of the other Colonies for such purposes as shall be hereafter pointed out.

ACT OF SECESSION[2]

An Ordinance to dissolve the union between the State of North Carolina and the other States united with her, under the compact of Government entitled the Constitution of the United States.

We, the people of the State of North Carolina in Convention assembled, do decare and ordain, and it is hereby declared and ordained, that the ordinance adopted by the State of North Carolina, in the Convention of 1789, whereby the Constitution of the United States was ratified and adopted, and also, all acts and parts of acts of the General Assembly, ratifying and adopting amendments to the said Constitution, are hereby repealed, rescinded and abrogated.

We do further declare and ordain that the union now subsisting between the State of North Carolina and the other States, under the title of the United States of America, is hereby dissolved, and that the State of North Carolina is in the full possession and exercise of all those rights of sovereignity which belong and appertain to a free and independent State.

CONSTITUTION OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA[3]

We, the people of the Confederate States, each State acting in its sovereign and independent character, in order to form permanent federal government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity—invoking the favor and guidance of Almighty God—do ordain and establish this Constitution for the Confederate States of America.

Article I.

Section 1.

All legislative powers herein delegated, shall be vested in a Congress of the Confederate States which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section 2

1. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states; and the electors in each state shall be citizens of the Confederate States, and have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature; but no person of foreign birth, not a citizen of the Confederate States, shall be allowed to vote for any officer, civil or political, State or Federal.

2. No person shall be a Representative, who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, and be a citizen of the Confederate States and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

3. Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States, which may be included within this Confederacy, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all slaves. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the Confederate States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall, by law, direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every fifty thousand, but each state shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of South Carolina shall be entitled to choose six—the State of Georgia ten—the State of Alabama nine—the State of Florida two—the State of Mississippi seven—the State of Louisiana six, and the State of Texas six.

4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the Executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

5. The House of Representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers; and shall have the sole power of impeachment; except that any judicial or other federal officer, resident and acting solely within the limits of any state, may be impeached by a vote of two-thirds of both branches of the Legislature thereof.

Section 3

1. The Senate of the Confederate States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen for six years by the Legislature thereof, at the regular session next immediately preceding the commencement of the term of service; and each senator shall have one vote.

2. Immediately after they shall be assembled, in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year; and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year; so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any state the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

3. No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of thirty years, and be a citizen of the Confederate States; and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of the state for which he shall be chosen.

4. The Vice-President of the Confederate States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

5. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the Confederate States.

6. The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmative. When the President of the Confederate States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

7. Judgement in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit, under the Confederate States; but the party convicted shall, nevertheless, be liable and subject to indictment, trial judgment and punishment according to law.

Section 4.

1. The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the Legislature thereof, subject to the provisions of this Constitution; but the Congress may, at any time, by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the times and places of choosing Senators.

2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall, by law, appoint a different day.

Section 5.

1. Each House shall be the judge of elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

2. Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds of the whole number, expel a member.

3. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings and from time to time, publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question, shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

4. Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be in sitting.

Section 6.

1. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the Confederate States. They shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

2. No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the Confederate States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the Confederate States, shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office. But Congress may, by law, grant to the principal officer in each of the Executive Departments a seat upon the floor of either House, with the privilege of discussing any measures appertaining to his department.

1. All bills for raising revenue, shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

2. Every bill which shall have passed both Houses, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the Confederate States; if he approves, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it with his objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all such cases, the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress, by their adjournment, prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law. The President may approve any appropriation and disapprove any other appropriation in the same bill. In such case he shall, in signing the bill, designate the appropriations disapproved; and shall return a copy of such appropriations, with his objections, to the House in which the bill shall have originated; and the same proceedings shall then be had, as in case of other bills disapproved by the President.

3. Every order, resolution or vote, to which the concurrence of both Houses may be necessary, (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the Confederate States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him; or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of both Houses according to the rules and limitations prescribed in case of a bill.

Section 8.

The Congress shall have power—

1. To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, for revenue, necessary to pay the debts, provide for the common defence, and carry on the government of the Confederate States: but no bounties shall be granted from the treasury; nor shall any duties or taxes on importations from foreign nations be laid to promote or foster any branch of industry; and all duties, imposts, and excises, shall be uniform throughout the Confederate States:

2. To borrow money on the credit of the Confederate States:

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes; but neither this, nor any other clause contained in the Constitution, shall ever be construed to delegate the power to Congress to appropriate money for any internal improvement intended to facilitate commerce; except for the purpose of furnishing lights, beacons, and buoys, and other aids to navigation upon the coasts, and the improvements of harbors and the removing of obstructions in river navigation; in all which cases such duties shall be laid on the navigation facilitated thereby, as may be necessary to pay the costs and expenses thereof:

4. To establish uniform laws of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies, throughout the Confederate States; but no law of Congress shall discharge any debt contracted before the passage of the same:

5. To coin money, regulate the value thereof and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures:

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the Confederate States:

7. To establish post-offices and post routes; but the expenses of the Post-Office Department, after the first day of March in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and sixty-three, shall be paid out of its own revenues.

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries:

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court:

10. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations:

11. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning Captains on land and water.

12. To raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years:

13. To provide and maintain a navy:

14. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces:

15. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Confederate States, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions:

16. To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the Confederate States; reserving to the States, respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress.

17. To exercise exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of one or more states and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the government of the Confederate States; and to excercise like authority over all purchased by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards and other needful buildings; and

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the government of the Confederate States, or in any department or officer thereof.

Section 9.

1. The importation of negroes of the African race, from any foreign country, other than the slaveholding States or Territories of the United States of America, is hereby forbidden; and Congress is required to pass such laws as shall effectively prevent the same.

2. Congress shall also have power to prohibit the introduction of slaves from any state not a member of, or Territory not belonging to this Confederacy.

3. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

4. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law denying or impairing the right of property in negro slaves shall be passed.

5. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

6. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state, except by a vote of two-thirds of both Houses.

7. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another.

8. No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

9. Congress shall appropriate no money from the treasury except by a vote of two-thirds of both Houses, taken by yeas and nays, unless it be asked and estimated for by some one of the heads of Department, and submitted to Congress by the President, or for the purpose of paying its own expenses and contingincies; or for the payment of claims against the Confederate states, the justice of which shall have been judicially declared by a tribunal for the investigation of claims against the government, which it is hereby made the duty of Congress to establish.

10. All bills appropriating money shall specify in federal currency the exact amount of each appropriation and the purposes for which it is made; and Congress shall grant no extra agent or servant, after such Contract shall have been made or such service rendered.

11. No title of nobility shall be granted by the Confederate States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign state.

12. Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances.

13. A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

14. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, but in a manner to be presicribed by law.

15. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

16. No person shall be held to answer for a Capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of lifes limb; nor to be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

17. In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

18. In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars the right of trial by jury shall be preserved; and no fact so tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the Confederacy, than according to the rules of the common law.

19. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

20. Every law or resolution having the force of law, shall relate but to one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title.

Section 10.

1. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, or ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts; or grant any title of nobility.

2. No state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports, or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the Confederate States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of Congress.

3. No state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty or tonnage, except on sea-going vessels, for the improvement of its rivers and harbors navigated by the said vessels; but such duties shall not conflict with any treaties of the Confederate States with foreign nations; and any surplus revenue, thus divided shall after making such improvement, be paid into the common treasury. Nor shall any state keep troops or ships of war in time of peace; enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay. But when any river divided or flows through two or more states, they may enter into compacts with each other to improve the navigation thereof.

Article II.

Section 1.

1. The executive power shall be vested in a President of the Confederate States of America. He and the Vice-President shall hold their offices for the term of six years; but the President shall not be re-eligible. The President and Vice-President shall be elected as follows:

2. Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the state may be entitled in Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the Confederate States, shall be appointed an elector.

3. The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall made distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of the numbers of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the Confederate States, directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then, from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in case of the death, or other Constitutional disability of the President.

4. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

5. But no person Constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the Confederate States.

6. The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the Confederate States.

7. No person except a natural-born citizen of the Confederate States, or a citizen thereof at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, or a citizen thereof born in the United States prior to the 20th of December, 1860, shall be eligible to the office of President, neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the limits of the Confederate States, as they may exist at the time of his election.

8. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President; and the Congress may, by law, provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

9. The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected; and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the Confederate States, or any of them.

10. Before he enters on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

> "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the Confederate States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution thereof."

Section 2

1. The President shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the Confederate States, and of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the Confederate States; he may require the opinion, in writing of the principal officer in each of the Executive Departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective officers; and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the Confederate States, except in cases of impeachment.

2. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the Confederate States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may, by law, rest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of law or in the heads of Departments.

3. The principal officer in each of the Executive Departments, and all persons connected with the Diplomatic service, may be removed from office at the pleasure of the President. All other civil officers of the Executive Department may be removed at any time by the President, or other appointing power, when their services are unnecessary, or for dishonesty, incapacity, inefficiency, misconduct, or neglect of duty; and when so removed, the removal shall be reported to the Senate, together with the reasons therefore.

4. The President shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session; but no person rejected by the Senate shall be re-appointed to the same office during their ensuing recess.

Section 3.

1. The President shall, from time to time, give to the Congress information of the state of the Confederacy, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them; and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the Confederate States.

Section 4.

1. The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the Confederate States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeaners.

Article III.

Section 1.

1. The Judicial power of the Confederate States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such Inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and Inferior Courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

Section 2.

1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases arising under this Constitution, the laws of the Confederate States, and treaties made or which shall be made under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the Confederate States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizen of another state where the state is plaintiff; between citizens claiming lands under grants of different states; and between a state or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects; but no state shall be sued by a citizen or subject of any foreign state.

2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations, as the Congress shall make.

3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

1. Treason against the Confederate States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court.

2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attained.

Article IV.

Section 1

1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

Section 2.

1. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states, and shall have the right of transit and sojourner in any state of this Confederacy, with their slaves and other property; and the right of property in said slaves shall not be thereby inpaired.

2. A person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime against the laws of such state, who shall flee from thence, and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the Executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

3. No slave or other person held to service or labor in any state or territory of the Confederate States under the laws thereof, escaping or lawfully carried into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor; but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such slave belongs, or to whom such service or labor may be due.

Section 3

1. Other states may be admitted into this Confederacy by a vote of two-thirds of the whole House of Representatives, and two-thirds of the Senate, the Senate voting by states, but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the Legislatures of the states concerned as well as of the Congress.

2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations concerning the property of the Confederate States, including the lands thereof.

3. The Confederate States may acquire new territory; and Congress shall have power to legislate and provide governments for the inhabitants of all territory belonging to the Confederate States, lying without the limits of the several states; and may permit them, at such times, and in such manner as it may by law provide, to form states to be admitted into the Confederacy. In all such territory, the institution of Negro slavery as it now exists in the Confederate States, shall be recognized and protected by Congress, and by the territorial government: and the inhabitants of the several Confederate States and Territories, shall have the right to take to such territory any slaves lawfully held by them in any of the states or territories of the Confederate States.

4. The Confederate States shall guarantee to every state that now is or hereafter may become a member of this Confederacy, a Republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of Legislature (or of the Executive when the Legislature is not in Session) against domestic violence.

Article V.

Section 1.

1. Upon the demand of any three states, legally assembled in their several conventions, the Congress shall summon a convention of all the states, to take into consideration such amendments to the Constitution as the said states shall concur in suggesting at the time when the said demand is made; and should any of the proposed amendments to the Constitution be agreed on by the said convention—voting by states—and the same be ratified by the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, or by convention in two-thirds thereof—as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the general Convention—they shall from thenceforward form a part of this Constitution. But no state shall, without its consent, be deprived of its equal representation in the Senate.

Article VI.

1. The Government established by this constitution is the successor of the Provisional Government of the Confederate States of America, and all the laws passed by the latter shall continue in force until the same shall be repealed or modified; and all the officers appointed by the same shall remain in office until their successors are appointed and qualified, or the offices abolished.

2. All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the Confederate States under this Constitution as under the Provisional Government.

3. This Constitution, and the laws of the Confederate States, made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made under the authority of the Confederate States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

4. The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the Confederate States, and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under Confederate States.

5. The enumeration, in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people of the several states.

6. The powers not delegated to the Confederate States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people thereof.

Article VII.

1. The ratification of the conventions of five shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

2. When five states shall have ratified this Constitution, in the manner before specified, the Congress under the Provisional Constitution, shall prescribe the time for holding the election of President and Vice-President, and for the meeting of the Electoral College, and for couting the votes, and inaugurating the President. They shall, also, prescribe the time for holding the first election for members of Congress under this Constitution, and the time for assembling the same. Until the assembling of such Congress, the Congress under the Provisional Constitution shall continue to exercise the legislative powers granted them; not extending beyond the time limited by the Constitution of the Provisional Government.

PART III

ORGANIZATIONAL CHART OF NORTH CAROLINA STATE GOVERNMENT

Issued By

THAD EURE, Secretary of State

NOTES OF EXPLANATION

1. The General Assembly is divided into two houses—the Senate with 50 members elected from 27 districts and the House of Representatives with 120 members elected from 45 districts. The Lieutenant Governor is presiding officer of the Senate and is called the President of the Senate. The Speaker of the House is presiding officer in the House of Representatives.
2. Legislators are appointed to committees by the presiding officers of their respective house.
3. The President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House serve on the Legislative Services and Legislative Research Commissions. They also appoint 5 members each from their respective houses to serve on the Legislative Research Commission and 6 each to serve on the Legislative Services Commission. The Legislative Services Officers is appointed by the Legislative Services Commission and provides administrative support to the General Assembly.
4. The Governor and the other 9 elected officials of the Executive Branch form the Council of State. The heads—called "Secretaries"—of the other executive departments are appointed by the Governor and serve at his pleasure.
5. The State Board of Education serves as "head" of the Department of Public Education. 11 of its 14 members are appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the general assembly in joint session. The Lieutenant Governor, State Treasurer, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, who is secretary to the Board, are ex officio members. The Department itself is divided into two Departments—the Department of Public Instruction and the Department of Community Colleges. The Superintendent of Public Instruction heads the Department of Public Instruction and the President of Community Colleges heads the Department of Community Colleges.
6. The State Board of Elections is an autonomous agency whose members are appointed by the Governor. The Executive Director-Secretary is appointed by the board and with a supporting staff provides administrative services to the board and to the local boards of elections in the counties.
7. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court designates one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals as Chief Judge. The Chief Justice also designates one of District Court Judges in each district as Chief District Court Judge.
8. The Administrative Office of the Courts provides administrative and research assistance to all levels of the Judicial System.
9. North Carolina is divided into 30 Judicial Districts. Three (3) Districts—the 15th, 19th, and 27th—have been further divided into "A" and "B" for administrative purposes.
10. District Attorneys (and assistant DA's) serve as prosecuting officers at both the Superior and District Court levels. The Clerks of Court in each county also serve both courts.
11. Magistrates, 1 or more in each county, are appointed for two-year terms by the Senior Resident Superior Court Judge in each district from names submitted by the clerks of court in each county. They serve under the supervision of the Chief District Court Judge in their districts.

GENERAL NOTE: If a vacancy should occur in any elected office in State Government, the Governor is empowered under various sections in the Constitution to make temporary appointments to fill said vacancy until the next election for members of the General Assembly, provided the vacancy occurs 30 days prior to the election.

[1]The North Carolina Constitution of 1868 extended the term of office for governor from two years to four years, but prohibited him from seeking re-election for the following term. (Article III, Section 2)

[2]The efforts of the conservatives in keeping the Negroes away from the polls during the election of 1870 resulted in a substantial majority of the seats in the general assembly being won by conservative candidates. On December 9, 1870, a resolution of impeachment against Holden was introduced in the House of Representatives by Frederick N. Strudwick of Orange. In all, eight charges were brought against Governor Holden. The trial lasted from February 2, 1871 to March 23, 1871, and Holden was found guilty on six of the eight charges. He was immediately removed from office.

[3]Caldwell became governor following the removal of Holden from office and was elected governor in the general elections of 1872. He died in office July 11, 1874. Telegram to Brogden, July 12, 1874, Curtis H. Brogden, Letter Book 1874-1876, GLB 63, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 1, hereinafter cited as Brogden Letter Book, 1874-1876.

[5]Brogden became governor following the death of Caldwell.

[6]Vance was elected governor in 1876. On January 21, 1879 he was elected to the United States Senate by the general assembly and resigned as governor effective February 5, 1879. Vance to General Assembly, January —, 1879, Zebulon Vance, Letter Book 1877-1879, GLB 65, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 590-591, hereinafter cited as Vance Letter Book, 1877-1879.

[7]Jarvis became governor following the resignation of Vance, and was elected governor in the general elections of 1880.

[8]See footnote 7.

[9]Robinson was sworn in as governor on September 1, 1883 to act while Jarvis was out of the state. He served from September 1 through September 28. Jarvis to Robinson, September 1, 1883, Thomas J. Jarvis, Letter Book, 1879-1883, GLB 67, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 651, hereinafter cited as Jarvis Letter Book, 1879-1883.

[10]Fowle died on April 7, 1891. Crabtree, Governors, 108.

[11]Holt became governor following the death of Fowle.

[12]Umstead died on November 7, 1854. Crabtree, Governors, 133.

[13]Hodges became governor following the death of Umstead and was elected governor in the general elections of 1956.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNORS

[1]The office of Lieutenant Governor was created by the North Carolina Constitution of 1868. (Article III, Section 1).

[2]Caldwell became governor following the removal of Holden from office in 1870.

[3]Brogden became governor following the death of Caldwell.

[4]Jarvis became governor following the resignation of Vance.

[5]Robinson resigned from office on October 13, 1884. Robinson to Jarvis, October 13, 1884, Thomas J. Jarvis, Letter Book, 1883-1885, GLB 68, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 91, hereinafter cited as Jarvis Letter Book, 1883-1885.

[6]Holt became governor following the death of Fowle.

[7]Hodges became governor following the death of Umstead.

[8]Philpott died on August 18, 1961.

COUNCIL OF STATE

Secretary of State

[1]Menninger was elected in the general election in April, 1868 but declined to run for re-election in 1872. Records of the Secretary of State in the North Carolina Archives indicate that he was still serving in December, 1872. Election Returns, April 21, 22, 23, 1868, Judicial Districts, SS 916, Secretary of State Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Election Returns, April 21-23, 1868; Correspondence, 1870-1872, 1873-1876, SS 45, SS 46, Secretary of State Papers, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[2]Howerton was elected in the general elections in 1872 and declined to run for re-election in 1876.

[3]Engelhard was elected in the general elections in 1876 and served until his death on February 15, 1879.

[4]Manning was appointed by Governor Jarvis on February 15, 1879 to replace Engelhard; however, he declined to serve. Jarvis to Manning, February 15, 1879, and Manning to Jarvis, February 18, 1879, Jarvis Letter Book, 1879-1883, 13, 13-14.

[5]Saunders was appointed by Governor Jarvis on February 18, 1879 to replace Engelhard. He was elected to a full term in the general elections in 1880 and served following subsequent re-elections until his death on April 2, 1891. Jarvis to Saunders, February 18, 1879, Jarvis Letter Book, 1879-1883, 14; Samuel A. Ashe, Biographical History of North Carolina, IV, (Greensboro: Charles L. Van Noppen, 1906), 389.

[7]Coke was appointed by Governor Fowle on April 4, 1891 to replace Saunders. He was elected to a full term in the general elections in 1892 and served until his death on August 30, 1895. Fowle to Coke, April 4, 1891, Daniel G. Fowle, Letter Book, 1889-1891, GLB 74, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 189; News and Observer (Raleigh), August 31, 1895.

[8]See footnote 7.

[9]Cooke was appointed by Governor Carr on September 3, 1895 to replace Coke. He was defeated in the general elections in 1896 by Thomas. Elias Carr, Commissions of Notary Publics, Commissioners of Deeds, Justices of the Peace, Military Commissions, 1893-1897, GO 11, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 205, hereinafter cited as Carr Commission Book, 1893-1897.

[10]Thompson was elected in the general elections in 1896, but was defeated for re-election by Grimes in 1900.

[11]Grimes was elected in the general elections in 1900 and served following subsequent re-elections until his death on January 16, 1923.

[12]Everett was appointed by Governor Morrison on January 16, 1923 to replace Grimes. He was elected in the general elections in 1924 and served until his death on February 7, 1928. Appointment Book, 1909-1952, GO 170, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 46, hereinafter cited as Appointment Book, 1909-1952; News and Observer (Raleigh), February 8, 1928.

[14]Hartness was appointed by Governor McLean on February 13, 1928 to replace Everett. He was elected in the general elections in 1928, but declined to run in 1932. Appointment Book, 1909-1952.

[15]See footnote 14.

[16]Wade was elected in the general elections in 1932 and served until his resignation in November, 1936. (His letter of resignation could not be found.)

[17]Powell was appointed by Governor Ehringhaus on November 17, 1936 to replace Wade and resigned in December. (His letter of resignation could not be found.) Appointments to State Boards and Commissions, 1929-1937, GO 218, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 159, hereinafter cited as Governors Appointment Book, 1929-1937.

[18]Eure had been elected in the general elections in 1936 and was appointed by Governor Ehringhaus on December 21, 1936 to replace Powell. On January 7, 1937 he took office for his regular term and is still serving following subsequent re-elections. Governors Appointment Book, 1929-1937, 159.

[19]See footnote 18.

Auditor

[1]Adams was elected in the general elections in April, 1868. He was apparently defeated for re-election by Reilly in 1872. Election Returns, April 21-23, 1868.

[2]Reilly was elected in the general elections held in 1872; however, he was defeated for re-election in 1876.

[3]Love was elected in the general elections in 1876, but declined to run for re-election in 1880.

[4]Roberts was elected in the general elections in 1880. He was re-elected in 1884, but declined to run in 1888.

[5]Sandlin was elected in the general elections in 1888 and was defeated for re-election by Furman in 1892.

[6]Furman was elected in the general elections in 1892, but was defeated for re-election by Ayer in 1896.

[7]Ayer was elected in the general elections in 1896, but was defeated for re-election by Dixon in 1900.

[8]Dixon was elected in the general elections in 1900 and served following subsequent re-elections until his death on September 26, 1910. News and Observer (Raleigh), September 26, 1910.

[9]Benjamin F. Dixon, Jr. was appointed by Governor Kitchen on September 30, 1910 to replace his father, Benjamin F. Dixon, Sr. Appointment Book, 1909-1952, 5.

[10]Wood was elected in the general elections in 1910 to complete the senior Dixon's unexpired term. He was elected to a full term in 1912 and served following re-election in 1916 until 1920 when he declined to run again.

[11]Durham was elected in the general elections in 1920 and served following subsequent re-elections until 1936 when he declined to run for re-election.

[12]Pou was elected in the general elections in 1936 and served following subsequent re-elections until his death on February 9, 1947.

[13]Bridges was appointed by Governor Cherry on February 15, 1947 to replace Pou. He was elected in the general elections in 1948 and is still serving following subsequent re-elections. Appointments to State Boards and Commissions, 1937-1953, GO 219, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 36, hereinafter cited as Governors Appointment Book, 1937-1953.

[14]See footnote 13.

SUPERIOR COURT

[1]Under provisions of the 1868 Constitution, the state was divided into twelve judicial districts. All of the initial twelve judges were elected in April, 1868 with their terms depending on whether their district was classified as the first or second class district. Districts one, three, four, five, seven, and nine were first class districts with the terms expiring in 1872. Districts two, six, eight, ten, eleven and twelve were second class districts with terms expiring in 1876. As the court workload changed, the State underwent additional redistricting either by adding new districts or increasing the number of judges within a particular district. (The numbers in parentheses under the "District" heading represent changes which occurred while that judge was in office—such changes have also been noted in the footnotes. The last number represents the last change.)

[19]Hilliard was elected in the general elections to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Jones in 1871. He was commissioned by Governor Brogden on August 26, 1874, and took office on September 7; however, the right of Hilliard to hold office was challenged by William A. Moore who was already serving under a commission issued by the late Governor Caldwell. The question was decided by the State Supreme Court in favor of Moore, and Hilliard's election and commission declared void. [21]McKay was elected in the general elections in 1874. He was re-elected in 1882 and served until his death in November, 1885. (In 1878, the fourth district became the third district. Then in 1885, McKay was moved to the sixth district when the number of districts was expanded to twelve.)

[22]Kerr was elected in the general elections in 1874 and served until his death in September, 1879. (In 1878 the seventh district became the fifth).

[23]Wilson was elected in the general elections to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Starbuck in 1868. He was commissioned by Governor Brogden on August 22, 1874, and qualified the same day; however, the right of Wilson to hold office was challenged by John M. Cloud who was already serving under a commission issued by former Governor Holden. The question was taken to the State Supreme Court at its January term, 1875, and the court decided in favor of Cloud. Their decision was based on the ambiguity of the phrase "until the next election" which is found in temporary commissions issued by the governor when filling vacancies, and the fact that the judges of the Superior Court had been divided "by lot into two equal classes" with the second class—in which Cloud fell—not up for re-election until 1878. Therefore by implication "until the next election" was taken to mean until 1878 when the term for second class judges expired. Wilson's commission and election were voided. Governors Commission Book, 1841-1877; The People of the State of North Carolina, on the relation of John M. Cloud v. Thomas J. Wilson, 72 N. C. 155 (1875).

PART IV

North Carolina Miscellanea

THE EXECUTIVE RESIDENCES OF NORTH CAROLINA

North Carolina has not always provided an official home for its governors and their families. Prior to 1770, the chief executive lived wherever he chose at his own expense. It was not until 1776 that the general assembly authorized the construction of the first such residence; in 1770 the magnificent Governor's Palace in New Bern was occupied by Royal Governor William Tryon. "Tryon's Palace," as the building came to be known, was destined to serve as the formal residence of governors for only a short time. It was exposed to the threats of enemy forces during the American Revolution, and the palace was virtually abandoned. In 1798 a fire destroyed all but the west wing.

North Carolina's first legislators were traveling men. With no "fixed seat of government," early members of the general assembly traveled from plantation to plantation, town to town, until 1792, when a capital "city" was planned and laid out in the "hills of Wake" on Joel Lane's plantation. It was named in honor of the Elizabethan patron of early colonization, Sir Walter Raleigh. Shortly thereafter an act was passed by the legislature requiring the governor to reside at the permanent seat of government. Samuel Ashe of New Hanover was the first governor to come under this edict. He expressed his reaction emphatically: ". . . it was never supposed that a Man annually elected to the Chief Magistracy would commit such folly as to attempt the building of a House at the seat of Government in which he might for a time reside. . . ."

The committee of the general assembly to whom Ashe's letter was referred hastened to inform him that the law was enacted before he was elected governor and could be considered "as a condition under the incumbrance of which he accepted the appointment."

Despite the remonstrance to Ashe, the general assembly took steps to provide a dwelling for the chief executive. The State Treasurer was instructed to purchase or lease a suitable house and, in 1797, a plain, two-story frame building, painted white, and an office for the governor were provided on lot 131, the southwest corner of Fayetteville and Hargett streets.

This house proved helplessly inadequate. To remedy this situation, the general assembly, in 1813, appointed a committee to provide better facilities, and plans were made for the erection of a more suitable dwelling. A site was selected at the foot of Fayetteville Street facing the capitol. In 1816 the elaborate brick structure with white columned porticoes was completed and Governor William Miller became the first occupant of the "Governor's Palace."

In traditional ante-bellum fashion, the twenty succeeding governors resided in the Palace, as it was officially termed, and much of the history of the state centered there. General Lafayette was a visitor in 1825. Some sessions of the general assembly were held in the Palace following the burning of the Capitol in 1831. The last governor to occupy the Palace was Zebulon Baird Vance. Sherman and later federal occupants of the governor's palace, while they may have injured the pride of local citizens, did no serious damage to the building. But years of neglect and the structural inadequacy of the house from the very beginning made it unattractive to those governors coming into office in the years following the war. During the Reconstruction days, and until the present mansion was built, the chief executives resided in Raleigh living in rented houses, hotels or—during two administrations—in their own homes. From 1871 to 1891 the Yarborough House, a noted Raleigh hotel, served as the unofficial residence for several North Carolina governors.

Governor Vance, the last occupant of the Palace, was again in office in 1879. In that year he presented the report of a commission appointed two years previously by the legislature to investigate the possibilities of providing a suitable residence for the governor. The commission was also charged with the task of selling unused State land in and adjacent to the city of Raleigh. Proceeds from these sales were earmarked for the construction of a house and outbuildings suitable for the governor.

Meanwhile the matter of hiring an architect was investigated and David Paton naturally came to mind. Paton had established his reputation in North Carolina as the architect of the State Capitol. He was an associate of Ithiel Town of New York, the architect originally consulted in rebuilding the Capitol. By the 1880's, however, Paton was in his middle seventies and age and poor health made it necessary for him to decline the invitation to visit Raleigh to help select a location and plan a house for the governor.

The decision to build the present governor's mansion was made by the general assembly at the perseverance of Governor Thomas Jarvis. Under the governor's prompting the legislature approached the problem of providing adequate housing for the chief executive. A bill ratified in February, 1883, authorized construction of a house on Burke Square, provided for major furnishings, and required (upon its completion) the governor to occupy it. The governor and Council of State were directed to use convict labor and such materials as were "manufactured or prepared, either in whole or in part," at the penitentiary, when such a procedure seemed feasible. To finance the project, the governor was authorized to use money realized from the sale of State lands (1877) and was instructed to sell the old Palace and grounds. Expenditures were not to exceed the sum realized and an accurate accounting was demanded; a record of the money spent by the governor and council was to be entered on a journal and the auditor was instructed to check and file itemized accounts before issuing warrants for payment.

Two months after passage of the bill, the Council of State met with the governor. Jarvis was then instructed to advertise the Palace and grounds for immediate sale and to employ an architect to make sketches and specifications for the Council's consideration. Governor Jarvis accordingly wrote W. J. Hicks, architect and warden of the prison, suggesting a plan which called for construction of the house under exclusive direction of the penitentiary authorities and payment of a definite sum to that institution. The law provided that the council and the governor might call on the penitentiary for all the labor and material it could furnish "in whole or in part." Jarvis felt there might be some differences of opinion as to the meaning of the statement. He reasoned that with construction work then being done at the penitentiary, by using the same material and labor in building the mansion, a saving could be realized in buying in larger quantities. From a practical standpoint Jarvis thought the State would profit by having both projects under the same management, and experienced businessmen advised such a plan might save the State as much as twenty thousand dollars.

Samuel Sloan of Philadelphia and his assistant, Gustavus Adolphus Bauer, were chosen as architects. Sloan arrived in Raleigh on April 28, 1883, with his designs for the residence. These were declared "very artistic, representing an ornate building, in modern style, three stories in height, with the ample porches, hallways, and windows which every house built in this climate should have." On May 7 came the news that the designs submitted by Sloan had been accepted, with some modifications suggested by "able builders" of the city.

Officers at the penitentiary board making a report (1882-1884) declared the building handsome in design, constructed of the best material by the best workers, using pressed brick made at the prison and trimmed with North Carolina sandstone which, they felt, gave "a very happy relief to the external appearance." They also expressed satisfaction with the artistry and convenience of the house's interior and wished to enhance it further by using an "elaborate North Carolina hard-wood finish."

In another progress report, a year later, Jarvis gave the additional information that the stone was quarried in Anson County and most of the work in finishing it had been done by the convicts. He also favored an interior of North Carolina hardwood, including the ceiling, wainscotting, and woodwork of the halls and rooms of the first floor.

Dreams of a beautiful mansion for the governor were in danger of being lost as 1889 dawned. Money for its construction had run out. A meeting of the Council of State and the governor was called to discuss the question of beginning work on the house again and pushing it to completion. As a result of their discussion, the governor was given authority "to cause the sale of the property in Raleigh belonging to the fund, the sale of which was provided for by the recent legislature, and to appropriate the proceeds to the work of completing the mansion."

By the end of December, 1890, the house was nearly finished but Governor Daniel Fowle did not move in until after the new year. He was particularly anxious to occupy the house in view of the earlier attempts to abandon it as a residence for the governor.

As soon as the mansion was reported "erected," the Council of State announced the Board of Public Buildings and Grounds would have charge of its supervision. The board was to take over in December. But in November, before it was occupied, repair and preservation work had already begun with "certain exterior and interior painting" of the woodwork. Most of the accounts emphasize the deplorable condition of the "completed house. The plumbing was cheap and dirt was laid between the floor to deaden sound.

The third floor and basement were left unfinished. On the lot were stables for "horses driven to the governor's carriage" and other outhouses. A pump provided drinking water for the mansion and a little gas engine pumped water from the two cisterns in the basement to a tank on the top floor.

The earliest laws providing for the construction of a governor's residence, as well as most of the later planning, called for the purchase of furnishings. As the cost of construction mounted, only a small portion of money remained for furniture. Some purchases were made, however, before the house was finished and an appropriation of $1500 in 1891 made further purchases possible. Other furnishings were bought by the individual occupants during their stay in the mansion.

On moving in, Governor Fowle brought his own furniture to make up the deficit in the mansion, setting a precedent followed for many years before the house was adequately furnished. He filed a list of furnishings in the treasurer's office to avoid any confusion in the future as to who owned what.

Elias Carr was the first governor to live at the mansion for a full term (1893-1897) of four years. Like his predecessors he soon found the house in need of furnishings and repairs. Funds were allocated by the legislature in February for necessary furniture and for "completion and repairing the mansion." Two years later another appropriation was made for work on the grounds. Some time previously the attorney general had ruled that the mansion and grounds, as public property, were under the care of the Board of Public Buildings and Grounds and directly under the supervision of the keeper of the capitol.

As frequently seemed the case with new governors, Governor Bickett's residency began with an inspection of the mansion and recommendations in keeping with the needs found there. The superintendent of buildings and grounds made a detailed report in addition to the recommendations for improving the interior made by Architect James A. Salter and Mrs. Bickett. The repairs and improvements recommended for the exterior and surrounding grounds were extensive, amounting to nearly ten thousand dollars.

Shortly after Governor Daniel Russell came into office in 1897, the legislature appointed a committee to examine the mansion and see whether it needed any alterations. The committee reported that repairs were needed and a resolution was promptly introduced to provide the necessary money.

Mrs. Bickett wrote a letter to the joint committee on public buildings and grounds of the legislature and attached estimates given by Salter. Her plea received sufficient attention to merit the introduction of a bill for the requested repairs and renovations with the provision that these be made up to an expenditure of $65,000 out of any funds in the hands of the State Treasurer not otherwise appropriated." This optimistic bill, however, failed to pass and a substitute law was enacted in March, 1917, allowing $4,000 "to renovate, equip, and properly furnish the Governor's Mansion and improve the surrounding grounds." The succeeding legislature passed another act, allowing an expenditure of $2,000 annually for the years 1919 and 1920.

As preparations were made for Governor Angus W. McLean's residence in the mansion, previous renovations were considered inadequate by the incoming governor and citizens alike. Sentiment for abandoning the house was aroused once more; it was so obsolete and so uncomfortable, public opinion in Raleigh favored scrapping the building and providing the governor with a new house in one of the city's residential sections. Burke Square could then be used as a public park.

Secretary of State W. N. Everett halted the movement. Rather than do away with the mansion, he thought it should be repaired and furnished in such a way as to provide a comfortable dwelling. Thus, he and Governor McLean must be credited not only with saving the mansion but also with making it, for the first time, a house in keeping with the dignity of the governor and his office.

McLean's plans for renovating and refurnishing were based on information beyond that gained through casual observation and the complaints of his predecessors. Sometime earlier the legislature had passed a law requiring the State Board of Health to inspect all state institutions for sanitation, and the mansion, coming under this category, was inspected in February, 1925, shortly after McLean's inauguration.

The report from the Board of Health was startling. Inspection was made and ratings given on the same basis used in inspecting hotels: the mansion received "the very low rating of 71." The report added that the management of a hotel receiving such a rating would be subject to indictment. A further charge was made that the principal deductions in scoring were for uncleanliness.

Dr. W. S. Rankin, State Health Officer, after accompanying the sanitary engineer on his tour of inspection of the mansion, was so impressed with the necessity of making these improvements, he felt it his duty to bring the matter before the general assembly.

Secretary of State Everett had made his own examination and reported major repairs were needed for the sake of preservation. He suggested a sum not exceeding $50,000 for these repairs and new furnishings. Although this action was taken without McLean's knowledge, upon learning of it, he soon became active in seeking authority to begin the much-needed repairs.

When money became available a firm of architects, Atwood and Nash, were employed to carry out the renovations. H. Pier-Giavina, a "decorative artist" of Wilmington helped in the interior decorating. Renovation included painting throughout and modernizing of plumbing and electrical facilities.

In working out a scheme of decoration and deciding on furniture purchases, the services of Elizabeth Thompson, local interior decorator, and the experience of Mrs. McLean were employed. The first lady, whose efforts were bent toward the simple and substantial, was eminently fitted for the task by her own "excellent taste and wide observation." Cloak rooms and servants quarters were added to the basement and the previously unfinished third floor.

It was not until McLean's administration, in 1925, that the legislature made a specific appropriation for maintaining the governor's mansion. Previously, expenditures were made, as needed, out of the general fund.

The renovation undertaken by Governor McLean was not actually completed while he was in residence. This was particularly true of the furnishings. Governor-elect Gardner felt the home of the governor should preserve a uniform appearance regardless of the temporary occupant. He asked the Board of Public Buildings and Grounds to confer with the McLeans to determine what was needed and to make provisions for these needs before he came into office. McLean brought the matter to the attention of the board and a "Special Furniture and Equipment Account Available for Incoming Governor" was set up for this purpose.

The Gardners had not been in the mansion long before the legislature passed an act authorizing the State Highway Commission to build and maintain walkways and drives "within the Mansion Square . . .". Included in this project was a plan for a general landscaping of the mansion grounds.

For advice in landscaping, Thomas W. Sears, landscape architect of Philadelphia, was contacted. Blueprints were drawn and plans submitted. Mrs. Gardner's concern for landscaping the grounds led to further interest in the exterior appearance of the house and at their suggestion the outside woodwork was painted brown to blend with the sandstone and brick.

The master plan drawn by Elizabeth Thompson in 1925, at Governor McLean's request, provided a guide for succeeding residents and allowed some consistency in furnishings and decoration. Governors of the past few decades—Ehringhaus, Hoey, Broughton, Cherry, Scott, Umstead, Hodges, Sanford, Moore, and Scott—have witnessed further changes and improvements.

The feasibility of continuing to use the Mansion as both an official residence and as the domicile of the governor and his family during his term of office has come to the forefront in recent years. The massive structure for all its beauty and heritage has been questioned from a practical aspect. The 1971 General Assembly created "The Executive Residence Building Commission" to study the current needs of the Executive family and to make recommendations regarding the future use of the Mansion. The commission was composed of seven members, two appointed by Lieutenant Governor Pat Taylor—Mr. John Church and Mr. J. J. Harrington—from the membership of the Senate, two appointed by Speaker of the House Phil Godwin—Mr. Kenneth Royall and Mr. Dwight Quinn—from the membership of the House, and three appointed by Governor Bob Scott—Mr. Wayne Corpening, Mrs. Gladys Bullard, and Mr. Charles Bradshaw.[3] An advisory committee was also authorized to aid the Residence Commission on technical aspects.

The work of the Commission covered nearly two years of study, including periodic meetings and visits to other states to view mansions and residences "which they deemed most appropriate in design and suited to the needs of the Governor of North Carolina." Following these visits, and after hearing presentations from six architectural firms, recommendations were made to the Capital Building Authority, and the firm of Dodge and Beckwith was commissioned to draw up the plans and to make cost estimates for a new Executive Residence. The plans were accepted on October 5, 1972 and the cost estimate given to the governor and the Advisory Budget Commission on October 30, for inclusion in the 1973-1975 budget proposals to the general assembly.

Included in the report made to the 1973 General Assembly was an Addendum containing suggestions, made at the request of the commission, from Mr. Carroll Mann, then State Property Officer, regarding the renovation of the Mansion and the cost of such an undertaking. Also included in the Addendum were suggestions by the commission members for "modernizing and restoring the Executive Mansion," if it was kept as the Executive Residence. As a result of the Study Commission's report, the 1973 General Assembly appropriated $575,000 for renovation and alterations of the Executive Mansion.[7] Work began during the summer, 1973, and was completed in late 1974. The plans for the constructing of a new executive mansion have been dropped.

Since these initial renovations in 1973 and 1974, additional renovation and modernization work has been done to the Mansion to improve its energy efficiency and liveability.

THE NORTH CAROLINA STATE CAPITOL

The North Carolina State Capitol is one of the finest and best-preserved examples of a major civic building in the Greek Revival Style of architecture.

Prior to 1792, North Carolina legislators met in various towns throughout the state—Halifax, Hillsboro, and New Bern were the most frequent locations. Meetings were held in local plantation houses, court houses, or even in local churches—whatever was available; however, when the City of Raleigh was established as the permanent seat of government of North Carolina in 1792, a simple, two-story brick State House was built on Union Square. The State House was completed in 1796.

The State House was enlarged in 1820-24 by the architect William Nichols. A third floor and eastern and western wings were added to the building, and a domed rotunda was constructed at its center to house Antonio Canova's statue of President George Washington, acquired by the State in 1821. When the State House burned on June 21, 1831, the statue of Washington was damaged beyond repair.

The General Assembly of 1832-33 ordered that a new Capitol (as the present building has always been called) be built as an enlarged version of the old State House — that is, a cross-shaped building with a central, domed rotunda. The sum of $50,000 was appropriated, and a commission appointed to initiate the plan. The Commissioners for Rebuilding the Capitol first employed William Nichols, Jr., to help them prepare plans for the building. In August of 1833, Nichols was replaced by the distinguished New York architectural firm of Ithiel Town and Alexander Jackson Davis. They modified and greatly improved the earlier design, giving the Capitol essentially its present appearance and plan. David Paton (1801-82), an Edinburg-born architect who had worked for John Soane, the noted English architect, was hired in September, 1834, to superintend the construction of the Capitol. Paton replaced Town and Davis as the Commissioners' architect early in 1835. The Capitol was built under Paton's supervision except for the exterior stone walls, which were largely in place when he got to Raleigh. Paton made several modifications in the Town and Davis plans for the interior. He is responsible for the cantilevered or overhanging gallery at the second floor level of the rotunda, the groined masonry vaulting of the first floor office and corridor ceilings, and the interior arrangement of the east and west wings. After clearing away the rubbish of the old State House, excavations were made and a new foundation laid. On July 4, 1833, the corner stone was set in placed. Following this, work progressed more slowly, and the original appropriation soon exhausted. At the next session of the legislature, an additional appropriation of $75,000 was necessary.

Most of the architectural details — columns, mouldings, ornamental plasterwork, and the honeysuckle crown atop the dome, for example — were carefully patterned after features of particular ancient Greek temples: The exterior columns are Doric in style and modeled after those of the Parthenon, the House of Representatives Chamber follows the semicircular plan of a Greek theater and its architectural ornament is in the Corinthian style of the Tower of the Winds, and the Senate Chamber is decorated in the Ionic style of the Erechtheum. The only non-classical parts of the building are two large rooms on the third floor which were finished in the Gothic Style, then just beginning its rise to popularity in America.

The ornamental ironwork, chandeliers, hardware, and marble mantels of the Capitol came from Philadelphia, as did the men who executed all of the ornamental plasterwork.

The desks and chairs in the House and Senate Chambers were made by a Raleigh cabinetmaker, William Thompson.

The Capitol was completed in 1840 at a total cost, (including furnishings) of $532,682.34, or more than three times the yearly general income of the State at that time.

In plan, the Capitol is a cross-shaped building, centering on a domed rotunda where the wings join. It is 160 feet from north to south, 140 feet from east to west (including the porticoes), and stands 97½ feet from the base of the rotunda to the crown atop the dome. The exterior walls are built of gneiss (a form of granite). This stone was quarried in southeastern Raleigh and hauled to the site on the horse-drawn Experimental Rail Road, the first railway in North Carolina. The interior walls are of stone and brick. The massive, original wooden truss system still carried the roof.

The first floor contains eight offices in the north and south wings and smaller rooms in the east and west wings. (These offices originally housed all of the executive branch of state government — a total of six full-time officials in 1840.) The rotunda contains a duplicate original of Canova's statue of Washington, acquired in 1970. In niches around the rotunda are busts of three Governors and a United Stated Senator. Stairways in the east and west wings give access to the second floor, where the Senate and House Chambers and related offices are located. Rooms in the east and west wings, built as legislative committee rooms, have been converted to other uses. On the third floor are the galleries of the Senate and House Chambers, and in the east and west wings are the original State Supreme Court Chamber and State Library Room, both decorated in the Gothic Style. The domed, top-lit vestibules of those two rooms are especially noteworthy.

The Capitol housed all of state government until the 1880's. The Supreme Court moved to its own building in 1888. The General Assembly moved to the State Legislative Building (the State's first building erected exclusively for legislative use) in 1963. Today the only official occupant of the Capitol is the Secretary of State, although there are several other state officials who have offices there.

The Capitol probably has been less changed in appearance, inside and out, than any major American civic building of its era. The stonework, the ornamental plaster and ironwork, the furniture of the legislative chambers, and all but one of the marble mantels that the visitor sees today are original, not restorations or reproductions. Yet continuous and heavy use since 1840 has left its marks on the building, and to cope with them the Capitol currently is undergoing a careful rehabilitation. This work began in 1971 and is intended to preserve and enhance the architectural splendor and decorative beauty of the Capitol for future generations. The project included replacing the leaky copper roof, cleaning and sealing the exterior stone and repainting the rotunda in colors similar to those originally used. Repairs were also made to plasterwork damaged by roof leaks, obsolete wiring and plumbing, and to the heating and cooling systems in the upper floors to make them less conspicuous. Worn carpets and draperies have been replaced, and the rest of the interior painted according to the original color scheme.

THE CAPITOL*

I am the Capitol; upon my copper dome, I wear a crown. If it were gilded, it would flash a signal to the sun. This crown is more than decoration. It is a symbol of sovereignty.

When the sun is bright and the arch of heaven is clear, the greenish-blue of my dome is bold against the sky. But sometimes, when the sun is veiled, the grey of my dome appears to blend with infinity.

Between 1833 and 1840, I was constructed of stone quarried nearby, which time has mellowed. These stones were precision cut and nicely balanced. The traffic of human feet has worn some stones, and, occasionally, I have been roughly used. The edges of steps have been broken. But I am hale and hearty and will, of course, endure.

The Court, the Legislature and the Auditor have left me for more modern homes. It is rumored that others may go. However, I am assured I shall become a shrine. Now what is a shrine? No one seems to know, except they say it has something to do with memory and Glory.

I am complimented that many people are concerned about my condition. Questions have been raised. Let me assure one and all that I am solid and sound of body. My problems are mostly superficial.

My roof has leaked a bit, and inquiries should be made into the soundness of the timbers that undergird it. Also, at appropriate intervals, my electrical wiring should be carefully examined.

In fairness to the past, a sprinkler system was installed beneath my roof in 1939, and my exterior was cleaned effectively in 1952.

But it is well to have the Governor, the Council of State and others concerned about my future. It is good to know there are those who care—to have a flutter of interest in my behalf. Even the pigeons and squirrels are concerned!

Some time before the year is out, I am informed, we will dedicate, in an appropriate ceremony, the receipt from Italy of the figure of Washington carved in marble. It is meet and proper in anticipation of this event that I be cleaned, refurbished and made in every way presentable. Incidentally, my architect told me that in the original plans I was to have this statue. So, in a sense, I am unfinished until it is in place.

There are those who think I should be restored to my former splendor. The doctors of history suggest I should be arrayed in the mode of 1840. This, I suppose, has something to do with my ultimate status as a shrine.

I favor this restoration. But I doubt that such a project can be completely achieved. After all, in recent times, I have become a creature of modern conveniences, such as central heating, inside plumbing and electricity—all unavailable in 1840. Whatever is done, my comfort should be considered. Especially, I would like to have hot, as well as cold, running water!

In my bosom laws were made. Through the decades, I have heard the thunders of eloquence. I have been amused at the wit and tall tales of statesmen.

Today my halls are silent. People come and go and look at me and marvel at the stories of the past. They say I am a symbol of all that has been achieved within the borders of our State. So be it. I am a symbol.

THE LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

The need for larger quarters for legislators and their respective staffs, and the growth of services required by the legislative branch of government led the General Assembly of 1959 to appropriate funds and to create a Building Commission to construct a new building for the Legislature. The following statute creating this commission was ratified on June 12, 1959:

AN ACT TO CREATE A STATE LEGISLATIVE BUILDING COMMISSION AND TO PROVIDE FOR THE ERECTION OF A STATE LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

Section 1. There is hereby created the State Legislative Building Commission, which shall consist of two persons who have served in the State Senate, appointed by the President of the Senate; two persons who have served in the House of Representatives, appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and three persons appointed by the Governor. All members shall be appointed on July 1, 1959, or as soon thereafter as it practicable, and shall serve until the completion of the duties assigned to the Commission. Each vacancy occurring in the membership of the Commission shall be filled by appointment of the officer authorized to make the initial appointment to the place vacated, and each appointee to fill a vacancy shall have the same qualifications prescribed by this Act for the appointee whom he succeeds. The members of the Commission shall elect one of their number as Chairman.

Sec. 2. The State Legislative Building Commission shall have the following powers and duties:

(a) To acquire on behalf and in the name of the State a suitable site in the City of Raleigh for a State Legislative Building and related facilities and grounds.

(b) To employ architects to prepare plans for the State Legislative Building, to assist and advise the architects in the preparation of those plans, and to approve on behalf of the State all plans for the State Legislative Building. No plans shall be made or included for quarters for the Governor.

(c) To enter on behalf of the State into contracts for the purchase of all real property and interests therein, services, materials, furnishings, and equipment required in connection with the location, design, construction, furnishing, and equipping of the State Legislative Building.

(d) To supervise generally the location, construction, furnishing, and equipping of the State Legislative Building.

(e) To call upon the Department of Administration, the Attorney General, and any other State agency or officer for such assistance as the Commission may require in carrying out its duties.

(f) To appoint such advisory committees, composed of persons not members of the Commission, as the Commission deems necessary.

(g) To report to the General Assembly at each regular Session concerning action taken by the Commission during the previous biennium in carrying out the provisions of this Act, and to make such special reports as may be requested by the General Assembly or the Governor.

Sec. 3. Whenever the State Legislative Building Commission finds it necessary to acquire land, rights of way, or easements in order to carry out the purposes of this Act, and the Commission is unable to purchase the same from the owners at an agreed price, or is unable to obtain a good and sufficient title therefor by purchase from the owners, then the Commission may exercise the right of eminent domain and acquire any such lands, rights of way, or easements necessary for the aforesaid purpose by condemnation in the manner prescribed in Chapter 40 of the General Statutes. The provisions of G.S. 40-53 shall not apply to any proceeding had under this Act.

Sec. 4. All moneys expended by the State Legislative Building Commission, including the expenses of the Commission, shall be paid by the State Treasurer upon warrant drawn by the Chairman of the Commission, from funds appropriated by the General Assembly. The Governor and Council of State are authorized to advance to the Commission from the Contingency and Emergency Fund, and subject to repayment, such sums as may be required to meet the expenses of the Commission prior to the availability of funds appropriated for the use of the Commission.

Lieutenant Governor Luther E. Barnhardt, President of the Senate, appointed Archie K. Davis and Robert F. Morgan, who was elected Vice-chairman of the Commission; Speaker of the House Addison Hewlett appointed B. I. Satterfield and Thomas J. White, who was elected Chairman of the Commission; and Governor Hodges appointed A. E. Finley, Edwin Gill, and Oliver R. Rowe. In addition to these members, Paul A. Johnston, Director of the Department of Administration, was elected Executive Secretary. The Commission elected Frank B. Turner, State Property Officer as Executive Secretary upon the resignation of Mr. Johnston.

The Commission selected Edward Durell Stone of New York with John S. Holloway and Ralph B. Reeves, Jr., Associates of Raleigh as the architectural consultants.

After a thorough study by the Commission, a site for construction was selected—a 5½-acre area one block North of the Capitol. This site, encompassing two blocks, is bounded by Jones, Salisbury, Lane and Wilmington Streets. A section of Halifax Street between Jones and Lane was closed and made a part of the new site.

Bids on the new building were received in December, 1960, and construction began early the following year. The 1961 General Assembly appropriated an additional $1 million for furnishings and equipment. This brought the total appropriation to $5½ million or $1.24 for each citizen of North Carolina. (This figure based on the 1960 census.)

One of the consulting architects wrote the following description of the new building:

> The State Legislative Building, though not an imitation of historic classical styles, is classical in character. Rising from a 340 foot wide podium of North Carolina granite, the building proper is 242 feet square. The walls and the columns are of Vermont marble, the latter forming a colonnade encompassing the building and reaching 24 feet from the podium to the roof of the second floor.
> Inset in the south podium floor, at the main entrance, is a 28 foot diameter terrazzo mosaic of the Great Seal of the State. From the first floor main entrance (at Jones Street) the carpeted 22 foot wide main stair extends directly to the third floor and the public galleries of the Senate and House, the auditorium, the display area, and the roof gardens.
> The four garden courts are located at the corners of the building. These courts contain tropical plants, and three have pools, fountains, and hanging planters. The main floor areas of the courts are located in the first floor, and messanines overlook the courts from the second floor. The skylights which provide natural lighting are located within the roof gardens overhead. The courts provide access to committee rooms in the first floor, the legislative chambers in the second floor, and to members' offices in both floors.
> The Senate and House chambers, each 5,180 square feet in area, occupy the east and west wings of the second floor. Following the traditional relationship of the two chambers in the Capitol, the two spaces are divided by the rotunda; and when the main brass doors are open, the two presiding officers face one another. Each pair of brass doors weigh 1,500 pounds.
> The five pyramidal roofs covering the Senate and House chambers, the auditorium, the main stair, and the rotunda are sheathed with copper, as is the Capitol. The pyramidal shape of the roofs is visible in the pointed ceilings inside. The structural ribs form a coffered ceiling; and inside the coffered patterns, concentric patterns are outlined in gold. In each chamber, the distance from the floor to the peak of the ceiling is 45 feet.
> Chandeliers in the chambers and main stair are 8 feet in diameter and weigh 625 pounds each. The 12 foot diameter chandelier of the rotunda, like the others, is of brass, but its weight is 750 pounds.
> Because of the interior environment, the garden courts and rotunda have tropical plants and trees. Outside, however, the shrubs and trees are of an indigenous type. Among the trees in the grounds, on the roof areas are sugar maples, dogwoods, crabapples, magnolias, crepe myrtles, and pines.
> Throughout the building, the same color scheme is maintained: Walnut, white, gold, and red, with green foliage. In general, all wood is American walnut, metal is brass or other gold-colored material, carpets are red, and upholstery is gold or black.
> The enclosed area consists of 206,000 square feet of floor area with a volume of 3,210,000 cubic feet. Heating equipment provides over 7,000,000 B.T.U. per hour; and the cooling equipment has a capacity of 620 tons. For lighting, motors, and other electrical equipment, the building has a connected service load of over 2,000,000 watts.

On Friday, the twentieth of November, 1964, the formal dedication of the new legislative building was held. In attendance were representatives from the various branches of state government as well as other honored guests. The ceremony began with an invocation by Rabbi A. W. Schoen of the Beth Meyer Synagogue. This was followed by the playing of our national anthem and state song, and short speeches by the guest speakers: Edwin Gill, Marshall of the Ceremony and Treasurer of the State of North Carolina; H. Clifton Blue, Speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives; Luther H. Hodges, United States Secretary of Commerce and former Governor of North Carolina; Terry Sanford, governor of North Carolina; Dan K. Moore, the Governor-elect of North Carolina; Thomas J. White, Chairman of the State Legislative Building Commission; Edward Durell Stone, of the Architects of the Legislative Building; Emery B. Denny, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina; and T. Clarence Stone, President of the North Carolina Senate. The Right Reverend Richard H. Baker, Bishop of the Diocese of North Carolina delivered the prayer for the use of the building and Monsignor James E. McSweeney, Chancellor of the Diocese of Raleigh delivered the Benediction.

At the time of the formal dedication, the new building had already been in service for two sessions of the general assembly—the regular session of 1963 and a special session. Since those first sessions, five succeeding general assemblies have met within its walls and thousands of visitors have admired its architectural beauty and observed the legislative process being carried out.

> I feel that we are today dedicating more than a building. I feel we are dedicating a monument to good government in North Carolina. I feel we are dedicating a monument that honors our past, pays a fitting tribute to the spirit of the present, and expresses our confidence in and enthusiasm for the future.
> Yes, we are dedicating much more than a building today. We are dedicating more than a monument. Many of us are using this occasion to dedicate or rededicate ourselves to the progress of this State and to the service of its people.

These words spoken by the Honorable Dan K. Moore perhaps reflect the sentiments of most of those gathered for the dedication as well as those who use the building now or will use it in the future to serve the people of North Carolina.

THE STATE FLAG OF NORTH CAROLINA[1]

The flag is an emblem of antiquity and has commanded respect and reverence from practically all nations from the earliest times. History traces it to divine origin, the early peoples of the earth attributing to it strange, mysterious, and supernatural powers. Indeed, our first recorded references to the standard and the banner, of which our present flag is but a modified form, are from sacred rather than from secular sources. We are told that it was around the banner that the prophets of old rallied their armies and under which the hosts of Israel were led to war, believing, as they did, that it carried with it divine favor and protection.

Since that time all nations and all peoples have had their flags and emblems, though the ancient superstition regarding their divine merits and supernatural powers has disappeared from among civilized peoples. The flag now, the world over, possesses the same meaning and has a uniform significance to all nations wherever found. It stands as the symbol of strength and unity, representing the national spirit and patriotism of the people over whom it floats. In both lord and subject, the ruler and the ruled, it commands respect, inspires patriotism, and instills loyalty both in peace and war.

In this country we have a national flag which stands as the emblem of our strength and unity as a nation, a living representation of our national spirit and honor. In addition to our national flag, each of the states in the Union has a "state flag" symbolic of its own individuality and domestic ideals, which is expressive of some particular trait, or commemorative of some historical event, of the people over whom it floats. The flags of most of the states, however, consist of the coat of arms of that state upon a suitably colored field. It is said that the first state flag of North Carolina was built on this model, but so far as we can learn from the records the first legislation on this subject of establishing and recognizing a "state flag" was in the year 1861.

The constitutional convention of 1861, which passed the ordinance of secession, adopted what it termed a state flag. On May 20, 1861, the day the secession resolution was adopted, Col. John D. Whitford, a member of the convention from Craven County, introduced the following ordinance, which was referred to a select committee of seven.[2]

> Be it ordained, That the flag of this State shall be a blue field with a white V thereon, and a star, incircling which shall be the words "Surgit astrum, May 20th, 1775."[3]

Colonel Whitford was made chairman of the committee to which this ordinance was referred. The committee secured the aid and advice of William Jarl Browne, an artist of Raleigh. Browne[4] prepared and submitted a model to this committee. And this model was adopted by the convention of June 22, 1861. It will be observed that the Browne model, to be hereafter explained, was vastly different from the one originally proposed by Colonel Whitford. Here is the ordinance as it appears in the ordinances and resolutions passed by the convention:

AN ORDINANCE IN RELATION TO A STATE FLAG

> Be it ordained by this Convention, and it is hereby ordained by the authority of the same, That the Flag of North Carolina shall consist of a red field with a white star in the centre, and with the inscription, above the star, in a semi-circular form, of "May 20th, 1775," and below the star, in a semicircular form, of "May 20th, 1861." That there shall be two bars of equal width, and the length of the field shall be equal to the bar, the width of the field being equal to both bars: the first bar shall be blue, and the second shall be white; and the length of the flag shall be one-third more than its width. [Ratified the 22nd day of June, 1861.][5]

This state flag, adopted in 1861, is said to have been issued to North Carolina regiments of state troops during the summer of that year and was borne by them throughout the war, being the only flag, except the national and Confederate colors, used by the North Carolina troops during the Civil War. This flag existed until 1885, when the Legislature adopted a new model.

As just stated, the Legislature of 1885 adopted a new state flag. The bill, which was introduced by General Johnstone Jones on February 5, 1885, passed its final reading one month later after little or no debate. This act reads as follows:

AN ACT TO ESTABLISH A STATE FLAG

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

SECTION 1. That the flag of North Carolina shall consist of a blue union, containing in the centre thereof a white star with the letter N. in gilt on the left and the letter C. in gilt on the right of said star, the circle containing the same to be one-third the width of the union.

SEC. 2. That the fly of the flag shall consist of two equally proportioned bars; the upper bar to be red, the lower bar to be white; that the length of the bars horizontally shall be equal to the perpendicular length of the union, and the total length of the flag shall be one-third more than its width.

SEC. 3. That above the star in the centre of the union there shall be a gilt scroll in semi-circular form, containing in black letters this inscription "May 20th, 1775," and that below the star there shall be a similar scroll containing in black letters the inscription: "April 12th, 1776."

SEC. 4. That this act shall take effect from and after its ratification.

In the General Assembly read three times and ratified this 9th day of March, A. D. 1885.[6]

Perhaps, it may be of interest to make a passing reference to the significance of the dates found on each flag. The first date, "May 20th, 1775," refers to the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, the authenticity of which we shall not here stop either to doubt or to defend. The second date appearing on the state flag of 1861 is that of "May 20th, 1861." This date commemorated the secession of the State from the Union; but as the cause of secession was defeated this date no longer represented anything after the Civil War. So when a new flag was adopted in 1885, this date was removed, and another, "April 12th, 1776," took its place. This date commemorates the adoption of the Halifax Resolves—a document that places the Old North State in the very front rank, both in point of time and in spirit, among those that demanded unconditional freedom and absolute independence from any foreigh power. This document stands out as one of the great landmarks in the annals of North Carolina history.

Since 1885 there has been no change in our state flag. For the most part, it has remained unknown and a stranger to the good people of our State. However, as we become more intelligent, and therefore, more patriotic and public spirited, the emblem of the Old North State will assume a station of greater prominence among our people. One hopeful sign of this increased interest was the act passed by the Legislature of 1907, requiring the state flag to be floated from all state institutions, public buildings, and courthouses. In addition to this, many public and private schools, fraternal orders, and other organizations now float the state flag. This is right. The people of the State should become acquainted with the emblem of that government to which they owe allegiance and from which they secure protection.

AN ACT TO PROMOTE LOYALTY AND GREATER RESPECT FOR THE SOVEREIGNTY OF THE STATE

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

SECTION 1. That for the purpose of promoting greater loyalty and respect to the state and inasmuch as a special act of the Legislature has adopted an emblem of our government known as the North Carolina

State flag, that it is meet and proper that it shall be given greater prominence.

SEC. 2. That the board of trustees or managers of the several state institutions and public buildings shall provide a North Carolina flag, of such dimensions and material as they may deem best, and the same shall be displayed from a staff upon the top of each and every such building at all times except during inclement weather, and upon the death of any state officer or any prominent citizen the flag shall be put at half-mast until the burial of such person shall have taken place.

SEC. 3. That the Board of County Commissioners of the several counties in this state shall likewise authorize the procuring of a North Carolina flag, to be displayed either on a staff upon the top, or draped behind the judge's stand, in each and every courthouse in the state, and that the state flag shall be displayed at each and every term of court held, and on such other public occasions as the Commissioners may deem proper.

SEC. 4. That no state flag shall be allowed in or over any building here mentioned that does not conform to section five thousand three hundred and twenty-one of the Revisal of one thousand nine hundred and five.[7]

SEC. 5. That his act shall be in force from and after its ratification.

In the General Assembly read three times, and ratified this the 9th day of March, A. D. 1907.[8]

THE STATE COLORS

(Session Laws, 1945, Chapter 878)

The General Assembly of 1945 declared "red" and "blue" of shades appearing in the North Carolina State Flag and the American Flag as the official State Colors.

THE HISTORY OF THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA[1]

In the colonial period North Carolina used successively four different seals. Since the colony became a state, five distinct seals have been used. The second charter granted by King Charles to the proprietors of Carolina, dated the 30th day of June in the seventeenth year of his reign, A.D. 1665, recited the fact that he had been "graciously pleased to grant unto . . . [the Lords Proprietors] . . . all that province, territory, or tract or ground, called Carolina, situate, lying and being within our dominions of America; extending from the north end of the island called Luke Island, which lieth in the southern Virginia seas, and within thirty-six degrees of north latitude; and to the west, as far as the south seas; and so respectively as far as the river of Matthias, which bordereth upon the coast of Florida, and within thirty-one degrees of northern latitude; and so west, in a direct line, as far as the south seas aforesaid."

The Proprietors thought it proper to adopt for this imperial domain a seal, of which no official description has been found, but which is to be seen in the British Public Record Office in London. The obverse side has a shield bearing on its face two cornucopias crossed, filled with products and having for supporters, on the sinister side, an Indian chief holding an arrow. On the dexter is an Indian squaw with a papoose by her side and one in her arms. These natives, I imagine, are supposed to be bringing tribute. The crest is a stag upon a wreath above a helmet from which there is a mantling. On the scroll below the shield is the motto, Domitus Cultoribus Orbis. Around the shield are the words Magnum Sigillum Carolinae Dominorum. On the reverse side is a disc bearing a cross, around which are arranged the coats-of-arms of the Lords Proprietors in the following order: Clarendon, Albemarle, Craven, John Berkeley, Cooper, Carteret, William Berkeley, and Colleton. The size of this seal was three and three-eighths inches in diameter, and it was made by placing together two wax cakes with tape between before being impressed. The impression after being made was about one-fourth inch thick. This seal was used on all official papers of the Lords Proprietors of Carolina, embracing both North Carolina and South Carolina.

Obverse Reverse

Seal of the Lords Proprietors of Carolina

About 1665 the government of Albermarle was organized and it adopted for a seal the reverse side of the seal of the Lords Proprietors. Between the coats-of-arms the word A-L-BE-M-A-R-L-E was fixed in capitals, beginning with the letter A between the arms of Clarendon and Albermarle, L between Albemarle and Craven, BE between the Craven arms and those of Lord John Berkeley, et cetera.

This was a small seal—one and seven-sixteenths inches in diameter, with one face only, and is now frequently to be found attached to colonial papers. It is generally impressed on red wax, but is occasionally seen impressed on a wafer which is stuck to the instrument with soft wax. It was first used for the government of the county of Albemarle, and then became the seal of the Province of North Carolina, being used until just after the purchase by the crown. During the troublous times of the Cary Rebellion the Albemarle seal was not used. In 1708 Cary used his family arms on a large seal to his official papers.

A fine specimen of this seal showing the Cary arms is preserved in the papers of the secretary of state located in the North Carolina Archives. During William Glover's presidency (1710) he used his private seal, and on one occasion he writes: "These papers ought to have come under the public seat, but that being forcibly detained in the hands of those who are the professed enemies of the Church as well as to all good order, it could not be produced on this occasion: . . ."

Seal of the Government of Albemarle and Province of North Carolina, 1665-1730

In 1720 Westmoreland and others composing the Board of Trade proposed to the Lords Justices ". . . that two great seals should forthwith be prepaired to be used in the two Provinces of South and North Carolina . . ." but I find no record of any action being taken upon this recommendation. On February 3, 1729/30, the Board of Trade recommended to the king that he order a public seal for the Province of North Carolina.

On February 21, 1719/30, his Majesty in council was pleased to approve the recommendations and ordered ". . . that a Publick Seal be prepared and given to the Governor of the said Province of North Carolina, And that the said Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations do cause a Draft of such Seal, to be prepared and laid before his Majesty at the Board, for his Royall Approbation."[7]

On March 25, 1730, The Board of Trade laid before his Majesty for his royal approbation a draft of a proposed seal for the Province of North Carolina ". . . whereon Liberty is represented introducing plenty to your Maj[esty] with this Motto Quae sera tamen respexit and this inscription around the circumference Sigillum Provinciae nostrae Carolinae Septentrionalis." The background on which the king and these figures stand is an outline map of the coastal region of North Carolina, and in the offing is to be seen a ship. "In the reverse of this seal we would humbly propose Your Maj[esty's] arms, Crown, Garter, Supporters & Motto with this inscription around the circumference, Geo. II. Dei Gratia Magnae Britaniae Franciae et Hiberniae Rex Fidei Defensor Brunsvici et Lunenbergi Dux Sacri Romani Imperii Archi Thesaurarius et Elector." On the 10th day of April, 1730, the king approved the above recommendations, except that it appears "Georgius Secondus" was to be substituted for "Geo.II.," and his chief engraver of seals was ordered to "engrave a silver Seal according to said draught . . . A certain Rollos, his Majesty's engraver, was ordered to prepare a draft of the seal. About this same time Rollos was preparing seals for New Jersey, Barbadoes, Jamaica, and Virginia.

Seal of the Province of North Carolina, 1730-1767

In 1730 the new seal of North Carolina was sent to Governor Burrington and the old seal ordered returned "to our commissioners of Trade and Plantations to be laid before us as usual in order to its being defaced in like manners with other Seals by us in our Privy Council."

There was some delay in receiving the new seal, for at a council held at Edenton, March 30, 1731, it was "Ordered that the old seal of the Colony be used till the new seal arrives." The latter part of April the seal came, and "The Messenger that went to Cape Fear to fetch the Publick Seal of this Province" was paid the sum of ten pounds for his journey.

This seal was made by placing two cakes or layers of wax together, between which was the ribbon or tape with which the instrument was interlaced and by which the seal was appended. It was customary to put a piece of paper on the outside of three cakes before they were impressed. The complete seal was four and three-eights inches in diameter and from one-half to five-eights inches thick and weighed about five and one-half ounces.

In 1736 Governor Johnston imagined that the seal of the late Lords Proprietors "might yet remain in the Province . . . and be privately affixed to those Quires of Blank Patents which you apprehend remain in the custody of some persons in your Province subscribed with the names of the Proprietors Council but not sealed" so an inquiry was made of Governor Burrington and of a certain Skelton, formerly secretary of the Lords Proprietors, to know what had been done with the old seal; whereupon Governor Burrington reported that on his arrival he took possession of the seal, keeping it in his custody until his Majesty's seal was sent to him, after which he had transmitted the Proprietor's seal to the Duke of Newcastle, one of the king's secretaries of state.[15]

In January, 1739/40, Governor Johnston was reproved for his failure to annex the Great Seal of the Province to acts transmitted to Whitehall.[16]

At a council held at New Bern, December 14, 1767, Governor Tryon produced to the Board a new Great Seal for the province with his Majesty's Royal Warrant bearing date at the Court of St. James the 9th day of July, 1767. The old seal was sent to New York by Captain [John Abraham] Collet, commander of Fort Johnston, to be returned to his Majesty's Council office at Whitehall. Accompanying his Majesty's warrant was a description of the new seal, which was engraved on the one side with the royal "Arms, Garter, Crown Supporters and Motto, and this inscription round the circumference Georgius, III, D:G: Mag, Bri, Fr, et Hib, Rex, T.B. Brun, et Sun, Dux, S.R.I., ar Thes. et El. on the other side our Royal Effigies; and Liberty represented introducing Plenty to us, with this Motto — Qua Sero Tamen Respexit — and this inscription round the circumference Sigillum, Provincae, Nostrea, Carolina, Septentrionalis." This seal was to be used in sealing all patents and grants of lands and all public instruments passed in the king's name for service within the province. It was four inches in diameter, one-half to five-eighths thick, and weighed four and one-half ounces. In 1767 "His Majesty in Council approved fourteen new seals for the following Islands and Provinces in America, viz: Jamaica, Barbadoes, Leeward Islands, Bahama Islands, Nova Scotia, Massachusetts Bay, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia." It is probable that the reverse of all these was the same and in some of them the obverse side had points of similarity.

It appears that sometimes a smaller seal than the Great Seal was used, as commissions and grants with a small heart-shaped seal about one inch wide and a quarter of an inch thick which was impressed with a crown have been used. Also a seal was occasionally used about three inches long and two inches wide and a half an inch thick, in the shape of an ellipse. These impressions were evidently made by putting the wax far enough under the edge of the Great Seal to take the impression of the crown. The royal governors also sometimes used their private seals on commissions and grants.

Lord Granville, on the grants issued by him, used his private seal. The last reference found to the colonial seal is in a letter from Governor Martin to the Earl of Hillsborough in November, 1771, in which he said "that the Province Seal was broke," but that he had had it repaired and that it had been "awkwardly mended but in such manner as to answer all purposes."

When the government of the State of North Carolina was organized, the constitution adopted at Halifax, December 18, 1776, provided in Section XVII, "That there shall be a Seal of this State, which shall be kept by the Governor, and used by him as occasion may require; and shall be called the Great Seal of the State of North Carolina, and be affixed to all grants and commissions.' The Constitutional Convention of 1835 brought this section forward unchanged.

The convention of 1868 adopted a new constitution, and the convention of 1875 brought the section referring to the seal forward as adopted in 1868. Article III, Section 16 of the constitution reads: "There shall be a seal of the State, which shall be kept by the Governor, and used by him, as occasion may require, and shall be called 'The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina.' All grants and commissions shall be issued in the name and by the authority of the State of North Carolina, sealed with 'The Great Seal of the State,' signed by the Governor and countersigned by the Secretary of State."

On December 22, 1776, an ordinance was passed by the Provincial Congress at Halifax appointing William Hooper, Joseph Hewes, and Thomas Burke commissioners to procure a Great Seal for the State of North Carolina, but no record of a report being made by this commission could be found. The ordinance provided that the governor should use his "private seal at arms" until the Great Seal was procured. On April 29, 1778, a bill which directed the procurement of a Great Seal for the state and which became a law on May 2, was introduced in the lower house of the general assembly held in New Bern. It provided "that William Tisdale, Esq., be and he is hereby appointed to cut and engrave a Seal, under the Direction of his Excellency the Governor, for the use of the State; . . ." On Sunday, November 7, 1779 the senate concurred in a resolution passed by the house of Commons allowing William Tisdale, Esq., the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds for making the Great Seal of the state. Under this act a seal was procured which was used until 1794. The actual size of this seal was three inches in diameter and one-fourth inch thick. It was made by putting two cakes of wax together with paper wafers on the outside and pressing them between the dies, thus forming the obverse and reverse sides of this seal. The seal press must have been very large and unwieldy, for Governor Richard Dobbs Spaight in writing to Colonel Abisha Thomas in February, 1793, said: "Let the screws by which the impression is to be made be as portable as possible so as it may be adapted to our present itinerant government. The one now in use by which the Great Seal is at present made is so large and unwieldy as to be carried only in a cart or wagon and of course has become stationary at the Secretary's office which makes it very inconvenient." Governor Spaight in January, 1793, in writing of the Tisdale seal then in use says: "this old Seal is not only nearly worn out but in my opinion has been always a reproach to the genius of the State." An official description of this seal cannot be found, but many of the seals are still in existence in an almost perfect state of preservation. Of this seal Colonel W.L. Saunders writes, "It had two faces or sides and made its impression upon a cake of beeswax covered with paper, three inches in diameter and new a quarter inch thick, and was the last State seal so made, the succeeding ones having one face only and being applied diretly to the paper-writing to be sealed. This indeed had come to be the practice on ordinary occasions years before. Governor Tryon states in one of his dispatches that since 1750, at the request of the inhabitants living remote from the Secretary's office, paper had been substituted for parchment for grants of land and impressions on the faces of the grants for the heavy pendant wax seals. The bulk and weight of the grants to be sent out, if of parchment with pendant wax seals, caused great 'inconveniencey and expense' in delivery to remote settlers. Whereas if of paper with seals impressed thereon 'one or two horsemen could take up to them all the grants issued at a court of claims.' It had been found from experience too, he said, in this climate, that parchment was more liable to destruction by insects and little vermin than paper."

> On one side is the figure of Minerva or Liberty holding in the right hand the pole with cap and in the left hand with arm extended is held a large scroll on which appears in large capital letters the word "Constitution." Under the figure appear the words, In legibus salus. Around the circumference are the words, The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina. On the other side of the shield is the figure of a woman, probably Plenty. The right arm is folded across her breast and in her right hand inclining toward her shoulder is held a distaff. In the left hand with arm extended is held an ear of corn. In the distance under a tree a cow browses. Under these figures appear the word and letters Independence—MDCCLXXVI. Around the circumference appear the words O. Fortunatos, Nimium, Sua. Si. Bona. Norint. Colonos., which may be translated, How fortunate are the colonists who know their own good.

Seal of the State of North Carolina, 1779-1794

In January, 1792, the general assembly in session at New Bern passed an act authorizing and requiring the governor to procure for the state a seal, and provided that it should "be prepared with one side only, and calculated to make the impression on the face of such grant, commission, record or other public acts, . . ."[28] Governor Alexander Martin commissioned Colonel Abisha Thomas, the agent of North Carolina in Philadelphia for the settlement of the state's Revolutionary claims against the Federal government, to have one made and, at the same time sent him a design therefor.[29]After correspondence between Governor Martin and Colonel Thomas concerning the seal, in which suggestions were made by Dr. Hugh Williamson and Senator Samuel Johnston, who were attending Congress in Philadelphia at that time, they concluded that the design offered by Governor Martin would not do, and Colonel Thomas submitted a sketch by an artist. This sketch submitted by the artist to Governor Martin is as follows: "The figures are Minerva in the act of introducing Ceres with her horn of plenty to Liberty who is seated on a pedestal holding in her right hand a book on which is inscribed the word 'Constitution' in the background are introduced a pyramid, denoting strength and durability; and a pine tree which relates immediately to the produce of the State. . . ." [30]

This sketch, omitting Minerva and with other changes, was finally accepted by Governor Spaight, and Colonel Thomas had the seal made accordingly. The seal was cut some time in the summer of 1793, and Colonel Thomas brought it home with him in time for the meeting of the legislature in November, 1793, at which session it was "approbated." The screw to the seal would not work, so in 1795 the general assembly passed an act authorizing the use of the old seal of 1778 until the new one could be put in order.[31]No official description of this seal has been found, but it was very much like the present one. It has two figures, Liberty and Plenty. Liberty is seated on a pedestal with her pole in her right hand, and her cap on the pole; in her left hand is a scroll with the word "Constitution" upon it. Plenty is standing to the left and front of Liberty; around her is a circlet of flowers; in her right hand, leaning against her shoulder, is her cornucopia, mouth upwards, overflowing with fruits and produce. In her left is an ear of corn. Around the circumference are the words "The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina."

This seal was two and one-half inches in diameter, slightly larger than the present one, and was used until about 1835.

The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina, 1794-1836

In the winter of 1834-35 the legislature passed an act authorizing the governor to procure a new seal. The preamble to the act states that the old seal had been in use since the first day of March, 1793?[32]The seal adopted in 1835, which was not changed until 1839, was very similar to its predecessor. On it Liberty and Plenty faced each other. Liberty was standing, her pole with cap on it in her left hand, and a scroll with the word "Constitution" inscribed thereon in her right hand. Plenty was sitting down, her right arm half extended towards Liberty, three heads of wheat in her right hand, and in her left the small end of her horn, the mouth of which was resting at her feet, and the contents of her horn rolling out. Around the circumference were the words "The Great Seal of the North Carolina." This seal was two and one-fourth inches in diameter. In 1868 the legislature authorized the governor to procure a Great Seal and required him to provide a new seal whenever the old one was lost or so worn or defaced as to render it unfit for use.

In 1883 Colonel S. McD. Tate introduced a bill in the legislature which became law. This act did not provide that a new seal be procured but it described in more detail what the seal should be like. The description taken from the act follows:

> The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina shall be two and one-quarter inches in diameter, and its design shall be a representation of the figures of Liberty and Plenty looking toward each other, but not more than half fronting each other, and otherwise disposed as follows: Liberty, the first figure, standing, her pole with cap on it in her left hand and a scroll with the word "Constitution" inscribed thereon in her righ hand. Plenty, the second figure, sitting down, her right arm half extended towards Liberty, three heads of wheat in her right hand, and in her left the small end of her horn, the mouth of which is resting at her feet, and the contents of the horn rolling out.

The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina 1836-1893

In 1893 Jacob Battle introduced a bill which became a law. This made no change in the seal except to add at the foot of the coat-of-arms of the state as a part thereof the motto Esse Quam Videri, and to provide that the words "May 20, 1775," be inscribed at the top of the coat-of-arms.

At this time the ship that appeared in the offing in the seals of George II and George III and in our seal from 1835 to 1893 seems to have disappeared, and the designer of the seal shows mountains in the background instead of both the mountains and the sea as formerly.

The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina as prescribed by the 1893 Act is described as follows:

> The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina is two and one-quarter inches in diameter, and its design is a representation of the figures of Liberty and Plenty, looking toward each other, but not more than half fronting each other, and otherwise disposed as follows: Liberty, the first figure, standing, her pole with cap on it in her left hand and a scroll with the word "Constitution" inscribed thereon in her righ hand; Plenty, the second figure, sitting down, her right arm half extended toward Liberty, three heads of wheat in her right hand, and in her left the small end of her horn, the mouth of which is resting at her feet, and the contents of her horn rolling out. At the top and above the coat-of-arms are the words "May 20, 1775." Around the circumference is the legend "The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina" and the motto Esse Quam Videri.

The Great Seal of the State North Carolina, 1893-1971

The preceding history illustrates the great liberty that was taken in the design of the official Great Seal. The 1971 General Assembly, in an effort to "Provide a Standard for the Great Seal of the State of North Carolina," passed an act amending the General Statutes relating to the State Seal:

> The Governor shall procure for the State a Seal, which shall be called the great seal of the State of North Carolina, and shall be two and one-quarter inches in diameter, and its design shall be a representation of the figures of Liberty and Plenty, looking toward each other, but not more than half-fronting each other and otherwise disposed as follows: Liberty, the first figure, standing, her pole with cap on it in her left hand and a scroll with the word "Constitution" inscribed thereon in her right hand. Plenty, the second figure, sitting down, her right arm half extended toward Liberty, three heads of grain in her right hand, and in her left, the small end of her horn, the mouth of which is resting at her feet, and the contents of the horn rolling out.
> The background on the seal shall contain a depiction of mountains running from left to right to the middle of the seal. A side view of a three-masted ship shall be located on the ocean and to the right of Plenty. The date "May 20, 1775" shall appear within the seal and across the top of the seal and the words "esse quam videri" shall appear at the bottom around the perimeter. No other words, figures or other embellishments shall appear on the seal.
> It shall be the duty of the Governor to file in the office of the Secretary of State an impression of the great seal, certified to under his hand and attested to by the Secretary of State, which impression so certified the Secretary of State shall carefully preserve among the records of this Office.

Today The Great Seal of the State of North Carolina is the official symbol of government and appears on every major document issued by our state. The governor as the chief executive retains the seal in his offices for official use.

The State Bird

By popular choice the Cardinal was selected for adoption as our State Bird as of March 4, 1943

This bird is sometimes called the Winter Redbird because it is most conspicuous in winter and is the only "redbird" present during that season. It is a year round resident of North Carolina and one of the most common of birds to be found in our gardens and thickets. It is about the size of a Catbird with a longer tail, red all over, except the throat and region around the bill is black; the head is conspicuously crested and the large stout bill is red; the female is much duller—the red being mostly confined to the crest, wings and tail. There are no seasonal changes in the plumage.

The Cardinal is a fine singer, and what is unusual among birds the female is said to sing as well as the male, which latter sex usually has a monopoly of that art in the feathered throngs.

The nest is rather an untidy affair built of weed stems, grass and similar materials in a low shrub, small tree or bunch of briars, usually not over four feet above the ground. The usual number of eggs to a set is three in this State, usually four further North. Possibly the Cardinal raises an extra brood down here to make up the difference, or possibly he can keep up his normal population more easily here through not having to face inclement winters of the colder North. A conspicuous bird faces more hazards.

The Cardinal is by nature a seed eater, but he does not dislike small fruits and insects.

The State Flower

(Public Laws, 1941, Chapter 289)

The General Assembly of 1941 designated the Dogwood as the State Flower.

The Dogwood is one of the most prevalent trees in our State and can be found in all parts of the State from the mountains to the coast. Its blossoms which appear in early spring and continue on into summer, are most often found in white, although shades of pink are not uncommon.

The State Insect

(Session Laws, 1973, Chapter 55)

The General Assembly of 1973 adopted the Honeybee as the official State Insect.

This industrious creature is responsible for the production of more than $2 million worth of honey in the state each year. However, its greatest value results from the pollination of North Carolina crops which is estimated to be worth nearly $50 million annually.

D. RAVER

The State Tree

(Session Laws, 1963, Chapter 41)

The General Asembly of 1963 officially adopted the pine tree as the State Tree.[8]

This choice was not unexpected as the pine is the most common of the trees found in North Carolina, as well as the most important one in the history of our State. During the Colonial and early Statehood periods, the pine was a vital part of the economy of North Carolina. From it came many of the "naval stores"—resin, turpentine, and timber—which was needed by merchants and the navy for their ships. It has continued to provide North Carolina with a supply of products.

The State Mammal

(Session Laws, 1969, Chapter 1209)

The General Assembly of 1969 adopted the Gray Squirrel as the official State Mammal.[9]

The gray squirrel is a common inhabitant of most areas of North Carolina from "the swamps of eastern North Carolina to the upland hardwood forests of the piedmont and western counties." He feels more at home in an "untouched wilderness" environment, although a large portion of their population inhabit our city parks and suburbs. During the fall and winter months the gray squirrel survives on a diet of hardwoods, with acorns providing carbohydrates and other nuts protein. In the spring and summer their diet consists of "new growth and fruits" supplemented by early corn, peanuts and insects.

D. RAVER

The State Shell
(Session Laws, 1965, Chapter 681)

The General Assembly of 1965 designated the Scotch Bonnet (Pronounced bo-nay) as the official State Shell.[10]

A colorful and beautifully shaped shell, the Scotch Bonnet is abundant in North Carolina coastal waters between 500 and 200 feet deep. The best source of live specimens is from offshore commercial fishermen.

The State Salt Water Fish
(Session Laws, 1971, Chapter 274)

The General Assembly of 1971 adopted the Channel Bass as the official State Saltwater Fish.[11]

Channel Bass usually occur in great supply along the Tar Heel coastal waters and have been found to weigh up to 75 pounds although most large ones average between 30 and 40 pounds.

Names and Nicknames of the State of North Carolina

In 1629 King Charles the First of England "erected into a Province" all the land from Albemarle Sound on the north to the St. John's River on the south, which he directed should be called Carolina. Carolina is from the word Carolus, Latin for Charles.

When Carolina was divided in 1710, the southern part was called South Carolina and the northern, or older, settlement, North Carolina, or the "Old North State." Historians have recorded the fact that the principal products of the State were "tar, pitch and turpentine." It was during one of the fiercest battles of the War between the States, so the story goes, that the column supporting the North Carolina troops was driven from the field. After the battle the North Carolinians, who had successfully fought it out alone were greeted from the passing derelict regiment with the question : "Any more tar down in the Old North State, boys?" Quick as a flash came the answer: "No; not a bit; old Jeff's bought it all up." Is that so; what is he going to do with it? "He is going to put it on you-uns heels to make you stick better in the next fight." R. B. Creechy relates that General Lee, hearing of the incident, said: "God bless the Tar Heel boys," and from that they took the name "Tarheels."

The State Precious Stone
(Session Laws, 1973, Chapter 136)

The General Assembly of 1973 designated the Emerald as the official State Precious Stone.

A greater variety of minerals, more than 300, have been found in North Carolina than in any other state.

These include some of the most valuable and unique gems in the world. The largest Emerald in North America (pictured below) is a 1,438-carat specimen found at Hiddenite, near Statesville. Also, the "Carolina Emerald," now owned by Tiffany & Company of New York was found at Hiddenite in 1970. When cut to 13.14 carats, the stone was valued at $100,000 and became the largest and finest cut emerald on this continent.

The State Motto

The General Assembly of 1893 adopted the words "Esse Quam Videri" as the State's motto and directed that these words with the date "20 May, 1775," should be placed with the State's coat of arms upon the Great Seal of the State of North Carolina.

The words "Esse Quam Videri"mean, when translated from the Latin, "to be rather than to seem." Nearly every state had adopted a motto, generally in Latin. The reason for using Latin rather than some other language is that Latin is far more condensed and terse than others. It requires just three words to express the State Motto in Latin whereas it takes six in English. It was taken from the works of Cicero, the Roman author and philosopher, in his essay on "Friendship."

The State Toast

The General Assembly of 1957 adopted the following as the official State Toast.

Here's to the land of the long leaf pine,
The summer land where the sun doth shine,
Where the weak grow strong and the strong grow great,
Here's to "Down Home," the Old North State!

Here's to the land of the cotton bloom white,
Where the scuppernong perfumes the breeze at night,
Where the soft southern moss and jessamine mate,
'Neath the murmuring of the Old North State.

Here's to the land where the galax grows,
Where the rhododendron's rosette glows,
Where soars Mount Mitchell's summit great,
In the "Land of the Sky," in the Old North State.

Here's to the land where maidens are fair,
Where friends are true and cold hearts rare,
The near land, the dear land whatever fate,
The blest land, the best land, the Old North State.

The State Song

(Public Laws, 1927, Chapter 26)

The General Assembly of 1927 adopted the following song known as "The Old North State," as the official State Song.

> This report of the Secretary of State on the Great Seal contains all the information which can be obtained on this subject. I have no doubt that it will be a surprise to many, as it was to me, that nowhere among the records of the Capitol can there be found a description of the Great Seal, or any report or law giving such description. The only evidence I have of the genuiness of the present seal is the fact that it is the one used by my predecessor and was turned over to me. This is a matter which there ought not to be any room for doubt, and I recommend that you take such action, as in your wisdom may be necessary to remove all room for doubt.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[1]The lack of a quorum of members and the confusion created by the organization of a new government under the Constitution prevented any business from being conducted.

[2]Randolph resigned on October 22, 1774. "Presidents of the Congress," Congressional Biographical Directory, 1774-1940, (Washington: Library of Congress, 1940), 37, hereinafter cited as Biographical Directory, 1774-1940.

[5]Delegates for the years 1774-1776 were appointed by the provincial congresses. The others were elected by the general assembly and commissioned by the governor. During the early years the delegates began serving within a few weeks or months after their election; however, in 1784, they were elected a year in advance of the time they were to begin—November 7 of the following year. All dates of election are from the "Journals of the Provincial Congresses" found in Saunders, Colonial Records, Vols. IX and X, or the original Journals of the House of Commons and Senate found in the Office of the Secretary of State, Raleigh.

[8]There is no evidence that commissions were ever issued following this election, possibly because all three delegates were already attending the Congress.

[10]Hooper, who was already attending the Congress when the new commission arrived, was given a leave of absence on February 4, 1777. Entry of February 4, 1777, Journals of the Continental Congress, 1774-1789, Vol. VII, 1777, edited by Worthington Chauncey Ford (Washington: Library of Congress, 1904-1937), 87; hereinafter cited as Journals of the Continental Congress.

[11]Hooper resigned on May 1, 1777. Hooper to Speaker of the House of Commons, May 1, 1977. House Journal, 1777, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[13]Nash declined to serve. House to Speaker of the Senate, April 27, 1778. Legislative Papers, LP 19, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[14]Williams resigned on January 31, 1779. Williams to General Assembly, January 31, 1779. Legislative Papers, LP 23, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

[15]Hewes died November 10, 1779 while still a member of Congress. First entry on November 10, 1779, Journals of the Continental Congress, Vol. XV, 1779, 1252.

[16]The Journals and the most of the records for the 1780 period are missing so that the date of election is not known; however, records which are available indicate that it was sometime in April. Commission to North Carolina Delegates, April 30, 1780, Record of Credentials, 1781-1789, Item 179, Roll 196, Record Books, Registers, and Indexes kept by the Secretary of Congress, 1775-1789, Papers of the Continental Congress, 1774-1789, M-247, Federal Records Center, East Point, Georgia, hereinafter cited as Credentials, 1781-1789, Papers of the Continental Congress, 1774-1789.

[17]No record of attendance.

[25]Osborne resigned in 1785.

[26]See footnote 17.

[27]Spaight resigned August 10, 1785. Spaight to Caswell, August 10, 1785, Richard Caswell, Letterbook, 1784-1787, GLB 6, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, 104.

[28]Cumming was elected to replace Spaight, but there is no record of his having attended Congress.

[29]White was elected to replace Osborne.

[30]See footnote 17.

[31]Johnston resigned on October 28, 1786. Johnston to Caswell, October 28, 1786, Caswell Letterbook, 1785-1787, 371-375.

[32]Macon resigned on January 24, 1787. Macon to Caswell, January 24, 1787, Caswell Letterbook, 1785-1787, 450.

[33]Nash died on December 2, 1786 before taking his seat. William Blount to Caswell, December 7, 1786, Caswell Letterbook, 1785-1787, 442.

[36]Ashe resigned on March 14, 1788. Council Minutes, March 18, 1788, Council Journal, Warrant Book, 1788-1792, GO 121, North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Raleigh, hereinafter cited as Council Journal, 1788-1792.

[37]Bloodworth resigned August 13, 1787, Bloodworth to Caswell, August 13, 1787, Caswell Letterbook, 1785-1787, 659.

[38]See footnote 17.

[39]Martin resigned on November 27, 1787.

[40]See footnote 17.

[41]Burton was elected to replace Bloodworth, but there is no record of his having attended Congress.

[44]See footnote 17.

[45]See footnote 17.

[46]See footnote 17.

[47]See footnote 17.

[48]Williamson was the only delegate to receive a commission.

[49]See footnote 17.

[50]There was no session of the Continental Congress held after March 2, 1789 due to the organization of a new government under the Constitution.

UNITED STATES CONGRESS

[1]North Carolina did not ratify the United States Constitution until November 21, 1789 and therefore was not represented during the First Session of Congress.

[2]Prior to the passage of the Seventeenth Amendment to the United States Constitution on May 31, 1913, United States Senators were elected by the legislatures of their respective states as prescribed by the United States Constitution. (See Article 1, Section 3, Paragraph 1.)

[5]Mebane was elected in the general elections in 1795, but died on July 5, 1795 prior to taking office, and a new election was ordered.

[7]Strudwick was elected to replace Tatum and took his seat on December 13, 1796. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 58.

[8]Impeachment proceedings were brought against Blount by the House of Representatives for "high crimes and misdemeanors," but the charges were dismissed by the Senate in a vote of 14 to 11. Alexander Martin and Timothy Bloodworth to Davie, January 17, 1799, Davie Letter Book, 1799, 12-14.

[9]Bryan died on June 4, 1798. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 61.

[10]Spaight was elected to replace Bryan and took his seat on November 10, 1798. Biographical Director, 1774-1971, 61.

[11]Macon was elected Speaker of the House on December 7, 1801. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 66.

[12]Stone resigned on January 25, 1801 following his election as United States Senator. Stone to Williams, January 25, 1801, Williams Letter Book, 1799-1802, 334.

[13]Johnson was elected to replace Stone and took his seat at the opening of the session. He died on July 23, 1802. Lemuel Sawyer to Williams, August 8, 1802, Williams Letter Book, 1799-1802, 654.

[16]Gillespie died on January 10, 1805; however a new election was not ordered. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 70.

[18]Stone resigned his seat on February 17, 1807. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 73.

[19]Turner was elected to replace Stokes and took his seat at the opening of the session.

[31]Evan S. Alexander was elected to replace Nathaniel Alexander and took his seat on February 24, 1806, Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 73.

[22]The election of Culpepper was contested by Duncan McFarland who charged there were voting irregularities. The House of Representatives passed a resolution on January 2, 1808 declaring the seat vacant, and a new election was ordered. Culpepper was re-elected and took his seat on February 23. [171]Taylor was elected to replace Hall on June 25, 1960 and took his seat on July 2. Hodges Appointment Book, 1957-1960, 38; Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 450.

[172]Johnson became President of the United States following the death of Kennedy on November 22, 1963. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 462.

[174]Jones was elected to replace Bonner and took his seat on February 10, 1966. Biographical Directory, 1774-1971, 468.

[176]Agnew resigned on October 10, 1973.

[177]Ford was appointed by President Nixon on October 13 to replace Agnew. His appointment was confirmed by the Congress on December 6, 1973 and took the oath of office the same day. When President Nixon resigned effective 12:00 Noon, August 9, 1974, Ford became President, taking the oath of office on that day.

[178]Ford appointed Rockefeller as his Vice-President when he became president.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

[1]Hewes, Hooper and Penn were representing North Carolina in the Continental Congress at the time the Declaration of Independence was signed — July 4, 1776.

PRESIDENTS

[3]The location of Jackson's birthplace had been a source of contention between North Carolina and South Carolina for some time. Most public records list South Carolina as his native state; however, at the time of his election he was a resident of Tennessee.

[4]Polk and Johnson were residents of Tennessee at the time of their respective elections. Johnson became president on April 15, 1865, following the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

[5]See footnote 4.

[6]See footnote 2.

VICE-PRESIDENTS

[7]King was resident of Alabama at the time of his election. He died April 18, 1853.

CABINET MEMBERS

[9]Thompson was a resident of Mississippi.

THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS

[12]The information in this section was compiled from executive records in Washington, D. C. and from "List of U.S. Diplomatic Officers, 1789-1939," M-586, 3 rolls, Federal Records Center, East Point, Georgia. (Unless stated otherwise, the date of separation is the date of resignation.)

[15]Martin died on August 26, 1848.

[16]Edney's first commission was revoked on February 16, 1853; a second was issued, but he failed to present his credentials.

[17]See footnote 15.

[18]Wheeler apparently declined to serve.

[19]Hopkins died in July, 1886.

[20]Smith died June 3, 1891.

[22]Gardner died on February 6, 1947.

THE FEDERAL COURTS

[1]The information in this section was compiled from records in the Administrative Office of the United States Courts in Washington, D.C. and from court records in the Federal Records Center in East Point, Georgia. (Unless stated otherwise, the date of separation is the date of resignation.)

Justices of the United States Supreme Court

[3]Moore was appointed by John Adams and resigned on January 26, 1804.

Judges of the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals

[4]Pritchard was appointed by President Roosevelt and served until his death on April 10, 1921.

[6]Bell was appointed by President Kennedy and served until his death on March 19, 1967.

[7]Craven was appointed by President Johnson and served until his death May 3, 1977.

Judges of the United States District Court in North Carolina

[9]Davie was appointed but there is no record that he ever served.

[11]Potter died on December 20, 1857.

[13]Brooks died on January 6, 1882.

[14]Seymore died on February 19, 1897.

[17]Boyd died on August 21, 1935.

[21]Butler died September 5, 1978; he had previously resigned as chief judge on August 2, 1975.

[22]Larkins resigned June 8, 1979.

DOCUMENTS

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

When, in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights; that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That, to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed,—That, whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundations on such principles, and organizing its powers in such forms, as to them shall seem likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature—a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the depository of their Public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining, in the meantime, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the Military independent of, and superior to, the Civil Power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation.

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from Punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

For transporting us beyond the Seas, to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally, the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercernaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and Perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens, taken Captive on the high Seas, to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every state of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free People.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our Brittish brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind—Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from All Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do.

And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Preamble

We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article I

SECTION 1—All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives.

SEC. 2—1. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

2. No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of the State in which he shall be chosen.

3. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose 3; Massachusetts, 8; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, 1; Connecticut, 5; New York, 6; New Jersey, 4; Pennsylvania, 8; Delaware, 1; Maryland, 6; Virginia, 10; North Carolina, 5; South Carolina, 5; and Georgia, 3.*

4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any State the Executive Authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

5. The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3—1. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.†

†See Article XVII, Amendments, 784.

2. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year; and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year, and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.†

3. No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

4. The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

5. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the office of the President of the United States.

6. The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

7. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment, according to law.

SEC. 4—1. The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof, but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SEC. 5—1. Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

2. Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

3. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

4. Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

SEC. 6—1. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either House they shall not be questioned in any other place.

2. No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

SEC. 7—1. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

2. Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approves, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent together with the objectives, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

3. Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SEC. 8. The Congress shall have power:

1. To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and exercises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

2. To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

4. To establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

5. To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standards of weights and measures;

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

7. To establish postoffices and postroads;

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court;

10. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations;

11. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

12. To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years;

13. To provide and maintain a navy;

14. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

15. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions;

16. To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the State respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

17. To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may be cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, became the seat of Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings;—and

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or any department or officer thereof.

SEC. 9—1. The migration or importation of such persons as any ofthe States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

3. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.*

5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.

6. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

7. No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

8. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state.

SEC. 10—1. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder; ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

2. No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imports, laid by any State on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

3. No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops, or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit delay.

Article II

SECTION 1—1. The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

2. Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.

3. The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and the number of votes for each;

*See Article XVI, Amendments, 784.
